
URICACIDÆMIA (Lat.), n. f. U²r(ur)-i²k-a²s(a³k)-i²d-em-(a³'e²m)-i³-a³. From οὖρον, urine, acidus, acid, and αἷμα, blood. Of von Jaksch, the presence of a recognizable amount of uric acid in the blood in consequence of the failure of the red blood-corpuscles to oxidize this acid. [α, 34.]

URICÆMIA (Lat.), n. f. U²r(ur)-i²s(i²k)-em'(a³'e²m)-i²-a³. From οὖρον, urine, and αἷμα, blood. Fr., uricémie. Of Flint, see LITHÆMIA.

URIDROSIS (Lat.), n. f. U²r(ur)-id(ed)-ros'i²s. Gen., -ros'eos (-is). From οὖρον, urine, and ἵδρωσις, a perspiring. Fr., uridrose. Ger., Harnschweiss, Harnschwitzen. A condition in which certain elements of the urine, especially urea, are excreted in the perspiration, sometimes in sufficient quantity to form a sensible deposit upon the skin. [G.]—U. crystallina. Fr., éphidrose sablonneuse. A condition in which saline constituents of the sweat, supposed to be derived from the urine, crystallize upon the skin, forming sand-like granules of a reddish or white color [Fuchs]; observed especially in uræmia connected with certain cases of cholera, scarlet fever, and renal calculus, in which a deposit consisting of crystals of urea forms upon the skin. [Schöttin, "Arch. f. physiol. Heilk.," xi, p. 73; Drasche, "Ztschr. d. Gesellsch. d. Aerzte zu Wien," xii.]

URILE, n. U²r'i²l. A radicle supposed by Morin to exist in urine. [B, 38 (α, 14).]

URILIC ACID, n. U²r-i²l'i²k. Fr., acide urilique. Ger., Urilsäure. Of Liebig, a hypothetical substance, $C_8N_2O_4$, which may be considered as oxalic acid in which the oxygen is replaced by cyanogen. [B, 48 (α, 14).]

URIN (Ger.), n. Ur-en'. See URINE.—U'abgang. See DIURESIS.—U'ablagerung, U'abscheidung, U'absonderung. The secretion of urine. [L, 80.]—U'beschwerden. Difficulty in urination.—U'drang. Vesical tenesmus.—U'lassen. See URINATION.—U'säure. See HIPPURIC ACID.—U'schau. See UROSCOPY.—U'treibend. See DIURETIC.—U'verhaltung. See Retention of urine.

URINA (Lat.), n. f. U²r(ur)-in(en)'a³. See URINE.—Acidum urinæ. Phosphoric acid. [B.]—Extractum saponaceum urinæ. Of Rouelle, urea. [B, 3.]—Spiritus salis urinæ. Ammonium carbonate. [B.]—Spiritus urinæ. Ger., Uringeist. An old name for aqueous ammonia. [B.]—U. araneosa. Urine loaded with cobweb-like filaments.—U. cibi, U. digestionis. Urine voided several hours after digestion. It contains more solids and has a higher specific gravity than at other times. [K.]—U. flammea. High-colored urine. [L, 128.]—U. galactodes. Urine of a milky appearance. [L, 50 (α, 14).]—U. genitalis. See SEMEN.—U. noctis. See U. sanguinis.—U. pericardii. See LIQUOR pericardii.—U. potus. Of G. Bird, urine of low specific gravity, which is passed soon after drinking freely. [K.]—U. sanguinis. Urine secreted after a night's rest, and hence not influenced by food or drink. [K.]—U. spastica. Urine secreted during or after spasms (of hysteria, asthma, etc.). It is generally abundant, clear, and limpid, the coloring matter, urea, and sodium chloride being deficient in quantity. [D, 35.]

URINACCELERATOR [Coues] (Lat.), n. m. U²r(ur)-i²n(en)-a²k(a³k)-se²l(ke²l)-e²r-at(a³t)'o²r. Gen., -or'is. From urina, urine, and accelerare, to hasten. See BULBO-CAVERNOSUS.

URINACULUM (Lat.), n. n. U²r(ur)-i²n(en)-a²k(a³k)'u²l(u⁴l)'-u³m(u⁴m). Dim. of urina, urine. 1. See URACHUS. 2. A urinal. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

URINÆMIA (Lat.), n. f. U²r(ur)-i²n(en)-em'(a³'e²m)-i²-a³. From urina, urine, and αἷμα, blood. Fr., urinémie. Poisoning by the retention of various urinary constituents (urea, creatin, creatinin, leucine, etc.) in the blood. It is to be distinguished from uræmia, which refers only to the retention of urea. Schöttin maintained that it was the cause of puerperal eclampsia. [A, 15.]

URINAL, n. U²r'i²-n'l. Gr., οὐροδοχεῖον, οὐροδόχη. Lat., urodochium. Fr., u., urinoir. Ger., Nachttopf, Pissoir. 1. A stationary receptacle for receiving urine. 2. A porcelain or metal vessel for receiving urine from patients confined to bed. 3. A rubber apparatus constantly worn to receive the urine in vesical incontinence. [α, 34.]—Spray u. A u. (1st def.) fitted with sprays of water from the top and sides of the receptacle to keep it clean. [α, 34.]—Vaginal u. A u. consisting of a beak to be introduced into the vagina and of a receptacle to hang between the thighs. ["Ctrlbl. f. Gyn.," Nov. 21, 1891, p. 937 (α, 50).]

URINALIS (Lat.), adj. U²r(ur)-i²n(en)-a(a³)'li²s. See URINARY; as a n., in the n. (urinale), a urinal. [L, 50 (α, 48).]

URINALYSIS (Lat.), n. f. U²r(ur)-i²n(en)-a²l(a³l)'i²s(u⁶s)-i²s. See URANALYSIS.

URINARY, adj. U²r'i²n-a-ri². Lat., urinosus, urinalis. Fr., urinaire. Pertaining to the urine. [K.]

URINATION, n. U²r-i²n-a'shu³n. Fr., u. Ger., Urinlassen, Harnlassen. The act of voiding urine. [K.]

URINE, n. U²r'i²n. Gr., οὖρον. Lat., urina. Fr., u. Ger., Harn, Urin. The excretion of the kidneys; normally an amber-colored, transparent fluid, having an acid reaction, a specific gravity varying from 1·010 to 1·030, a saline taste, and a faint odor. The latter is modified by food and drugs; the specific gravity, color, and reaction vary with the ingestion of food, the character and duration of the occupation, and the temperature. [α, 34.] See Plate IV.—Anæmic u. The u. in anæmia. [K.]—Aqueous u. See URINA potus.—Black u. U. containing melanin. [α, 34.]—Blue u. U. that deposited a sediment of deep-blue granules on standing. ["Lancet," ii, 1875, p. 144 (α, 34).]—Chylous u. Ger., Chylusharn, Milchharn. U. which is milky in appearance from the presence of fat. [D.]* Cf. CHYLURIA.—Coagulating u. See Fibrinous u.—Crude u. A clear watery u. which deposits no sediment. [K.]—Cyano u. See Blue u.—Cystinic u. U. which deposits cystine. [K.]—Definitive u. The portion of the u. secreted by the epithelium lining the convoluted portions of the uriniferous tubules. ["N. Y. Med. Jour.," Aug. 18, 1888, p. 169 (α, 50).]—Diabetic u. U. passed in diabetes (q. v.). [K.]—Dropsical u. A highly albuminous u. [K.]—Dyspeptic u. U. passed by a dyspeptic patient. It sometimes deposits an excess of calcium oxalate (see OXALURIA). [K.]—Elephant's u. See ELEPHANTINUS.—Febrile u. The high-colored, scanty, acid, and slightly albuminous u. passed during acute febrile affections. [K.]—Fibrinous u. U. containing fibrin, that may coagulate in the tubules, in the bladder, or after extrusion. [α, 34.]—Flocculent u. U. in which flocculent masses are suspended. [K.]—Gouty u. U. passed during or after an attack of gout. It is of small amount, is highly colored, and deposits uric acid in excess. [K.]—Hysterical u. See URINA spastica.—Mucilaginous u. U. abounding in mucus. [K.]—Nebulous u. Ger., Harnwolke. U. that is cloudy in consequence of a heavy deposit of the earthy phosphates. [α, 34.]—Nervous u. See URINA spastica.—Residual u. In prostatic hypertrophy or cystic disease, a small quantity of u. that remains in the bladder after all efforts to empty it. [α, 34.]—Rudimentary u. The liquid that comes through the thin walls of the Malpighian glomeruli. ["N. Y. Med. Jour.," Aug. 18, 1888, p. 169 (α, 50).]—Saccharine u. U. containing sugar, as in diabetes. [K.]—U. culte (Fr.). See URINA cibi.—U. de la boisson (Fr.). See URINA potus.—U. of digestion. See URINA cibi.

URINEAU (Fr.), n. U⁶-ro-no. A urinal to be worn on or applied to the person. [A, 81.]

URINIFEROUS, adj. U²r-i²n-i²f'e²r-u³s. Lat., uriniferus (from urina, urine, and ferre, to bear). Fr., urinifère. Ger., harntragend, harnführend. Producing and conveying the urine. [J.]

URINIPAROUS, adj. U²r-i²n-i²p'a²r-u³s. Lat., uriniparus (from urina, urine, and parere, to produce). Fr., urinipare. Urine-producing (said of the cortical portion of the uriniferous tubules). [J, 33.]

URINIREN (Ger.), n. Ur-en-er'e²n. Micturition.

URINO-GENITAL, adj. U²r-in-o-je²n'i²-t'l. See URO-GENITAL.

URINOLOGY, n. U²r-i²n-o²l'o-ji². From urina, urine, and λόγος, understanding. See Urology.

URINOMETER, n. U²r-i²n-o²m'e²t-u⁵r. See UROMETER.

URINOUS, adj. U²r'i²n-u³s. Lat., urinosus (from urina, urine). Fr., urineux. Ger., harnartig. Like urine. [K.]

URITIS (Lat.), n. f. U²r(ur)-i(e)'ti²s. From urere, to burn. 1. Inflammation due to a burn. 2. A flat bulla with ichorous contents. [G, 11.]—U. diurna. A disease in which red itching papules appear by day and are absent by night. [G, 11.] Cf. EPINYCTIS pruriginosa.—U. nocturna. See EPINYCTIS.

URN, n. U⁵rn. Lat., urna. Fr., urne. Ger., Urne. The sporangeium of mosses; also an ascidium (1st def.). [α, 35.]

URNIERE (Ger.), n. Ur'ner-e². See MESONEPHROS.—U'nsprosse. The rudiment of the primitive kidney of the embryo.

URNING, n. U⁵rn'i²n². A man or woman who has an aversion for the opposite sex, but obtains sexual gratification from contact or association with one of the same sex. [G.]

URO-AZOTIMÈTRE (Fr.), n. U⁶-ro-a³-zo-te-me²tr'. An instrument for the volumetric differential analysis of the nitrogenous constituents of urine by means of sodium hypobromite. ["Ann. des mal. des org. gén.-urin.," Feb., 1889, p. 85 (α, 50).]

UROBACILLUS (Lat.), n. m. U²r(ur)-o(o³)-ba²s(ba³k)-i²l'lu³s-(lu⁴s). From οὖρον, urine, and bacillus (q. v.). A bacillus obtained from decomposed urine. [Sternberg (α, 34).]—U. Duclauxi. Of Miquel, an aerobic and facultative anaerobic, motile, liquefying u. that grows in slender filaments in sewage or culture media containing ammonia or urea. [α, 34.]—U. Freudeneichi. A u. closely resembling U. Pasteuri, but forming longer chains and having more active movements. It is found in air, dust, sewer water, etc. [α, 34.]—U. Maddoxi. An aerobic, motile, liquefying, spore-forming u. that has round ends, is 1 μ thick and 3 μ to 6 μ long. It is relatively rare. [α, 34.]—U. Pasteuri. Of Miquel, an aerobic, liquefying, motile u. that forms spherical, usually solitary spores at one extremity of the rod. It grows in the form of short rods each made up of two to six urobacilli, in culture media containing urea, and its size varies with the media in which it grows. [α, 34.]—U. Schützenbergi. An aerobic, liquefying, motile, small oval bacillus, about 5 μ thick and 1 μ long, usually found in pairs. It is obtained from river and sewer water. [α, 34.]

UROBENZOIC ACID, n. U²r-o-be²nz-o'i²k. See HIPPURIC ACID.

UROBILIN, n. U²r-o-bil'in. Fr., urobiline. Ger., U. A derivative, $C_{32}H_{40}N_4O_7$, of bilirubin formed by the action of nascent hydrogen. It is the most important coloring matter in the urine; a dark amorphous powder, nearly insoluble in water, soluble in alcohol, in ether, and in chloroform. [α, 14, 34.]

UROBILINOIDIN, n. U²r-o-bil-in-oi²d'i²n. A reduction product of hæmatin, resembling urobilin, but not identical with it. It is readily converted into isohæmatoporphyrin and hexahydrohæmatoporphyrin. It occurs in the urine under certain pathological conditions. [C. A. Nobel, "Ctrlbl. f. d. med. Wissnsch.," Apr. 23, 1887, p. 305 (B).]

UROBILINURIA (Lat.), n. f. U²r(ur)-o(o³)-bil(bel)-i²n-u²r-(ur)'i²-a³. From urobilin (q. v.), and οὖρον, urine. Ger., Urobilinurie. The excretion of urobilin with the urine.

UROBUTYLCHLORALIC ACID, n. U²r-o-bu²-ti²l-klor-a²l'-i²k. A body, $C_{10}H_{16}Cl_3O_7$ (or $C_{10}H_{17}Cl_3O_7$), obtained from the urine after the ingestion of butyl chloral. [B.]

UROCANINIC ACID, n. U^{2}r-o-ka^{2}n-i^{2}n'i^{2}k. A substance, $C_6H_8N_2O_2 + 2H_2O$, presenting both acid and basic properties, obtained from dogs' urine. It occurs in long, flattened, colorless prisms or long needles. [B, 93 (α, 14).]

UROCELE (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-se(ka)'le(la); in Eng., u^{2}r'o-sel. Gen., -cel'es. From οὖρον, urine, and κήλη, a tumor. Fr., urocèle. Ger., Harnbruch. A tumor formed by the extravasation of urine. [E.]

UROCHERAS (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o^{2}k(o^{2}ch^2)'e^{2}r-a^{2}s(a^{3}s). Gen., -cher'ados (-adis). From οὖρον, urine, and χέραδος, gravel. Fr., urochéras. See GRAVEL.

UROCHESIA (Lat.), UROCHEZIA (Lat.), n's f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-kez(ch^{2}e^{2}s)'i^2-a^3, -kez(ch^{2}e^{2}z)'i^2-a^3. From οὖρον, urine, and χέζειν, to ease one's self. Fr., urochézie. The discharge of urine per anum. [L, 41, 50 (α, 14).]

UROCHROME, n. U^{2}r'o-krom. From οὖρον, urine, and χρῶμα, pigment. Fr., u. Ger., Urochrom. A yellow pigment described by Thudichum, who attributed the yellow color of normal urine to its presence; probably identical with hydrobilirubin. [B, 93 (α, 14); K.]

UROCLEPSIA (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-kle^{2}ps'i^2-a^3. From οὖρον, urine, and κλεψία, theft. Fr., uroclepsie. Unconscious micturition. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

UROCŒLIA (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-sel'(ko^2'e^{2}l)-i^2-a^3. From οὖρον, urine, and κοιλία, the belly. Fr., urocœlie. Ger., Harnbauch. Swelling of the abdomen due to infiltration of urine. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

UROCRISIA (Lat.), UROCRISIS (Lat.), n's f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-kru^{2}z(kri^{2}s)'i^2-a^3, -o^{2}k'ri^{2}s-i^{2}s. Gen., -cris'iæ, -cris'eos (-oc'risis). From οὖρον, urine, and κρίσις, a separating. Fr., urocrisie. Ger., Harnkrise. 1. A crisis which manifests itself in urination. 2. Examination of the urine, diagnosis by means of the urine. [A, 322 (α, 48).]

UROCYANIN, n. U^{2}r-o-si'a^{2}n-i^{2}n. See CYANURIN.

UROCYANOGEN, n. U^{2}r-o-si-a^{2}n'o-je^{2}n. From οὖρον, urine, κύανος, blue, and γεννᾶν, to produce. Fr., urocyanose. A blue sediment sometimes deposited from the urine of cholera patients. [K.]

UROCYSTHÆMORRHOIDES (Lat.), n. f. pl. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-si^{2}sth(ku^{6}sth)-e^{2}m(a^3-e^{2}m)-o^{2}r-ro(ro^2)-id(ed)'ez(e^{2}s). From οὖρον, urine, κύστις, the bladder, and αἱμορροΐς, a hæmorrhoid. Ger., Blasenhämorrhoïden. Hæmorrhoids of the bladder. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

UROCYSTIS (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-si^{2}st(ku^{6}st)'i^{2}s. Gen., -cyst'eos (-is). From οὖρον, urine, and κύστις, the bladder. Fr., urocyste. See Urinary BLADDER.

UROCYSTITIS (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-si^{2}st(ku^{6}st)-i(e)'ti^{2}s. Gen., -it'idos (-idis). Fr., urocystite. See CYSTITIS.

UROCYSTOCATARRHUS (Lat.), n. m. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-si^{2}st-(ku^{6}st)''o(o^3)-ka^{2}t(ka^{3}t)-a^{2}r(a^{3}r)'ru^{3}s(ru^{4}s). From οὖρον, urine, κύστις, the bladder, and καταῤῥοος, a running down. See CYSTORRHŒA (1st def.).

URODENSIMÈTRE (Fr.), n. U^6-ro-da^{3}n^2-se-me^{2}tr'. See UROMETER.

URODIALYSIS (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-di(di^2)-a^{2}l(a^{3}l)'i^2(u^6)-si^{2}s. From οὖρον, urine, and διάλυσις, a separating. Fr., urodialyse. 1. See UROPLANIA. 2. Decompositon of the urine. [L, 50 (α, 14).]—U. neonatorum. Of Schönlein, retarded secretion of urine in the kidneys of new-born infants. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

URODOCHIUM (Lat.), n. n. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-do^{2}k(do^{2}ch^2)-i(e)'-u^{3}m(u^{4}m). Gr., οὐροδοχεῖον (from οὖρον, urine, and δοχεῖον, a holder). See URINAL.

URODRIMYTES (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-dri^{2}m(drem)'i^{2}t(u^{6}t)-ez(as). Gen., -et'os (-et'is). From οὖρον, urine, and δριμύτης, acridness. Fr., urodrymie. Acridity of the urine. [L, 41, 50 (α, 14).]

URODYNIA (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-di^{2}n(du^{6}n)'i^2-a^3. From οὖρον, urine, and ὀδύνη, pain. Fr., urodynie. Pain in passing urine. [E.]

URŒDEMA (Lat.), n. n. U^{2}r(ur)-ed(o^2-e^{2}d)-em(am)'a^3. Gen., -em'atos (-atis). From οὖρον, urine, and οἴδημα, a swelling. A tumefaction caused by infiltration of urine. [E.]

UROERYTHRIC ACID, UROERYTHRIN, n's. U^{2}r-o-e^{2}r-i^{2}th'ri^{2}k, -e^{2}r'i^{2}th-ri^{2}n. From οὖρον, urine, and ἐρυθρός, red. Fr., uroérythrine, matière rosacée. Ger., Uroerythrin. A coloring matter found in small quantities in normal urine, but forming a copious deposit in certain febrile conditions. It gives a rose color to a urinary deposit sometimes observed after wounds or operations. Its appearance is said to indicate visceral, and especially hepatic disease, and to be often followed by secondary hæmorrhage and gangrene. [Verneuil, "France méd.," May 2, 1885; "Glasgow Med. Jour.," Jan., 1886, p. 74.]

UROFUSCOHÆMATIN, n. U^{2}r''o-fu^{3}sk'''o-he^{2}m'a^{2}t-i^{2}n. From οὖρον, urine, fuscus, dark, and αἷμα, blood. Of Baumstark, a red urinary pigment derived from hæmatin, formed in acute or severe disease. [α, 34.]

URO-GENITAL, adj. U^{2}r-o-je^{2}n'i^2-t'l. Lat., urogenitalis. Having reference both to the urinary and to the genital tract. This term and its equivalent, urino-genital, are more commonly used with regard to anatomical points, while the term genito-urinary, of essentially the same signification, is oftener employed in speaking of pathological matters.

UROGLAUCIN, n. U^{2}r-o-gla^{4}s'i^{2}n. See CYANURIN.

UROGRAVIMETER, n. U^{2}r-o-gra^{2}v-i^{2}m'e^{2}t-u^{6}r. From οὖρον, urine, gravis, heavy, and μέτρον, a measure. Of Thudichum, a urometer. [α, 34.]

UROHÆMATIN, n. U^{2}r-o-he^{2}m'a^{2}t-i^{2}n. Fr., urohématine. 1. Of Harley, uroerythrin. [K.] 2. Of MacMunn, see ISOHÆMATOPORPHYRIN.

UROHÆMATOPORPHYRIN, n. U^{2}r-o-he^{2}m-a^{2}t-o-po^{2}r'fi^{2}r-i^{2}n. From οὖρον, urine, αἷμα, blood, and πόρφυρος, purple. Hæmatoporphyrin derived from urine. [α, 34.]

UROHYAL, n. U^{2}r-o-hi''l. From οὐρά, a tail, and ὑοειδής, hyoid. See Uro-hyal BONE.

UROLEUCIC ACID, n. U^{2}r-o-lu^2'si^{2}k. Ger., Uroleucinsäure. A monobasic acid, $C_9H_{10}O_5$, found in the urine in alkaptonuria. It has considerable antiseptic power, and is probably antipyretic. ["Brit. Med. Jour.," Aug. 4, 1888, p. 232, Nov. 23, 1889, p. 1149 (α, 50).]

UROLEUCORRHŒA (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-lu^{2}k-o^{2}r-re'-(ro^2'e^2)-a^3. From οὖρον, urine, λευκός, white, and ῥεῖν, to flow. Fr., uroleucorrhée. Ger., Uroleukorrhöe. A condition in which the urine contains much mucus.

UROLITHIASIS (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-li^{2}th-i^2-a(a^3)'si^{2}s. From οὖρον, urine, and λιθίασις, lithiasis. Fr., urolithiase. Ger., Harnsteinbildung. The formation of urinary calculi, also the condition of the system that results from such formation. [α, 14.]

UROLITHOTOMIA (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-li^{2}th-o(o^3)-tom-(to^{2}m)'i^2-a^3. From οὖρον, urine, λίθος, a stone, and τομή, a cutting. See LITHOTOMY.

UROLITHUS (Lat.), n. m. U^{2}r(ur)-o^{2}l'i^{2}th-u^{3}s(u^{4}s). From οὖρον, urine, and λίθος, a stone. Fr., urolithe. A urinary calculus.

UROLOGY, n. U^{2}r-o^{2}l'o-ji^2. From οὖρον, urine, and λόγος, understanding. Fr., urologie. Ger., Harnlehre. The physiology, pathology, etc., of the urine and the urinary system. [α, 48.]

UROMELANIN, n. U^{2}r-o-me^{2}l'a^{2}n-i^{2}n. Fr., uromélanine. A coloring matter present normally in urine to the amount of 5 or 6 grammes a day. It occurs as thin, black, shiny lamellæ. [Plósz, "Ztschr. f. phys. Chem.," viii, p. 85 (B).]

UROMELUS (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o^{2}m'e^{2}l-u^{3}s(u^{4}s). Gen., -mel'es. From οὐρά, the tail, and μέλος, a limb. A single monster in which there is fusion of the lower limbs; the thigh usually shows evidence of a double formation, but the leg is single and there is a single foot having the heel turned forward. [α, 34.]

UROMETER, n. U^{2}r-o^{2}m'e^{2}t-u^{6}r. From οὖρον, urine, and μέτρον, a measure. Fr., uromètre, pèse-urine. A hydrometer for measuring the specific gravity of the urine. [K.]

UROMPHALUS (Lat.), n. m. U^{2}r(ur)-o^{2}mf'a^{2}l(a^{3}l)-u^{3}s(u^{4}s). From οὖρον, urine, and ὀμφαλός, the navel. Fr., uromphale. Ger., Nabelharnschwellung. Swelling of the umbilicus due to infiltration of urine. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

URONCUS (Lat.), n. m. U^{2}r(ur)-o^{2}n^{2}k'u^{3}s(u^{4}s). From οὖρον, urine, and ὄγκος, a tumor. A tumor containing urine. [α, 34.]

URONEPHROSIS (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-ne^{2}f-ros'i^{2}s. Gen., -ros'eos (-is). From οὖρον, urine, and νεφρός, the kidney. See NEPHRYDROSIS.

URONITROTOLUENE ACID, n. U^{2}r-o-nit-ro-to^{2}l-u^2'en. A substance found in the urine after the ingestion of orthonitrotoluene. It is lævorotary in aqueous solution, and on treatment with dilute acids is decomposed into orthonitrobenzyl, alcohol, and glycuronic acid. ["Ann. di chim. appl. alla farmac. ed alla med.," July, 1883 (B).]

UROPHÆIN, n. U^{2}r-o-fe'i^{2}n. From οὖρον, urine, and φαιός, gray. Of Heller, the ordinary coloring matter of the urine. [α, 34.]

UROPHANIC, adj. U^{2}r-o-fa^{2}n'i^{2}k. From οὖρον, urine, and φανός, conspicuous. Appearing in the urine. [α, 34.]

UROPHRENESIS (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-fre^{2}n-e(a)'si^{2}s. Gen., -es'eos (-is). From οὖρον, urine, and φρήν, the mind. Fr., urophrénèse. A supposed metastasis of urine to the brain. [α, 14.]

UROPHTHISIS (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o^{2}t(o^{2}f)'i^{2}s(thi^{2}s)-i^{2}s. Gen., -phthis'eos (-ophth'isis). From οὖρον, urine, and φθίσις, decay. Fr., urophthisie. See DIABETES.

UROPITTIN, n. U^{2}r-o-pi^{2}t'i^{2}n. A crystallizable decomposition product (perhaps $C_9H_{10}N_2O_3$) of urochrome. [B, 93 (α, 14).]

UROPLANIA (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-plan(pla^{3}n)'i^2-a^3. From οὖρον, urine, and πλάνη, a wandering. Ger., Uroplanie, Harnaustretung. 1. A condition in which the elements of urine are present in other parts than the urinary organs. In the pl., Uroplaniæ (Ger., Uroplanien), a genus of the family Chymoplaniæ of Fuchs's classification of skin diseases, including such forms of uræmia as are attended with urinary deposits in the skin producing various cutaneous diseases. [G.] 2. See PARURIA erratica.

UROPOIESIS (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-poi(po^2-i^2)-e(a)'si^{2}s. Gen., -es'eos (-is). From οὖρον, urine, and ποιεῖν, to make. Fr., uropoèse. Ger., Harnbereitung. The secretion of urine. [K.]

UROPOIETIC, adj. U^{2}r-o-poi-e^{2}t'i^{2}k. Ger., harnabsondernd. Pertaining to or concerned in the secretion of urine. [K.]

UROPSAMMUS (Lat.), n. m. U^{2}r(ur)-o^{2}ps-a^{2}m(a^{3}m)'mu^{3}s-(mu^{4}s). From οὖρον, urine, and ψάμμος, gravel. Urinary gravel. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

UROPYGIAL, adj. U^{2}r-o-pi^{2}j'i^2-'l. Pertaining to the uropygium. [L, 12.]

UROPYGIUM (Lat.), n. n. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-pi^{2}j(pu^{6}g)'i^2-u^{3}m(u^{4}m). From οὐρά, the tail, and πυγή, the rump. Fr., croupion. Ger., Burzel, Schwanzgegend. The rump or coccygeal region in a bird. [α, 48.]

UROROSEIN, n. U^{2}r-o-roz'e^2-i^{2}n. Fr., uroroséine. Ger., Urorosein. A rose-colored pigment, $C_{32}H_{40}N_4O_8$, found in the urine of persons affected with diabetes, chlorosis, osteomalacia, nephritis, carcinoma, etc. Its solutions give a characteristic absorption line between the lines D and E of the spectrum. In its chemical relations it behaves somewhat like the colors of the rosaniline series. ["Jour. f. prakt. Chem.," N. F., xxvi, p. 333 (B); "Arch. de méd. expér. et d'anat. path.," Dec. 16, 1891, p. 808.]

URORRHAGIA (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o^{2}r-raj(ra^{3}g)'i^2-a^3. From οὖρον, urine, and ῥήγνυσθαι, to burst forth. Fr., urorrhagie. See DIABETES.

URORRHŒA (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r-o^{2}r-re'(ro^2'e^2)-a^3. From οὖρον, urine, and ῥοία, a flowing. Fr., urorrhée. Ger., Harnfluss, Urorrhöe. See ENURESIS and POLYURIA.—U. mellita. See DIABETES mellitus.

URORRHORRHŒA (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o^{2}r-ro^{2}r-re(ro^2'e^2)-a^3. From οὖρον, urine, ὀῤῥός, serum, and ῥοία, a flowing. Fr., urorrhorrhée. Albuminuria. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

URORUBIN, n. U^{2}r-o-ru^{2}b'i^{2}n. Fr., urorubine. Ger., U. A coloring matter found in normal and pathological urines. It forms a dark cherry-red, brittle mass, whose ethereal solution gives an absorption band extending from the lines D to F of the spectrum. [Plósz, "Ztschr. f. phys. Chem.," xiii, p. 85 (B).]

URORUBROHÆMATIN, n. U^{2}r''o-rub'''ro-he^{2}m'a^{2}t-i^{2}n. From οὖρον, urine, ruber, red, and αἷμα, blood. Of Baumstork, a brown urinary pigment obtained from a patient suffering with pemphigus leprosus. [α, 34.]

UROSACRAL, adj. U^{2}r-o-sak'r'l. From οὐρά, the tail, and sacrum (q. v.). Pertaining to the tail and the sacrum (said of a bone formed by the fusion of the sacrum and some of the vertebræ anterior to it). [L, 12, 221.]

UROSCHEOCELE (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o^{2}sk(o^{2}sch^2)-e^2-o(o^3)-se-(ka)'le(la); in Eng., u^{2}r-o^{2}sk'e^2-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es. From οὖρον, urine, ὄσχεον, the scrotum, and κήλη, a tumor. Fr., uroschéocèle. A urocele of the scrotum.

UROSCHESIS (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o^{2}sk(o^{2}sch^2)'e^{2}s-i^{2}s. Gen., -sches'eos (-osch'esis). From οὖρον, urine, and σχέσις, retention. Fr., uroschésie. Suppression of urine. [L, 41 (α, 14).]

UROSCOPY, n. U^{2}r-o^{2}sk'op-i^2. Lat., ouroscopia (from οὖρον, urine, and σκοπεῖν, to examine). Fr., uroscopie. Ger., Uroskopie, Harnschau, Harnbeschauung. Examination of the urine. [K.]

UROSEPSIS (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-seps(saps)'i^{2}s. Gen., -seps'eos (-is). From οὖρον, urine, and σῆψις, putrefaction. Septicæmia due to the putrefaction of urine extravasated within the tissues of the body. [α, 34.]

UROSIS (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-os'i^{2}s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From οὖρον, urine. Fr., urose. Ger., Harnkrankheit. Of Alibert, any disease of the urinary organs. [L, 41, 50 (α, 14).]

UROSPASMUS (Lat.), n. m. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-spa^{2}z(spa^{3}s)'mu^{3}s-(mu^{4}s). From οὖρον, urine, and σπασμός, a spasm. Spasm of the urinary tract. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

UROSPERMUM (Lat.), n. n. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-spu^{5}rm(spe^{2}rm)'-u^{3}m(u^{4}m). From οὐρά, the tail, and σπέρμα, seed. Fr., urosperme. Sheep's-beard; a genus of composite herbs, typical of a subdivision (Urospermeæ) of the Lactuceæ. [α, 35.]—U. picroides. The ἱεράκιον μέγα of Dioscorides, indigenous to Mediterranean regions; used in gastric complaints and externally as an antiphlogistic. [α, 35.]

UROSTEALITH, n. U^{2}r-o-ste'a^{2}l-i^{2}th. From οὖρον, urine, στέαρ, fat, and λίθος, a stone. Fr., urostéalithe. A pseudo-calculus consisting of fatty matter combined with lime, forming a kind of soap. [E, 12.]

UROSTENOSIS (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-ste^{2}n-os'i^{2}s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From οὖρον, urine, and στένωσις, stenosis. See URETHROSTENOSIS.

UROSTIGMA (Lat.), n. n. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-sti^{2}g'ma^3. Gen., -stig'matos (-atis). A genus of the Urticaceæ, made by Bentham and Hooker a section of the genus Ficus. [α, 35.]—U. elasticum. See FICUS elastica.—U. religiosum. See FICUS religiosa.

UROSULPHIC ACID, n. U^{2}r-o-su^{3}lf'i^{2}k. See THIOURIC ACID.

UROTHEOBROMINE, n. U^{2}r-o-the-o-brom'en. See PARAXANTHINE.

UROTOXIC, adj. U^{2}r-o-to^{2}x'i^{2}k. Fr., urotoxique. Pertaining to the toxicity of urine ["Sem. méd.," Dec. 4, 1889, p. 449 (α, 18).]

UROUS ACID, n. Ur'u^{3}s. See XANTHIN.

UROXANIC ACID, n. U^{2}r-o^{2}x-a^{2}n'i^{2}k. Fr., acide uroxanique. Ger., Uroxansäure. A dibasic acid, $C_5H_8N_4O_6$, in prismatic crystals or spheroids, obtained by long exposure of uric acid dissolved in caustic potash to air free from carbon dioxide. [B, 3 (α, 38).]

UROXANTHIN, n. U^{2}r-o-za^{2}nth'i^{2}n. Fr., uroxanthine. Ger., U. See INDICAN.

UROXIN, n. U^{2}r-o^{2}x'i^{2}n. See ALLOXANTINE.

UROZEMIA (Lat.), n. f. U^{2}r(ur)-o(o^3)-zem(zam)'i^2-a^3. From οὖρον, urine, and ζημία, loss. Fr., urozémie. See DIABETES.

URPÉTHITE (Fr.), n. U^{6}r-pa-tet. See OZOKERITE.

URPFLANZE (Ger.), n. Ur'pfla^{3}nts-e^2. See PROTOPHYTE.

URRHODIN, n. U^{2}r-rod'i^{2}n. From οὖρον, urine, and ῥόδινος, made of roses. Of Thudichum, a decomposition product of the chemolysis by acids of a particular chromogen not yet isolated. [α, 34.]

URRHODENOGEN, n. U^{2}r-rod-i^{2}n'o-ge^{2}n. Of Thudichum, a substance not yet isolated, the decomposition of which by hydrochloric acid produces urrhodin. [α, 34.]

URRHODONIC ACID, n. U^{2}r-rod-o^{2}n'i^{2}k. An acid obtained from urine, forming brown stellate or sheaf-like bundles of crystals, of a highly aromatic odor, very soluble in water and in ether. [α, 34.]

URSACHE (Ger.), n. Ur'za^{3}ch^2-e^2. See CAUSE.—Gelegenheitsu'. See Determining CAUSE.—Mitu', Mitwirkende U. See Accessory CAUSE.—Nächste U. See Proximate CAUSE.—Nebenu'. See Accessory CAUSE.

URSCHLEIM (Ger.), n. Ur'shlim. See PROTOPLASM.

URSONE, n. U^{5}rs'on. Fr., u. Ger., Urson. A substance, $C_{10}H_{16}O$ (or $C_{20}H_{32}O_2$), obtained by Trommsdorf from the leaves of Arbutus uva ursi as silky, acicular crystals. [B, 270 (α, 38).]

URSPRUNG (Ger.), n. Ur'sprun^2. See ORIGIN.

URSTOFF (Ger.), n. Ur'sto^{3}f. See ELEMENT.—U'theilchen. See ATOM.

URTÈRE (Fr.), n. U^{6}rt-e^{2}r. An old form of urétère (q. v.).

URTHIERCHEN (Ger.), URTHIERE (Ger.), n's pl. Ur'terch^{2}e^{2}n, -ter-e^2. See PROTOZOA.

URTICA (Lat.), n. f. U^{5}rt(u^{4}rt)-ik(ek)'a^3. From urere, to burn. Fr., ortie (1st def.). Ger., Brennnessel (1st def.), Nessel (1st def.). 1. Nettle; a genus of herbs with stinging hairs, giving name to a large order (the Urticaceæ [Fr., urticacées; Ger., Nesselgewächse], Urticæ, Urticeæ [Fr., urticées; Ger., Urticeen], Urticinæ, or Urticineæ [Fr., urticinées]) of apetalous dicotyledons. In an extended sense, the order includes the Ulmeæ, Celtideæ, Cannabineæ, Moreæ, Artocarpeæ, Conocephaleæ, Thelygoneæ, and Urticeæ proper. These last, the nettleworts, including U., Laportea, Urera, Boehmeria, etc., are remarkable for the caustic secretion of their glandular hairs. [α, 35.] 2. The eruption produced by the sting of a nettle; a pomphus; a wheal.—Extractum urticæ. Fr., extrait d'ortie. An extract obtained from the juice of U. dioica, which is clarified by heating and evaporated. [B, 119 (α, 38).]—Syrupus urticæ. Fr., sirop d'ortie. A syrup made by boiling together equal parts of clarified juice of U. dioica and sugar. [B, 119 (α, 38).]—U. baccifera. A West Indian species. The flowers and roots are used as an aperient, and the leaves as a resolvent. [α, 35.]—U. dioica. Fr., ortie dioïque, grande ortie, ortuge. Ger., zweihäusige Nessel, grosse Brennnessel. The common (stinging) nettle of Europe, Asia, and North America. The root, herb, and achenes, radix, herba, et semen urticæ (majoris, seu vulgaris, seu racemiferæ, seu dioicæ), were formerly official—the first, which contains a volatile oil, as a diuretic; the second as a diuretic, astringent, hæmostatic, anthelminthic, etc.; and the last as a mucilaginous emollient. The young shoots are eaten, boiled, as an antiscorbutic. The plant is applied to the skin in local paralysis, etc., as an irritant, the effects in such cases being due, it is said, to the presence of free formic acid in the hairs. [α, 35.]—Urticæ folia [Gr. Ph.]. The fresh leaves of U. pilulifera. [B, 95 (α, 38).]—U. gigas. See LAPORTEA gigas.—U. iners. See LAMIUM album.—U. latifolia. A laxative and diuretic species growing in South America. [α, 35.]—U. major. See U. dioica.—U. membranacea. A species found in southern Europe and northern Africa, considered aphrodisiac. In Egypt the herb and seed are used as an emmenagogue and pectoral. [α, 35.]—U. mexicana. The yesgos del país of the Mex. Ph. The root is used as a diaphoretic and as a substitute for Sambucus ebulus. [J. M. Maisch, "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," Apr., 1886, p. 168.]—U. minor. See U. urens.—U. mortua. See LAMIUM album.—U. nivea. Fr., ortie blanche. The Chinese cotton-nettle. [α, 35.] See BOEHMERIA nivea.—U. pilulifera. Roman nettle, growing in southern Europe and in Asia. The mucilaginous fruits, semen urticæ romanæ (seu hispanicæ, seu piluliferæ), were formerly used as a pectoral and are now employed in Greece as a galactagogue. The root is considered astringent, diuretic, and pectoral. [α, 35.]—U. Rumphii. A native of the Moluccas, where it is cultivated and much used as a scourge in local torpor, stiffness of joints, paralysis, etc. [α, 35.]—U. stimulans. See LAPORTEA stimulans.—U. urens. Fr., ortie brûlante (ou grièche, ou folle), petite ortie. Ger., kleine Nessel (oder Brennnessel). The small (British) nettle, or dwarf-nettle, of Europe, middle and northern Asia, and North America. The herb and fruits (achenes), herba et semen urticæ (minoris, seu urentis), were formerly used like those of U. dioica. The plant has been recommended in metrorrhagia. [α, 35.]—U. urentissima. Fr., feuille du diable. The daoun setan of Java, devil's-leaf of Timor; a very poisonous species, said to be used like Laportea stimulans. [α, 35.]—U. vulgaris. See U. dioica.

URTICAL, adj. U^{5}rt-i'k'l. Lat., urticalis. Belonging to the Urticales, which are Lindley's u. alliance (Lat., nixus urticalis) of diclinous exogens, including the Urticaceæ, Moraceæ, Artocarpaceæ, etc. [α, 35.]

URTICARIA (Lat.), n. f. U^{5}rt(u^{4}rt)-i^{2}k(ek)-a(a^3)'ri^2-a^3. From urtica, a nettle. Fr., urticaire, fièvre ortiée porcelaine. Ger., Nesselausschlag, Nesselfriesel, Nesselfieber, Nesselsucht, Porcellanfriesel, Wiebelsucht. 1. Hives, nettle-rash; an acute or chronic disease of the skin characterized by an eruption of red, elevated, rounded efflorescences of irregular shape and size, which at a certain stage of their development appear blanched in the centre and erythematous at the periphery, being then commonly known as wheals. The eruption is attended with intense itching. It is usually transitory, though sometimes disposed to recur. The Urticariæ of Plenck correspond to u. febrilis. 2. Of Bazin and Auspitz, u. acuta, the chronic form being termed by them cnidosis. [G, 4, 26.]—Giant u. Fr., urticaire massive. Of Milton, u. characterized by large œdematous swellings of the skin or of the mucous membrane of the tongue, throat, urethra, etc., which are rarely accompanied by change of color or itching and are evanescent. ["Edinb. Med. Jour.," cclviii, p. 513 (G).] Cf. U. œdematosa.—Internal u. U. affecting the mucous membranes in the interior of the body. It is sometimes observed on the tongue, pharynx, or larynx, and inasmuch as attacks are sometimes associated with nausea and vomiting or with spasmodic dyspnœa, it is inferred that the stomach and air passages may also be subject to the lesions of the disease, and perhaps the mucous membranes of other regions. [G.]—U. ab ingestis. U. provoked by the ingestion of certain articles of food.

[G.]—U. acuta. Ger., Nesselfieber. U. that runs an acute course and is usually attended with fever. [G.]—U. alba. U. of the ordinary type, with wheals that show a white surface in the centre with redness at the periphery. [G.]—U. annularis. U. in which the eruption takes the form of rings. [L, 57 (a, 14).]—U. bullosa. U. attended with a production of bullæ. [G.]—U. chronica. Ger., (chronische) Nesselsucht. U. characterized by long continuance, or (more commonly) by a long-persisting tendency to relapsing attacks. [G.]—U. conferta. U. characterized by efflorescences closely clustered together. [G.]—U. dermographica. See U. factitia.—U. endemica. A form of u. coinciding with (perhaps due to) the presence of Bombyx processionea, and consisting in a cutaneous eruption, forming partly pustules, partly wheals, and spreading over the entire body. It is accompanied with violent itching. ["Arch. f. path. Anat. u. Physiol.," 1891, 125, 2, p. 220 (a, 50).]—U. ephemera. Acute u. of short duration. [G.]—U. evanida. Ger., wandelbare Nesselsucht. U. of very brief duration, or that comes and goes. [G, 10.]—U. factitia. Chronic u. in which by artificially irritating the skin the eruption may be produced at will. [G.]—U. febrilis. See U. acuta.—U. figurata. U. characterized by efflorescences grouped in determinate figures. [G.]—U. fugax. See U. evanida.—U. gigans. See U. tuberosa.—U. gyrata. U. the efflorescences of which form gyrate figures or lines. [G.]—U. hæmorrhagica. See PURPURA urticans.—U. medicamentosa. U. provoked by the administration of drugs. [G.]—U. miliaris. U. attended with an eruption of miliary vesicles. [G.]—U. neuritica. U. due to a lesion of the nerve or nerves supplying the affected part. [G, 4.]—U. nodosa. See U. tuberosa.—U. œdematosa. A form of u. characterized by the sudden appearance of œdematous swellings upon different parts of the body, usually, though not always, accompanied by urticarial wheals and itching, and after a short time suddenly disappearing. [G, 51.]—U. papulosa. A form of u., observed especially in children, in which, instead of distinct wheals, smallish red papules are formed which itch violently and frequently appear excoriated from scratching. The eruption is usually more persistent than the ordinary form of u. [G, 3.]—U. perstans. Ger., beharrende Nesselsucht. U. in which the efflorescences persist throughout the attack. [G.]—U. pigmentosa. A form of chronic u., in young children, in which the efflorescences persist for a long time and are accompanied with a brownish-yellow pigmentation. [G.]—U. porcellanea. See U. alba.—U. recidiva, U. recurrens. U. characterized by a disposition to recur, as in u. chronica. [G.]—U. rubra. U. with red efflorescences. [G.]—U. subcutanea. Ger., schleichende Nesselsucht. Of Willan, a form of chronic or relapsing u. associated with itching or tingling of the skin, with an occasional eruption of wheals. [G, 12.]—U. tuberosa. Ger., Nesselfriesel, harte Nesselsucht. A form of u. marked by rapid increase of some of the wheals to a large size, forming hard tuberosities which seem to extend deeply and occasion deep-seated pains. [G, 12.]—U. vaccinica. U. induced by vaccination. [G, 27.]—U. vesiculosa. U. attended with vesicles. [G.]

URTICARIAL, adj. U⁶rt-i²k-ar'i²-'l. Lat., urticatus. Fr., ortié. Pertaining to or resembling urticaria. [G.]

URTICATING, adj. U⁵rt'i²k-at-i²n². Fr., urticant. Stinging like a nettle. [a, 27.]

URTICATIO (Lat.), n. f. U⁶rt(u⁴rt)-i²k(ek)-a(a³)'shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., -on'is. See URTICATION and URTICARIA chronica.

URTICATION, n. U⁵rt-i²k-a'shu³n. Lat., urticatio (from urtica, a nettle). Fr., u. A method of producing substitutive irritation by beating the skin with nettles. [G.]

URUCU, n. See ANNOTTO.

URUCURI, n. In Brazil, the Attalea excelsa. [a, 35.]

URUSHIC ACID, n. U²-rush'i²k. From Jap., urushi, lacquer. A monobasic acid discovered in Japanese lacquer. ["Nature," June 25, 1885, p. 190 (B).]

URWINDUNG (Ger.), n. Ur'vi²nd-un². 1. A primitive convolution of the brain. 2. Of Huschke, one of the frontal convolutions. [I, 6 (K).]

URWIRBEL (Ger.), n. Ur'verb-e²l. A protovertebral somite. —Eigentlicher U. [Kölliker]. All that portion of the protovertebral structure of the embryo which remains after the separation of the muscular plate; the Wirbelkernmasse of Remak. [A, 8.]

URZEUGUNG (Ger.), n. Ur'tsoig-un². See Spontaneous GENERATION.

USAGRO, n. An Arabian term apparently applied to psoriasis. [Rayer.]

USNEA (Lat.), n. f. U³s(u⁴s)'ne²-a³. Fr., usnée. Ger., Bartflechte. A genus of fruticose lichens. The Usneaceæ (Usneacei, Usneæ, Usneeæ, Usneei, or Usneidæ), including Cetraria, U., Evernia, etc., are a division of the Intricatæ. [a, 35.]—U. barbata. Fr., usnée barbue, barbe de capucin. Ger., gemeine Bartflechte, Haarmoos. Necklace moss, tree hair; a species found on the bark of trees (sometimes on Loxa-bark). This and similar species, known as Muscus arboreus, Muscus quercinus, Muscus arboreus albus, and Muscus albus quernus, are bitter and astringent, and were formerly used in indigestion, dysentery, hæmorrhages, etc. [a, 35.]—U. cranii humani. The Parmelia omphalodes, Parmelia saxatilis, and other lichens found on human bones and skulls exposed to the elements. [a, 35.]—U. jubata. Tree-hair lichen, formerly official as muscus arboreus nigricans. [a, 35.]

USNEIN, USNIC ACID, USNIN, n's. U³s'ne²-i²n, -ni²k, -ni²n. Fr., acide usnique, usnéine, usnine. Ger., Usninsäure. A crystallizable acid, $C_{18}H_{16}O_7$, obtained from Parmelia prunastri and other lichens. [B, 93 (a, 14).]

USNINIC ACID, n. U³s-ni²n'i²k. Fr., acide usninique. An acid, $C_{18}H_{18}O_7$, obtained from various lichens, occurring as sulphur-yellow prismatic crystals. [B, 270 (a, 38).]

USSAT (Fr.), n. U⁶s-sa³. A place in the department of the Ariège, France, where there are hot springs. [L, 41, 49, 57 (a, 14).]

USTILAGO (Lat.), n. f. U³st(u⁴st)-i²l-ag(a³g)'o. Gen., -ag'inis. Fr., charbon (1st def.). Ger., Flugbrand (1st def.). 1. The typical genus of the Ustilaginaceæ, or Ustilagineæ (Fr., ustilaginées; Ger., Ustilagineen, Brandpilze), or Ustilaginei (Fr., ustilaginés), which are the smut-Fungi, a division of the Hypodermiæ or of the Zygomycetes, parasitic on flowering plants. The mycelium penetrates through the intercellular spaces of the host-plant and destroys it. [a, 35.] 2. Of the U. S. Ph., see U. maidis.—U. caries, U. fœtida. See TILLETIA caries.—U. maidis, U. maydis. Corn- (or maize-) smut; a species which occurs on the stem, grains, and tassel of Zea maiz in smooth, irregular, roundish-lobed masses, inclosing innumerable blackish-brown nodular spores, of disagreeable smell and taste. It is the u. of the U. S. Ph. (see ERGOT of maize). [a, 35.]—U. segetum. Smut, brawn, brancorn; a species affecting wheat, barley, oats, Indian corn, and other grasses. Its spores are absorbed into the tissues of the grass, and are carried up till they reach the grain in the ear, which becomes a sooty mass. It differs from U. fœtida in having no odor. [a, 35.]

UTERO-VENTRAL, adj. U^{2}t''e^{2}r-o-ve^{2}n'tr'l. Pertaining to the uterus and the abdominal cavity.

UTERRHÉMIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. U^6-te^{2}r-ra-me. See METRORRHAGIA.

UTERUS (Lat.), n. m. U^{2}t(u^{4}t)'e^{2}r-u^{3}s(u^{4}s). Gr., ὑστέρα. Fr., utérus, matrice. Ger., U., Gebärmutter, Gebärorgan, Fruchthalter, Mutterbalg (2d def.). 1. The organ of gestation; made up chiefly of muscular fibres and having a cavity lined with mucous membrane continuous with that of the vagina. It is covered before and behind with peritonæum. In the human subject it is situated in the pelvis. In the non-gravid state it has the shape of a pear flattened from before backward. It is suspended in the pelvis by the broad ligaments. Its cavity is 2½ in. in depth. It is divided into a body and a neck; the latter projects backward and somewhat downward into the vagina. 2. In mycology, the velum universale. [α, 35.]—Arched u. Lat., u. arcuatus. That form of u. in which the longitudinal median furrow marking the union of the primitive halves of the organ is more than ordinarily pronounced at the fundus, from the fusion of the horns being somewhat defective. [A, 24.]—Bilobed u. See U. bicornis.—Divided u. See U. sæptus.—Double u. Ger., doppelte Gebärmutter. That malformation of the u. in which the two horns are developed, but have not become fused into one organ. See also U. bicornis and U. sæptus.—Ductile u. Syn.: squatty u. [Taylor]. Of I. E. Taylor (who repudiates "balloon u."), a condition of the u. in which its walls are lax and yielding, so that they collapse horizontally and may be carried up before a sound introduced into the cavity of the organ.—Duplex u. See Double u.—Fusiform u. Lat., u. fusiformis. Ger., spindelförmiger U. That form of the u. in which, during advanced pregnancy, its vertical diameter is the greatest. Schröder and Stratz (A, 388).]—Gravid u. A u. containing a fecundated ovum.—Imparous u. Of Barnes, a u. that has never contained a product of conception. [α, 34.]—Impregnated u. See Gravid u.—Incudiform u. An anvil-shaped u. [α, 34.]—Infantile u. Lat., u. fœtalis. Fr., utérus fœtal (ou embryonnaire). That abnormity of the u. in which it is normally formed, but has been arrested in its development. [Lefort (A, 15).]—Intestiniform u. A u. having an elongated cervix and a thin body resembling a section of intestine. [α, 34.]—Inverted u. The u. in a state of inversion (q. v.).—Irritable u. See HYSTERALGIA (2d def.).—Male u. See U. masculinus.—Membranous u. Of Walter, a u. in which the walls are attenuated by distention and atrophy caused by fibroid tumors. [α, 34.]—Pregnant u. See Gravid u.—Retort-shaped u. Ger., Retortengestalt der Gebärmutter. A flexed u. that has an elongated cervix, giving the organ the appearance of a retort. [α, 34.]—Saccated u. A u. in the condition of hour-glass contraction. [A, 75.]—Squatty u. [Taylor]. See Ductile u.—Twin u. See Double u.—U. acollis. See U. parvicollis.—U'anhänge (Ger.). See Uterine APPENDAGES.—U. arcuatus. See Arched u.—U. biangularis. See Incudiform u.—U. bicornis. That malformation of the u. in which the two rudimentary lateral halves, or horns, remain more or less separate, instead of coalescing through their whole length. See also U. bicornis duplex and U. bicornis semiduplex.—U. bicornis duplex. Ger., gänzliche Verdoppelung der Gebärmutter. That variety of double u. in which the duplicate formation affects the whole organ. [α, 34.]—U. bicornis simplex, U. bicornis semiduplex (seu infra simplex), U. bicornis unicollis. Ger., theilweise Verdoppelung der Gebärmutter. A duplex u. in which the body alone is double and the cervix is single. [α, 34.]—U. bicorpor. A u. consisting of two bodies.—U. biforis. See U. bicornis.—U. bifundalis unicollis. See U. bicornis unicollis.—U. bilocularis, U. bipartitus. See U. sæptus.—U'bruch (Ger.). Rupture of the u.—U. cordiformis. Fr., utérus échancré. That form of defective development of the u. in which the fundus remains depressed, so that the organ has somewhat the shape of the heart of a playing-card. [A, 22.]—U. deficiens. Absence of the uterus.—U. didelphis, U. didelphys. See Double u.—U. diductus. That variety of double u. in which there are complete independence and divergence of the two halves. [Lefort (A, 15).]—U. duplex. See Double u.—U. duplex separatus. A double u. in which there is no connection between the two halves of the organ; associated with double vagina. [Spiegelberg (α, 34).]—U. flexus. A u. with an abnormal flexion. [Lefort (A, 15).]—U. fœtalis. See Infantile u.—U. globularis. A u. subsæptus with complete fusion of the two lateral halves externally. [Lefort (A, 15).]—U'hals (Ger.). See CERVIX uteri.—U. imperforatus. 1. An imperforate u. 2. A u. that has no cavity at all. [Lefort (A, 15).]—U. masculinus. The prostatic vesicle of the male, with its occasional vestigial accompaniments. [A, 5.]—U. muscularis. A u. in which there is an interstitial myoma. [α, 34.]—U'naht (Ger.). See HYSTERORRHAPHY.—U. parvicollis. Syn.: u. acollis. That malformation of the u. in which its body is normal, but its neck atrophied or lacking. [Lefort (A, 15).]—U'peristaltik (Ger.). Peristaltic contraction of the u. [A, 32.]—U'redresseur (Ger.). See Intra-uterine PESSARY.—U. retroflexus. See RETROFLEXION of the uterus.—U. retroversus. A retroverted u.—U'ruptur (Ger.). Rupture of the uterus.—U. sæptus (bilocularis). Fr., utérus biloculaire. That form of defective development of the u. in which, while the two Müllerian ducts have united, the partition between them remains wholly or in part. [A, 22.] See also U. sæptus duplex and U. subsæptus.—U. sæptus duplex. That variety of u. bilocularis in which there is a division from the fundus to the external os, forming two equal halves. [Spiegelberg (α, 34).]—U. semipartitus. Fr., utérus en partie cloisonné à l'intérieur [Lefort]. See U. subsæptus.—U. subsæptus. That variety of u. sæptus in which the dividing wall between the two lateral canals has partly disappeared, leaving the vagina and the cervix single, while the cavity of the body of the u. is double.—U. unicornis. Ger., einhörnige Gebärmutter. A one-horned u.; that malformation of the u. in which only one of the two original lateral halves is fully developed, the other being rudimentary or wanting.—U. unilocularis. That form of double u. in which the cavity of the organ is normally formed, the duplicity appearing only at the fundus on the outside. [Lefort (A, 15).]—U. velatus. See U. subsæptus.—U. virilis. See U. masculinus.—Ventral u. A term sometimes applied to the fœtal sac in cases of abdominal pregnancy. [A, 65.]

UTÉRUS (Fr.), n. See UTERUS.—U. échancré. See UTERUS cordiformis.—U. pubescent. Of Puech, an imperfectly developed uterus. [α, 34.]

UTRICLE, n. U^{2}t'ri^2-k'l. Lat., utriculus (dim. of uter, a leathern bag). Fr., utricule. Ger., Schlauch (1st def.), Hautfrucht (3d def.), Schlauchfrucht (3d def.). Syn.: sinus communis (2d def.). 1. A little pouch or bag, especially a membranous, closed, sac-like part or organ. [α, 35.] 2. The larger of the two vesicles into which the otic vesicle of the embryo is divided by a constriction which at last shuts it off from the saccule. [A, 5.] 3. A fruit in which the pericarp is like a bladder around the seed; of Gärtner, a cystidium (2d def.). [α, 35.]—Primordial u. 1. The membrane of a cartilage cell directly in contact with the cell. 2. A thin layer of protoplasm lining described by Hensen as the membrane of the red blood-corpuscles of the Amphibia, connected by delicate fibrils with a similar protoplasmic layer surrounding the nucleus. [J, 22, 35.] 3. A layer of protoplasm first deposited upon the inner surface of the wall of a cell. [α, 35.]—U. of the prostatic portion of the urethra. See UTERUS masculinus.—U. of the vestibule. The vestibular cavity which connects with the semicircular canals. It is imbedded in the recessus ellipticus, and communicates with the semicircular canals by five foramina. It is attached to the wall of the bony vestibule by loose connective tissue. It is surrounded by perilymph and contains endolymph. It consists of a fibrillar substantia propria bounded externally by vascular connective tissue and internally by angular pavement epithelium. [F, 32.]

UTRICULAR, adj. U^{2}t-ri^{2}k'u^{2}l-a^{3}r. Lat., utricularis. Fr., utriculaire. Ger., schlauchartig, schlauchig, schlauchicht. Pertaining to a utricle; bladder-like in appearance; consisting of a utricle or bearing many utricles. [α, 35.]

VACCINA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{2}k(wa^{3}k)-sin(ken)′a^3. From vaccinus, pertaining to the cow. See VACCINIA.

VACCINABLE (Fr.), adj. Va^{3}k-se-na^3-bl′. Capable of being vaccinated. [α, 48.]

VACCINADS, n. Va^{2}k′si^{2}n-a^{2}dz. From vaccina (q. v.). The micro-organizms of vaccine lymph. [α, 18.]

VACCINAL, adj. Va^{2}k′si^2-n′l. Lat., vaccinalis. Fr., v. See VACCINE (adj.).

VACCINATE, v. tr. Va^{2}k′si^{2}n-at. Lat., vaccinare. Fr., vacciner. Ger., impfen, vacciniren. To inoculate with vaccine virus. [G.]

VACCINATION, n. Va^{2}k-si^{2}n-a′shu^{3}n. Lat., vaccinatio. Fr., v. Ger., Kuhpockenimpfung, Impfung, V. Inoculation with vaccine virus as a protective measure against small-pox. [D ; G.] Recently the term has been improperly applied to inoculation with various other viruses.—Anthracic v. Inoculation of animals with attenuated cultivations of the anthrax bacillus. [α, 34.]—Chemical v. Of Castaneda and Borda, a v. done experimentally upon animals by injecting subcutaneously urine from yellow-fever patients, in the hope of its containing some chemical substance (perhaps a ptomaine) secreted by the specific micro-organism capable of affording protection against the disease. ["Lancet," Mar. 1, 1890, p. 481 (α, 50).]—Intra-uterine v. It., vaccinazione intra-uterina. Variolous immunity communicated by the mother to the fœtus as the result of her having been successfully vaccinated during pregnancy. [L, 87 (α, 34).]—Retro-v. The communication of vaccinia from man to the cow. [D, 1.]—V. antirabique (Fr.). Protective inoculation against rabies. The virus is secured by a series of inoculations of virus from the central nervous system of an animal dead of rabies under the dura of healthy animals ; an emulsion is made of the spinal cord after it has dried for fourteen days, and some of this is inoculated into the animal to be protected, then the latter is inoculated with an emulsion of a cord dried for thirteen days, and so on in a decreasing series until an emulsion of fresh cord is used. ["N. Y. Med. Jour.," Oct. 26, 1886, p. 462 (α, 34).]—V'szwang (Ger.). Compulsory vaccination. [α, 14.]

VACCINATOR, n. Va^{2}k′si^{2}n-at-o^{2}r. From vaccinare, to vaccinate. Fr., vaccinateur (1st def.). Ger., Impfnadel (2d def.). 1. One who vaccinates. 2. An instrument for performing vaccination. [G.]—Carroll's v. A v. (2d def.) composed of six needles fastened side by side at short distances from each other. [E.]—Dawson's v. A v. (2d def.) consisting of a number of needles worked by a spring. [E.]

VACCINE, adj. Va^{2}k′si^{2}n. Lat., vaccinus, vaccinalis (from vacca, a cow). Fr., vaccinal, vaccinique. Pertaining to the cow ; also pertaining to vaccinia or to vaccination. [G.]

VACCINE, n. Va^{2}k′sen. Lat., vaccinum. Fr., vaccin. Ger., Impfstoff. The virus of cow-pox (vaccinia), being either the liquid contained in the pocks or the crust formed by their desiccation. For subheadings, see under LYMPH, and cf. VIRUS.

VACCINE (Fr.), n. Va^{3}k-sen. See COW-POX and VACCINIA.—Fausse v. See VACCINELLA.—V. ulcéreuse. See VARIOLA vaccina ulcerosa.

VACCINELLA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{2}k(wa^{3}k)-si^{2}n(ken)-e^{2}l′la^3. Fr., vaccinelle (q. v.), vaccinoïde. Ger., unächte Kuhpocken. A disease or lesion produced by an abortive vaccination, differing in its symptoms from true vaccinia and usually failing to protect against variola. [G.]

VACCINELLE (Fr.), n. Va^{3}k-sen-e^{2}l. 1. A form of vaccinia attended by a generalized eruption, comparable to that of variola ; supposed to result from successive self-inoculations from the original sore. [D, 74.] 2. See VACCINELLA.

VACCINEUSE (Fr.), n. Va^{3}k-se-nu^{5}z. Of Burq, an apparatus for charging needles with vaccine lymph and preserving them so charged. A number of needles are arranged in a circle, the points to the centre, and held between two discs of rubber forced together with a screw. The points are charged by smearing the lymph over them with a brush.

VACCINIA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{2}k(wa^{3}k)-si^{2}n(ken)′i^2-a^3. From vaccinus, pertaining to the cow. Fr., vaccine. Ger., Kuhpocken, Schutzpocken, Schutzblattern. Cow-pox (q. v.) when inoculated upon the human subject, either immediately from an infected animal (v. primigena) or mediately from a person recently inoculated with the virus of the disease (v. vaccinatoria). The disease is characterized by the appearance of a small papule at the site of inoculation in from one to three days, which two days later becomes a vesicle with clear contents. It increases in size until about the end of the first week, becoming depressed in the centre and surrounded by a red areola. After the first week the contents of the efflorescence become purulent and soon begin to desiccate and form a scab, which, falling off during the second week or later, leaves a superficial, pitted and permanent cicatrix. The affection is usually attended with slight fever. [G.]—Generalized v. Fr., vaccinide, pullulation vaccinale généralisée. V. attended with a general exanthem consisting of efflorescences that closely resemble in their appearance, course, and resulting cicatrices the localized disease at the point of inoculation. [G.]—Irregular v., Spurious v., V. anormis. See VACCINELLA.—V. antivariolosa. See V.—V. gangrænosa. A general exanthem accompanying v., consisting of pustular efflorescences, sometimes like those of variola, which become gangrenous. [J. Hutchinson, "Brit. Med. Jour.," Oct. 29, 1881 (G).]—V. genuina. True v. (i. e., v. capable of affording protection against variola). [G.]—V. primigena. See under V.—V. tutoria, V. tutrix. See V.—V. vaccinatoria. V. produced by inoculation with humanized lymph. [G.]

VACCINIACEOUS, adj. Va^{2}k-si^{2}n-i^2-a′shu^{3}s. Resembling the genus Vaccinium ; of the Vacciniaceæ, which are an order of monopetalous dicotyledons included by some authors as a tribe (Vaccinieæ) in the Ericaceæ. [α, 35.]

VACCINIAL, adj. Va^{2}k-si^{2}n′i^2-′l. See VACCINE (adj.).

VACCINIDE (Fr.), n. Va^{3}k-se-ned. See Generalized VACCINIA.

VACCINIFER, n. Va^{2}k-si^{2}n′i^2-fu^{5}r. From vaccinia (q. v.) and ferre, to bear. 1. An individual from whose body vaccinal virus is taken for the purpose of conveying vaccinia to another. 2. An instrument for vaccination.

VACCINIFORM, adj. Va2k-si2n'i2-fo2rm. From vaccinia (q. v.) and forma, form. Fr., vacciniforme. Having the appearance of vaccinia or of vaccine lymph. [α, 48.]

VACCININ, n. Va2k'si2n-i2n. Fr., vaccinine. A non-nitrogenous substance obtained from Vaccinium myrtillus; it occurs as silky acicular crystals. [B, 93 (α, 14).]

VACCININE, n. Va2k'si2n-in. 1. Of Farr, the morbific germ of cow-pox. 2. Vaccine virus. [G; K.]

VACCINIOLÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Va2k(wa3k)-si2n(ken)-i(i2)'o2l-e-(a3-e2). See VACCINOLÆ.

VACCINIST, n. Va2k'si2n-i2st. See VACCINATOR (1st def.).

VACCINIUM (Lat.), n. n. Va2k(wa3k)-si2n(ken)'i2-u3m(u4m). From vaccinus, pertaining to the cow. Fr., vaciet, airelie, myrtille. Ger., Heidelbeere. The typical genus of the Vacciniaceæ. Some include in it the cranberries (Oxycaccus) as well as the blueberries. [α, 35.]—V. arctostaphylos. Fr., airelle de Cappadoce. Ger., azorische Heidelbeere. Oriental whortleberry; a tree of the Azores and Madeira. The berries are used like those of V. myrtillus and the dried leaves as tea (Trebizond tea). [α, 35.]—V. corymbosum, V. discomorphum. Common (or swamp-) blueberry of North America, the huckleberry. The subacid, aromatic berries are used like those of V. myrtillus. [α, 35.]—V. dumosum. Ger., spitzblättrige Heidelbeere. See GAYLUSSACIA dumosa.—V. frondosum. Ger., blattreiche Heidelbeere (1st def.). 1. Blue (or leafy) whortleberry of North America. The berries, baccæ vaccinii, are used like those of V. myrtillus. [α, 25.] 2. See GAYLUSSACIA dumosa.—V. macrocarpum. Fr., airelle (ou myrtille) à gros fruits. American (or large) cranberry; found in sphagnous swamps. The fruits furnish citric acid, and both fruits and leaves are detersive and astringent. [α, 35.]—V. myrtillus, V. nigrum. Fr., myrtille, maceret, airelle myrtille [Fr. Cod.] (ou anguleuse). Ger., gemeine Heidelbeere, Blaubeere, Schwarzbeere, Krackbeere. Sp., arándano, mirtillo [Mex. Ph.]. Common (or British) whortleberry (or bilberry), black-heart, huckleberry, blue- (or hurtle-, or whin-) berry of Europe, northern and middle Asia, and Arctic America. All parts of the bush, especially the leaves, contain quinic acid. The fruits, baccæ (seu fructus, seu grana) myrtilli (seu myrtillorum, seu pseudomyrti, seu vaccinii nigri), formerly used as a mildly astringent gargle and as a hæmostatic, and still used in diarrhœa, contain malic and citric acids, tannin, sugar, and a violet coloring matter. [α, 35.]—V. oxycoccos, V. oxycoccus. Fr., canneberge, bassinet (ou coussinet) des marais, airelle à fruits acides. Ger., europäische Moosbeere, Torfbeere, Sumpfbeere, Krähenbeere, Sauerbeere. The cranberry of Europe, northern and middle Asia, and North America; bogberry, fenberry, crawberry, marsh- (or moor-) berry. The leaves are used as tea, and the acid fruits (baccæ oxycaccos), which become edible after frost, as an astringent, detersive, and antiscorbutic and as a refrigerant in fevers. [α, 35.]—V. uliginosum. Fr., airelle (ou myrtille) veinée (ou des marais, ou bombeuse). Ger., Moor-Heidelbeere, grosse Sumpf-Heidelbeere, Rauschbeere, Trunkelbeere. Bog-bilberry of Europe, northern and middle Asia, and North America. The berries, which are said to produce vertigo and delirium, are made into a spirit in Siberia. [α, 35.]—V. vitis idæa. Fr., airelle ponctuée (ou à fruits rouges), myrtille rouge, vigne du Mont Ida. Ger., Pretsselbeere, rothe Heidelbeere, Bernitzbeere, Steinbeere, rothe Besinge. Red whortleberry of Mt. Ida, cow-berry, flowering box, munsbock; a shrub of Europe, northern and middle Asia, and North America. The leaves and berries, folia et baccæ vitis idææ, were formerly official. The leaves are used to adulterate uva ursi leaves. The fruits were once used as a refrigerant. [α, 35.]

VACCINIZATION, n. Va2k-si2n-i2z-a'shu3n. Fr., vaccinisation. Of Warlomont, the process of vaccinizing.

VACCINIZE, v. tr. Va2k'si2n-iz. To vaccinate a subject repeatedly until no further effect is produced (until, as has been thought, the system is saturated with the virus).

VACCINOGÈNE (Fr.), adj. Va3k-se-no-zhe2n. Devoted to the production or distribution of vaccine, or to both.

VACCINOID, n. Va2k'si2n-oid. Fr., vaccinoïde. See VACCINELLA.

VACCINOLÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Va2k(wa3k)-si2n(ken)'o2l-e(a3-e2). Ger., Nebenpocken. Secondary pocks; efflorescences resembling the vaccine pock, but occurring at a distance from the point of vaccination, usually due to accidental inoculation from the original pock, often through scratching. [G.]

VACCINOPHOBE (Fr.), n. Va3k-se-no-fob. One who fears or affects to fear the harmful influence of vaccine virus. [D, 70.]

Ger., Baldrianextract. A thick extract (soft [Fr. Cod.], half-thick [Hung. Ph.]. of pilular consistence [Gr. Ph.]) made by extracting valerian-root with dilute alcohol (with water [Finn. Ph., Gr. Ph.]). The Sp. Ph. has both an aqueous and an alcoholic extract. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Extractum valerianæ fluidum [U. S. Ph.]. A preparation made by exhausting 100 grammes of valerian-root in No. 60 powder with alcohol of sp. gr. 0·894, reserving 85 c. c., evaporating the residue to a soft consistence, mixing the two, and bringing up to 100 c. c. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Infusum valerianæ [Br. Ph.]. Fr., tisane de valériane [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., Baldrianwasser. Sp., infusión de v. [Sp. Ph.]. A preparation made by infusing 1 part of valerian-root for an hour in enough boiling water to make 40 parts [Br. Ph.] (half an hour in enough boiling water to make 100 parts [Fr. Cod.], in water enough to make 138 parts [Sp. Ph.]). [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Oleosaccharum valerianæ. A mixture of 3 drops of oil of valerian with 4 grammes of sugar. [B, 119 (a, 38).]—Oleum valerianæ. See oil of VALERIAN.—Pulvis valerianæ. See Radix valerianæ pulverata.—Pulvis valerianæ aromaticus. A powder of equal parts of valerian-root and orange-leaves; or of 53 parts of valerian and 8 of cinnamon; or of 78 of valerian, 12½ of cinnamon, and 60 of oleosaccharum of valerian; or of 125 of valerian and 6 of camphor; or of 15 of valerian and 7 each of orange-peel and tartrated tartar; or of 16 each of valerian and magnesia, 24 of Florentine iris, 28 of licorice, 8 of anise, and 2 of saffron. [B, 119 (a, 38).]—Radix valerianæ. See VALERIAN-root.—Radix valerianæ pulverata. Fr., poudre de valériane [Fr. Cod.]. Valerian-root cleansed, dried at 40° C., powdered in a covered iron mortar, and sifted through a No. 120 silk sieve [Fr. Cod]; or cleansed, dried in the oven, and powdered fine enough to leave $\frac{1}{12}$ residue [Sp. Ph.] (sifted through a 1,600-mesh sieve [Russ. Ph.], or through a 1,000-mesh sieve with a pestle till a fibrous mass is left [Swed. Ph.]). [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Rhizoma valerianæ. See VALERIAN-root.—Syrupus valerianæ [Belg. Ph.]. Fr., sirop de valériane [Fr. Cod.]. A preparation made by macerating 125 parts of valerian-root for 24 hours in water enough to make 250 parts of clear filtered liquid, distilling the residue with water, drawing off 100 parts of the distillate, mixing with the first liquid, and adding 650 parts of sugar [Belg. Ph.]; or by dissolving 40 parts of extract of valerian in 1,000 of water of valerian, filtering, and adding 1,800 of sugar [Fr. Cod.]. [B. 95 (a, 38).]—Tinctura valerianæ. Fr., teinture de valériane [Fr. Cod.]. Sp., tintura alcohólica de v. [Sp. Ph.]. 1. Of the U. S. Ph., Br. Ph., Ger. Ph., etc., a preparation made by macerating 1 part of valerian-root in No. 60 powder with alcohol of sp. gr. 0·894 for a day and then treating in a percolator with enough more alcohol to make 5 parts of tincture [U. S. Ph.]; or by macerating 2½ oz. of valerian-root in No. 40 powder for two days, then treating in a percolator with enough more alcohol to make 20 fl. oz. [Br. Ph.]; or by macerating or digesting valerian-root with 5 times as much (6 times as much [Gr. Ph., Netherl. Ph.], enough [Roum. Ph.]) diluted alcohol. [B, 95 (α, 38).] 2. Of the Swed. Ph., see Tinctura valerianæ ætherea.—Tinctura valerianæ ætherea [Ger. Ph., Belg. Ph., Dan. Ph., Finn. Ph., Gr. Ph., Swiss Ph., Hung. Ph. (2d ed.), Norw. Ph., Russ. Ph.]. Fr., teinture éthérée de valériane [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., aetherische Baldriantinctur [Ger. Ph.]. Sp., tintura etérea de v. [Sp. Ph.]. A preparation made by macerating valerian-root for some days with 5 times (6 times [Gr. Ph.]) as much spiritus æthereus (5 times as much ether of sp. gr. 0·758 [Fr. Cod., Sp. Ph.]). The Russ. Ph. directs maceration of 1 part of the root with 4 parts of alcohol for 4 days, the addition of 2 parts of ether, and maceration for 3 days more. [B, 95(α, 38).]—Tinctura valerianæ ammoniata. A preparation made by macerating 20 parts of valerian-root in No. 60 powder one day with 20 of aromatic spirit of ammonia, then treating in a percolator with enough more spirit of ammonia to make 100 parts [U. S. Ph.]; or by macerating 2½ oz. of the root in No. 40 powder for seven days with enough of the aromatic spirit of ammonia to make 20 fl. oz. [Br. Ph.]; or by macerating 3 parts of the root with a mixture of 6 of caustic ammonia solution (of sp. gr. 0·970 [Pruss. Ph.] (0·962 [Gr. Ph.]) and 12 of alcohol of sp. gr. 0·840 [Pruss. Ph., Gr. The root is said, probably erroneously, to be more active than true valerian-root. [α, 35.] 2. See V. officinalis and V. dioica.—V. officinalis. Fr., valériane officinale (ou sauvage), herbe au chat (ou de Saint-Georges). Ger., gemeiner (oder gebräuchlicher) Baldrian, Katzenbaldrian, Speerkrautwurzel, Katzenwurz, Katzentheriak, Ackerbaldrian. Great wild (or medicinal, or cats') valerian, all-heal, cut-finger, herb Bennet, St. George's herb; found throughout Europe and northern and middle Asia. The rhizome, together with its rootlets, constitutes valerian-root, which has an aromatic, bitterish taste and a somewhat terebinthinous, camphoraceous, peculiar odor, though in its fresh state the odor is not pronounced. It contains oil of valerian, malic acid, a peculiar extractive matter soluble in ether and in alcohol, an odorous resin, etc., and (Runge) a peculiar fixed acid producing with bases white salts which turn green when exposed to the air. Valerian-root is stimulant and antispasmodic. The leaves are vulnerary. [α, 35.]—V. olitoria. See VALERIANELLA olitoria.—V. phu, V. pontica. Fr., valériane phu (ou franche, ou des jardins), nard agreste (ou de Crête), grande valériane, encens terrestre. Ger., grosser (oder weisser, oder römischer, oder Garten-) Baldrian, Theriakwurzel, Theriakkraut, St. Georgenkraut. Cretan spikenard, garden-valerian of southern and middle Europe. The roots have properties resembling those of valerian-root, but are less aromatic. The φοῦ of the ancients, now identified with V. Dioscoridis, was formerly thought to be this plant. [α, 35.]—V. saliunca. Ger., wohlriechender Baldrian. An alpine European species having the properties of V. celtica and affording a part of nardus celtica. [α, 35.]—V. sambucifolia. Elder-leaved valerian, a variety of V. officinalis. The root is less vigorous than that of V. silvestris, and is said to be less rich in volatile oil. [α, 35.]—V. saxatilis. 1. A species found in Europe. The root, which has a nauseous, penetrating odor, may be used in place of valerian-root. [α, 35.] 2. See V. celtica.—V. silvestris. A variety of V. officinalis. Its root is said to be superior to that of V. sambucifolia. [α, 35.]—V. sitchensis. A species indigenous to northwestern America, considered by the Russians to be the most active of the genus. [α, 35.]—V. toluccana. A Mexican species. The tubers, which contain an abundance of valerianic acid, are reputed to be useful in diseases of the liver. [J. M. Maisch, "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," Jan., 1886, p. 20.]—V. tuberosa. Mountain-spikenard of southern Europe. The root, which has a strong valerian-like taste and odor, was formerly official as nardus montana, and is still used. [α, 35.]—V. virginiana. The Aristolochia serpentaria. [α, 35.]—V. Wallichii. An East Indian species. The root is used like that of Nardostachys jatamansi, though it has a stronger and less pleasant odor. [α, 35.]

VALOID, n. Va^{2}l'oid. From valere, to be worth. Syn.: equivalent extract. A term applied in the United Kingdom to a class of proprietary pharmaceutical preparations. The v's seem to be nothing more than fluid extracts prepared with particular regard to making a given weight of the product contain the same amounts of the active principles as are contained in the crude drug.

VALONIA, n. Va^{2}l-on'i-a^3. From βάλανος, an acorn. Ger., Valonen, Walonen. A commercial name for the cups of Quercus ægilops and Quercus vallonea. [α, 35.]

VALS (Fr.), n. Va^{3}ls. A place in the department of the Ardèche, France, where there are numerous gaseous alkaline springs. [L, 41, 57 (α, 14).]

VAL SINESTRA (It.), n. Va^{3}l si^{2}n-e^{2}st'ra^3. A place in the canton of the Grisons, Switzerland, where there are gaseous alkaline springs. [L, 57 (α, 14).]

VALVACEUS (Lat.), adj. Va^{2}l(wa^{3}l)-vas(wa^{3}k)'e^2-u^{3}s(u^{4}s). Fr., valvacé. 1. Of fruits, having marked seams or sutures, although indehiscent. [α, 35.] 2. See VALVATE.

VALVATE, adj. Va^{2}lv'at. Lat., valvatus, valvaris. Fr., valvé. Ger., klappig, klappenartig. Syn.: valvular. 1. Composed of valves. 2. Opening by valves. 3. United by the margins. [α, 35.]

VALVE, n. Va^{2}lv. Lat., valva. Fr., panneau. Ger., Valvel, Ventil, Klappe. 1. A movable flap or fold which acts to close a passage or orifice more or less completely. [α, 48.] 2. In botany, a separable part in various organs, especially one of the pieces into which a dehiscent pericarp splits. The name has also been applied to the halves of a silicified membrane in the Diatomaceæ, to the pieces of a glume, to the divisions of a spathe, to the volva in Fungi (by Paulet), and to the cotyledons (valvæ seminum) of seeds (by Jungius). [α, 35.]—Aortic v. The v. situated at the exit of the aorta from the heart. It consists of three semilunar segments, which prevent the reflux of the blood into the heart. [L.]—Bicuspid v. See Mitral v.—Cerebral v. See V. of Vieussens.—Eustachian v. A crescentic fold of the lining structure of the fœtal heart so situated as to direct the blood entering the right auricle by the vena cava inferior toward the opening of the foramen ovale. In the adult it may be obliterated, may be reduced to a trace, or may persist nearly as in the fœtus. [A, 5.]—Hasner's v. A mucous fold at the nasal aperture of the nasal duct. [L.]—Heister's v. A v. formed by folds of the mucous membrane of the neck of the gall-bladder. [L, 332.]—Houston's v's. In the rectum, oblique folds of the mucous membrane, situated one at about the level of the prostate gland, another a little higher, and a third still higher. [L, 142.]—Huschke's v. See VALVULA sacci lacrimalis superior.—Ileo-cæcal v., Ileo-colic v. Ger., Dickdarmklappe, Blinddarmklappe. An incomplete partition divided by a narrow slit-like opening, which is rounded anteriorly and narrow and pointed posteriorly, through which the cavities of the ileum and colon communicate. It is made up of the mucous membrane, its submucosa, and a few muscular fibres. It is nearly at right angles to the long axis of the colon, toward which one surface faces, the other facing toward the ileum. [L.]—Interauricular v. See V. of the foramen ovale.—Large v. of the brain. See V. of Vieussens.—Mitral v. A v. situated at the left auriculo-ventricular opening, consisting of two more or less jointed segments continuous at their attached borders. [L, 31, 142, 332.]—Pulmonary v. The v. in the left ventricle of the heart, at the entrance of the pulmonary artery. It consists of three semilunar segments, and prevents reflux of blood from the heart into the artery. [L.]—Pyloric v. Ger., unterer Magenmundring. A ring-like elevation of the mucous membrane of the stomach around the pylorus. [L, 31.]—Semilunar aortic v. See Aortic v.—Semilunar pulmonary v. See Pulmonary v.—Semilunar (or Sigmoid) v's of the heart. Those v's of the heart which consist of three semilunar segments attached by their convex borders. [L.]—Tricuspid v. A v., made up of three triangular segments, situated at the right auriculo-ventricular opening. [L.]—V. of Amussat. See Heister's v.—V's of a vein. Ger., Flügelthüren, Venenklappen. Semilunar folds of the inner coat of the veins, strengthened by connective tissue, with their concave side placed like the inside of a pouch toward the heart, so that when they are filled they retard the backward flow of the blood. [C.]—V. of Bauhin. See Ileo-cæcal v.—V's of Kerkring. See VALVULÆ conniventes.—V. of Thebasius. A semicircular fold of the endocardium at the entrance of the coronary sinus into the heart. [L, 142, 332.]—V. of the colon. See Ileo-cæcal v.—V. of the cystic duct. See Heister's v.—V. of the foramen ovale. A thin crescentic valvular fold, situated a little to the left of the foramen, in the embryonic heart, growing forward from the posterior wall of the auricles and projecting into the left auricle. Its office is to prevent the regurgitation of blood from the left auricle into the right one.—V. of the gall-bladder. See Heister's v.—V's of the lymphatics. Semilunar folds of the inner coat placed opposite each other, as in the veins. [C.]—V's of the rectum. See Houston's v's.—V. of the trigone. A depression between the anterior pillars of the fornix cerebri which Vieussens erroneously believed to be an opening leading into the fifth ventricle. [I, 55 (K).]—V. of Tulpius. See Ileo-cæcal v.—V. of Vieussens. Ger., Hirnklappe, vorderes Marksegel. A triangular lamina of white nerve substance which bridges over the interspace between the superior cerebellar peduncles, forming a portion of the roof of the fourth ventricle. It expands posteriorly, where it is connected with the lower surface of the vermiform process. It is crossed by the lingula, and gives origin to the fourth cranial nerve. [I, 15 (K).]

VALVULA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{2}l(wa^{3}l)'vu^{2}l(wu^{4}l)-a^3. Dim. of valva, a valve. See VALVE, VALVULE, and VALVE of Vieussens.—Valvulæ atrio-ventriculares. The mitral and tricuspid valves. [L.]—V. bicuspidalis. See Mitral VALVE.—V. cæci. See Ileo-cæcal VALVE.—V. anterior. See VALVE of Vieussens.—V. cerebelli posterior. The posterior medullary velum. [L, 57 (α, 50).]—V. hymenalis urethræ virilis. See V. fossæ navicularis.—Valvulæ intestinales, Valvulæ Kerkringii. See Valvulæ conniventes.—V. lacrimalis (inferior). See V. sacci lacrimalis inferior.—V. lacrimalis superior. See V. sacci lacrimalis superior.—V. magna. See VALVE of Vieussens.—V. magni cerebri. Of Prochaska, the superior cerebellar peduncles. [I, 3 (K).]—V. ovalis. Of Vicq d'Azyr, see VALVE of Vieussens.—V. processus vermiformis. A mucous fold surrounding the small orifice by which the vermiform appendix opens into the cæcum. [L, 57 (α, 50).]—V. sacci lacrimalis inferior. A fold of mucous membrane at the junction of the lacrymal duct and sac. [L, 31, 332.]—V. sacci lacrimalis superior. A crescentic fold of the mucous membrane of the lacrymal sac below the openings of the canaliculi lacrimales. [L, 31, 332.]—V. semicircularis posterior inferior. Of Tarini, the posterior medullary velum. [I, 3 (K).]—Valvulæ semilunares arteriarum. See Semilunar VALVES of the heart.—V. semilunaris. 1. See Posterior medullary VELUM. 2. The third eyelid, or plica semilunaris; an old term for a fold of conjunctiva, inclosing a layer of dense fibro-connective tissue between its folds, lying in the conjunctival cul-de-sac in birds and some other of the lower mammals. [F.]—V. semilunaris arteriæ pulmonalis. See Pulmonary VALVE.—V. semilunaris (cerebelli, seu Farini). See Posterior medullary VELUM.—V. semilunaris (sæpti atriorum), V. sinus sinistri. See VALVE of the foramen ovale.—V. triglochis. See Tricuspid VALVE.—V. urethræ pylorica. See SPHINCTER urethræ prostaticus.—V. vaginæ, V. vaginalis. See HYMEN (2d def.).—Valvulæ venarum (seu venosæ). See VALVES of a vein.—V. vesicæ, V. vesico-urethralis. A valvular membrane found in middle-aged men at the junction of the internal portion of the urethra and the neck of the bladder. It is formed by hypertrophied prostatic fibres and fibres of the sphincter urethræ. [α, 34.]—V. Vieussenii. 1. See VALVE of Vieussens. 2. A fold at the opening of the great coronary vein of the heart. [L, 332.]—V. willisiana. See VALVE of Vieussens.

VALVULAR, adj. Va^{2}lv'u^{2}l-a^{3}r. Lat., valvularis. Fr., valvulaire. 1. Pertaining to a valve. 2. See VALVATE.

VALVULE, n. Va^{2}lv'u^{2}l. Lat., valvula (dim. of valva, a valve). Fr., v. Ger., Kläppchen. 1. A little valve. [α, 35.] 2. Of Wilder, see VALVE of Vieussens.—Grande v. du cerveau (Fr.). See VALVE of Vieussens.—V. antérieure (Fr.). See LAMINA cinerea.—V. de Cruveilhier (Fr.). VALVULITIS (Lat.), n. f. Va^{2}l(wa^{3}l)-vu^{2}l(wu^{4}l)-i(e)'ti^{2}s. Gen., -it'idos (-idis). From valvula, a valvule. Inflammation of one or more of the valves of the heart. [D, 68.]

VALVULOTOME, n. Va^{2}lv'u^{2}l-o-tom. From valvula (q. v.), and τομή, a cutting. Fr., v. 1. An instrument devised by François-Franck for removing pieces from the aortic valves of a living animal for the purpose of studying the effects of such mutilation. It is introduced by way of the carotid artery. ["Gaz. hebd. de méd. et de chir.," Feb. 5, 1886, p. 94.] 2. A catheter-like instrument having a concealed knife devised by Mercier for anterior or posterior incision of the prostatic urethra. [α, 34.]

VALYLENE, n. Va^{2}l'i^{2}l-en. Fr., valylène. Ger., Valylen. A liquid hydrocarbon, C_5H_6. [B, 270 (α, 38).]

VAMPYRISMUS (Lat.), n. m. Va^{2}mp(wa^{3}mp)-i^{2}r(u^{6}r)-i^{2}z(i^{2}s)'-mu^{3}s(mu^{4}s). From vampyrus, a vampire. A form of delusional insanity epidemic early in the eighteenth century in Hungary, Siberia, etc., in which the patient believed that dead enemies had left their graves in order to suck his blood. [L, 57 (α, 50).]

VANAD (Ger.), n. Va^{3}n-a^{3}d'. See VANADIUM.—V'oxyd. Vanadium pentoxide; in connection with a qualifying adjective, a vanadic oxysalt. [B.]—V'oxydul. Vanadium trioxide ; in connection with a qualifying adjective, a vanadious oxysalt. [B.]

VANADATE, n. Va^{2}n'a^{2}d-at. A salt of vanadic acid. [B.]

VANADIC, adj. Va^{2}n-a^{2}d'i^{2}k. Fr., vanadique. Containing vanadium as a pentad radicle. [α, 48.]—V. acid. Fr., acide vanadique. Ger., Vanadinsäure, Vanadsäure. An acid formed by the union of vanadium pentoxide with water. The v. acids are : (1) Normal v. acid, or orthov' acid, H_3VO_4, known only through its salts, the vanadates ; (2) metav' acid, HVO_3 ; and (3) pyrov' acid, $H_4V_2O_7(=V_2O_5-2H_2O)$. [B.]

VANADIOUS, adj. Va^{2}n-a^{2}d'i^2-u^{3}s. Containing vanadium as a trivalent radicle. [B.]

VANADIUM (Lat.), n. n. Va^{2}n(wa^{3}n)-ad(a^{3}d)'i^2-u^{3}m(u^{3}m). From Vanadis, a Scandinavian goddess. Fr., v. Ger., Vanad. A metallic element discovered in 1801 by Del Rio, and rediscovered in 1830 by Seftröm, who gave it its present name. It is found in various rare minerals. It forms a light-grayish micro-crystalline powder, not readily oxidized, and infusible at a red heat. In composition, it acts usually as a pentad, but combines with oxygen in five different proportions, forming compounds resembling those of nitrogen. Symbol, V ; atomic weight, 51·2 ; sp. gr., 5·5. [B, 3.]—V. pentoxide. Ger., Vanadoxyd. Vanadic oxide, V_2O_5, yellowish-red prismatic crystals. [B, 3.]

VANADYL, n. Va^{2}n'a^{2}d-i^{2}l. Fr., vanadyle. Ger., V. A trivalent radicle, (VO)''', occurring in the vanadic salts obtained by the action of vanadium pentoxide on acids. [B, 3.]

VANDA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{3}nd(wa^{3}nd)'a^3. A genus of epiphytal orchids. The Vandeæ (Fr., vandées) are a tribe of the Orchideæ. [α, 35.]—V. Roxburghii. See AERIDES tessellatum.—V. scripta. A species found on trees in the Moluccas. The sap is used in aphthæ, the fruit in diarrhœa and dysentery, and the juicy pulp of the stem, in combination with curcuma-root, to heal ulcers and to hasten suppuration. [α, 35.]—V. spathulata. An East Indian species. The powdered leaves are used in diarrhœa and dysentery, the flowers as a pectoral, and the entire plant, mixed with oil, in skin diseases. [α, 35.]

VANDELLIA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{3}nd-e^{2}l'li^2-a^3. From Vandelli, an Italian botanical writer. Fr., vandelle, vandellie. A genus of scrophulaceous herbs. [α, 35.]—V. diffusa. Fr., vandelle (ou vandellie) étalée. Bitter-blain ; an emetic, diuretic, and purgative species found in tropical America ; used in fevers, in liver derangements, as an anthelminthic, and as a detergent. [α, 35]—V. pratensis. See SCOPARIA dulcis.

VANELLUS (Lat.), n. m. Va^{2}n(wa^{3}n)-e^{2}l'lu^{3}s(lu^{4}s). From vannus, a fan. A genus of birds, of the Charadrinæ. [α, 48.]—V. cristatus. Fr., vanneau. The lapwing ; a European bird resembling a plover. [α, 48.]

VANGUERIA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{3}n^2-ge^{2}r'i^2-a^3. Fr., vanguier. A genus of shrubs or trees of the tribe Vanguerieæ of the Rubiaceæ. In the Mauritius the leaves of some species are used as an antidysenteric and in strangulated hernia. [α, 35.]—V. spinosa. An East Indian species. The bark is febrifuge. [α, 35.]

VANILLA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{2}n(wa^{3}n)-i^{2}l'la^3. From Sp. vainilla, a v.-bean. Fr., vanillier (1st def.), vanille [Fr. Cod.], fruit (ou gousse) de vanille (2d def.). Ger., Vanille. 1. A genus of tropical climbing orchids. The Vanillaceæ, Vanilleæ, or Vanillidæ are a tribe of orchids (of Bentham and Hooker, a subtribe of the Neottieæ). [α, 35.] 2. The fruit of V. planifolia (of V. aromatica [Belg. Ph.]). [α, 38.]—Bastard v. See V. cimarona.—Bourbon v. An inferior variety of v.-bean, said to contain from 1·9 to 2·48 per cent. of vanillin. [α, 35.]—Chocolata cum v. [Fr. Cod.] (seu vanillæ). Fr., chocolat à la vanille [Fr. Cod.]. A mixture of 100 parts of chocolate (the chocolat simple of the Fr. Cod. without the cinnamon) and 4 of vanilla saccharata. [B, 113.]—Cream v. syrup. A mixture of 3 fluidrachms of strong fluid extract of v., a pint of simple syrup, and a pint of cream syrup. [B, 5 (α, 21).]—Essence of v., Fluid extract of v. A preparation essentially equivalent to the tincture of v., but of about two thirds its strength. [B, 81 (α, 38).]—Fructus vanillæ. See V. (2d def.).—Mexican v. The finest variety of v. [α, 35.]—Pulvis vanillæ cum saccharo. See V. saccharata.—Rio v. See under V. palmarum.—Small v. See V. cimarona.—Tinctura vanillæ. Fr., teinture de vanille. A preparation made by macerating 1 part of v. (2d def.) with 5 parts of alcohol of sp. gr. 0·894 for 12 hours, pouring off the liquid, adding 2 parts of sugar to the residue, and treating this in a percolator with the reserved liquid and with enough more alcohol to make 10 parts [U. S. Ph.] ; or by macerating v. several days with five times as much dilute alcohol [Ger. Ph., Swiss Ph., T. A.] (70-per-cent. alcohol [Russ. Ph.], 80-per-cent. alcohol [Belg. Ph.]), or ten times as much 80-per-cent. alcohol [Fr. Cod.]. [B, 95 (α, 38).]—V. aromatica. Ger., gewürzhafte Vanille. A species with very long cylindrical capsules, which form a part of the v. of commerce. Probably a number of species have been described under this name. The plant is used empirically in syphilis and as a vulnerary. [α, 35.]—V.-bean. See V. (2d def.).—V. cimarona. Small, bastard, or wild v.; the fruit of V. silvestris. [α, 35.]—V. claviculata. Fr., liane à blessures. Ger., keulenfrüchtige Vanille. Purple-lip orchid, green withe of the West Indies ; a v.-yielding species (identified by some with V. planifolia) growing in the hot and damp regions of America and Africa ; used like V. aromatica. [α, 35.]—V. disease. See VANILLISM.—V. leg, V. ley. Fr., vanille lec. The vainilla mansa of the Spaniards ; the larger and more valuable v. derived from V. sativa. [α, 35.]—V. palmarum. A Brazilian species affording an inferior v. (Rio v.) containing 1·03 per cent. of vanillin. [α, 35.]—V. planifolia. V.-plant, a climbing species growing in moist, shady forests ; indigenous to eastern Mexico and other parts of tropical America, but cultivated in Réunion, the Seychelles, Java, etc., for its fruit, which forms the bulk of the v. of commerce. This is a fleshy pod about $\frac{3}{10}$ or $\frac{4}{10}$ inch wide and 3 to 12 inches long, hooked at the base, and opening lengthwise by two unequal valves. It contains a viscid, aromatic juice in which are imbedded numerous black seeds. Its peculiar fragrance is due to vanillin, which is contained in the juice or pulp, and is diffused throughout the entire fruit when it is dried. The surface of the pod is finely furrowed and often beset with crystals (see VANILLE givrée). It has been used as an excitant, stomachic, stimulant, etc., but is chiefly employed for flavoring. V. is said by Grasset to produce paralysis of the spinal cord and motor nerves in frogs. [α, 35.]—V. pompona. A South American species said to yield vanillon. [α, 35.]—V. saccharata. Fr., poudre de vanille sucrée. A preparation made by triturating 1 part of v. (2d def.) with 9 parts of sugar (10 of sugar and 5 of milk-sugar [Russ. Ph.]). The Fr. Cod. allows as a substitute a mixture of 1 part of crystallized vanillin dissolved in the least possible 90-per-cent. alcohol and 49 parts of sugar. [B, 95 (α, 38).]—V. sativa. The cultivated v.-plant, a variety of V. planifolia (or, according to some, of V. aromatica). [α, 35.]—V. silvestris. A variety of V. planifolia (according to some, a distinct species). Its fruit (v. cimarona) is smaller and less aromatic than that of V. sativa. [α, 35.]

VANILLIC ACID, n. Va^{2}n-i^{2}l'i^{2}k. An isomeric variety, $C_8H_8O_4=C_6[CO.OH,H,OCH_3,OH,H,H,]$, of methylprotocatechuic acid, occurring as acicular crystals. [B, 3 (α. 38) ; B, 4.]

VANILLIC ALDEHYDE, n. See VANILLIN.

VANILLIN, n. Va^{2}n-i^{2}l'i^{2}n. Lat., vanillina [Fr. Cod.]. Fr., vanilline [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., V. A substance, $C_8H_8O_3=C_6[CHO,H,OCH_3,OH,H,H,]$, found in the pods of Vanilla planifolia and in Siam benzoin, asafœtida, etc. It forms white acicular crystals, of fragrant odor and pungent taste ; an isomeric variety, isovanillin, $C_6[COH,H,OH,OCH_3,H,H,]$, forms prismatic crystals. [B, 3 (α, 38) ; B, 4, 5.]—V. glucoside. See GLUCOVANILLIN.

VANILLISM, n. Va^{2}n-i^{2}l'i^{2}zm. Fr., vanillisme. A disease occurring among those who sort vanilla-pods, due to contact with an insect found on the pods. The chief symptoms are pruritus with redness and swelling of the surface and some evidences of general malaise. ["Drugg. Circ. and Chem. Gaz.," Jan., 1884, p. 14 (B).]—Alimentary v. V. attributed to the ingestion of vanilla. Poisoning by tyrotoxicon has erroneously been called vanillism. [α, 34.]

VANILLON, n. Va^{2}n-i^{2}l'o^{2}n. An inferior variety of vanilla (fruit of Vanilla pompona), occurring as a broad, fleshy pod without efflorescence (givre) on its surface. It is of poor fragrance and contains, besides vanillin, benzaldehyde. [α, 35 ; B, 270 (α, 38).]

VANILLYL ALCOHOL, n. Va^{2}n-i^{2}l'i^{2}l. A substance, $C_8H_{10}O_3=C_6H_3(OH)(OCH_3)CH_2.OH$, occurring as prismatic crystals. [B, 3 (α, 38).]

VAO, n. An arrow-poison from the United States of Colombia, containing corrovaline ; supposed to be adulterated corroval. [α, 35.]

VAPEUR (Fr.), n. Va^3-pu^{5}r. Vapor ; in the pl., v's, see VAPORS.

VAPOR (Lat.), n. m. Vap(wa^{3}p)'o^{2}r. Gen., -por'is. Gr., ἀτμός. Fr., vapeur. Ger., Dampf. 1. A visible gaseous exhalation. [α, 48.] 2. See INHALATION (3d def.). 3. VAREC (Fr.), VARECH (Fr.), n's. Va^{3}r-e^{2}k. Ger., Varek. See FUCUS.—V. vésiculeux [Fr. Cod.]. See FUCUS vesiculosus.

VARENI, n. See AMBULO.

VARENNEA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{3}r-e^{2}n'ne^2-a^3. The genus Eysenhardtia. [a, 35.]—V. polystachya. Sp., cuate, taray de México [Mex. Ph.]. A Mexican species, used in nephritis, cystitis, and chicken-cholera. The gum has the properties of kino. [J. M. Maisch, "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," Mar., 1886, p. 122 (a, 17).]

VARENNES (Fr.), n. Va^3-re^{2}n. A place in the department of the Maine-et-Loire, France, where there is a gaseous chalybeate spring. [L, 49 (a, 14).]

VARIATION, n. Var-i^2-a'shu^{3}n. Lat., variatio (from variare, to change). The act or process of changing in form, character, rate of motion, etc.; also the amount or degree of such change. [a, 48.]—Double v. [Du Bois-Reymond]. The double current observed at any point in a muscle or nerve, caused by the passage through it of a single induction shock. [Mayer, "Arch. f. Anat. u. Phys.," 1868, p. 655 (K).]—Negative v. of the muscle current. Of Du Bois-Reymond, the diminution of the muscle current of a muscle that yields a strong electrical current, produced by throwing the muscle into a state of tetanic contraction by stimulating its motor nerve. [a, 34.]

VARICE (Fr.), n. Va^3-res. See VARIX.

VARICELLA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{2}r(wa^{3}r)-i^{2}s(i^{2}k)-el'la^3. Fr., varicelle, variolette, vérette, fausse vérole, vérole bâtarde, petite vérole volante, vérolette, pustules de poulet, nesles. Ger., Varicelle, Schafblattern, Spitzblattern, falsche Pocken. 1. Chicken- (or swine-, or sheep-, or glass-, or water-) pox, water-jags, hives; a mild infectious disease of children, characterized by an eruption of vesicles on the skin and mucous membranes. In the usual form, commonly known as chicken-pox, the vesicles are superficial, with clear contents, and the disease is of short duration. It is sometimes followed by cicatrices, but usually not. A severer form, with deeper-seated or purulent efflorescences, is sometimes termed swine-pox. [G.] Cf. V. lentiformis, V. coniformis, and V. globularis. 2. See VARIOLA mitigata. 3. See VARIOLOID.—Conoidal v. See V. coniformis.—Gangrenous v. Lat., v. gangrænosa. V. characterized by gangrenous efflorescences. [G.] Cf. VACCINIA gangrænosa.—Pustular umbilicated v. See VARIOLA varicelloides.—Pustular v. See VARIOLOID.—V. acuminata. V. in which the vesicles are acuminate. [a, 34.]—V. bullosa. See V.—V. cellulosa. See VARIOLA varicelloides.—V. coniformis, V. conoides, Varicellæ duræ ovales. Swine-pox;. v. in which the vesicles are conical, seated upon inflamed bases with hard borders, and apt to be followed by scars. [G, 9, 11.]—Varicellæ emphysematosæ. Ger., Windpocken. V. in which the vesicles contain air. [G, 11.]—V. globata, V. globularis. Swine-pox, hives; v. in which the vesicles are rounded. They are larger than in v. lentiformis, but attended with less induration than in v. coniformis. [D, 1; G, 9.]—V. hæmorrhagica. V. attended with hæmorrhage into the vesicles. [G.]—P. infantum. See V. (1st def.).—V. lenticularis, V. lentiformis, Varicellæ lymphaticæ. Ger., Linsenpocke. V. in which the efflorescences are lentiform, superficial, but slightly elevated, and not followed by scars. [G, 9.]—V. ovalis. V. in which the vesicles are oval. [a, 34.]—V. papularis. See VARIOLA cornea and VARIOLA verrucosa.—V. prurigo. Of Hutchinson, an itching cutaneous eruption, consisting of papules, vesicles, and pustules, which sometimes follows v. and also vaccination. ["Brit. Med. Jour.," 1875, i, pp. 631, 663, 702 (G).]—V. pustularis. V. in which the contents of the efflorescences are more or less purulent. [G, 7.]—Varicellæ sine varicellis. Of Wilson, varioloid without eruption. [G, 62.]—V. solidescens. See VARIOLA cornea and VARIOLA verrucosa.—V. syphilitica. Varicellaform syphiloderm (q. v.). When occurring in scattered efflorescences it is known as V. syphilitica disseminata; when confluent, as V. syphilitica confluens (see PEMPHIGUS syphiliticus). [G.]—V. varioloidea. See VARIOLOID.—Varicellæ ventosæ. See Varicellæ emphysematosæ.—Varicellæ verrucosæ. See VARIOLA verrucosa.—V. vesicularis. V. in which vesicles form with clear contents. [G, 7.]

VARICELLE (Fr.), n. Va^3-re-se^{2}l. See VARICELLA.—V. à petites vésicules. See V.—V. à vésicules globuleuses, V. globuleuse proprement dite. See VARICELLA globata.—V. tronquée. See VARIOLOID.

VARICELLOID, n. Va^{2}r-i^2-se^{2}l'oid. See Abortive SMALL-POX.

VARICIFORM, adj. Va^{2}r-i^{2}s'i^2-fo^{2}rm. From varix (q. v.), and forma, form. Like a varix. [a, 48.]

VARICOBLEPHARON (Lat.), n. n. Va^{2}r(wa^{3}r)-i^{2}k-o(o^3)-ble^{2}f'a^{2}r(a^{3}r)-o^{2}n. From varix (q. v.), and βλέφαρον, the eyelid. An old term for a varicose tumor or swelling of the eyelid. [F.]

VARICOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Va^{2}r(va^{3}r)-i^{2}k-o(o^3)-sel(kal)'e(a); in Eng., va^{2}r'i^{2}k-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es. From varix (q. v.), and κήλη, a tumor. Fr., varicocèle. Ger., V., Krampfaderbruch. An enlarged and tortuous condition of the veins of the pampiniform plexus. [a, 34.]—Ovarian v. Of Richet, a varicose enlargement of the veins of the broad ligament. [a, 34.]—Utero-ovarian v. V. in the female. [a, 34.]

VARICOCÉLECTOMIE (Fr.), n. Va^{3}r-ek-o-sal-e^{2}kt-om-e. Excision of a varicocele. [a, 34.]

VARICOMPHALUS (Lat.), n. m. Va^{2}r(wa^{3}r)-i^{2}k-o^{2}mf'a^{2}l(a^{3}l)-u^{3}s(u^{4}s). From varix (q. v.), and ὀμφαλός, the navel. Fr., varicomphale. Ger., Krampfadernabelbruch. A varicose tumor at the navel. [E.] See also CAPUT Medusæ.

VARICOSE, adj. Va^{2}r'i^{2}k-os. Lat., varicosus. Fr., variqueux. Ger., krampfaderig. Pertaining to a varix; of a vein, abnormally dilated. [a, 48.]

VARICOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Va^{2}r(wa^{3}r)-i^{2}k-os'i^{2}s. Gen., -os'eos (-osis). From varix (q. v.). A varicose state of the veins of a part.

VARICOSITY, n. Va^{2}r-i^{2}k-o^{2}s'i^{2}t-i^2. Ger., Varikosität. See VARIX and VARICOSIS.

VARICOTOMY, n. Va^{2}r-i^{2}k-o^{2}t'o^{2}m-i^2. From varix (q. v.), and τομή, a cutting. See CIRSOTOMY.

VARICULA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{2}r(wa^{3}r)-i^{2}k'u^{2}l(u^{4}l)-a^3. Dim. of varix (q. v.). See CIRSOPHTHALMIA.

VARIETY SPRINGS, n. pl. Va^{2}r-i'e^{2}t-i^2. A place in Augusta County, Virginia, where there are gaseous springs. [Anderson (a, 14).]

VARIKOSITÄT (Ger.), n. Va^{3}r-ek-oz-et-at'. See VARICOSITY.—Nervenv'en. The varicosities seen on the axis-fibrillæ of nerves, especially near their termination. [J.]

VARIOLA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{2}r(wa^{3}r)-i(i^2)'o^{2}l-a^3. Written also in the pl., variolæ. From varius, mottled. See SMALL-POX.—Black v. See V. hæmorrhagica.—Congenital v. V. of new-born children due to intra-uterine infection. The pustules are usually discrete; they do not develop as when exposed to the air, and form no crusts. It is usually fatal. [a, 34.]—Emphysematous v. V. in which the pustules contain gas. [D, 74.] Cf. V. siliquosa.—False v. See VARICELLA.—Hæmorrhagic v. See V. hæmorrhagica and Variolæ sanguineæ.—Tuberculous v. V. in which certain of the pustules take the form of cutaneous tubercles. [D, 74.]—V. acutissima. See V. maligna.—V. amboinensis. See FRAMBŒSIA.—Variolæ anomalæ. 1. V. complicated with other diseases. 2. V. characterized by an unusual or anomalous exanthem. [G.]—V. apyretica. V. of a very mild form, attended with little or no fever. [G.]—V. Arabum. V. of the Arabians.—V. benigna. V. of a mild type, and attended with a comparatively superficial eruption. [G.]—Variolæ bullatæ. V. lymphatica in which the efflorescences coalesce so as to form large bullæ. [G, 11.]—V. cohærens. V. in which the efflorescences barely touch each other, or in which confluent pustules occur here and there in rows; intermediate between v. discreta and v. confluens. [D, 1; G, 11.]—V. confluens. Ger., Fliesspocken. 1. V. in which the papules are small, less prominent than in the discrete form, and so numerous that even on the first appearance of the eruption there is hardly any distinct separation between them. They extend over the greater part of the body. [D, 1.] 2. V. in which the pustules form and run into each other; a variety that is often but not necessarily malignant. [G.]—V. cornea. Stone-pox, horn-pox; a variety of small-pox in which, in place of pustules, solid papular efflorescences appear upon the skin. [G.] Cf. V. verrucosa.—V. corymbosa. V. in which the efflorescences occur in groups or clusters; usually a severe form of the disease, and often fatal. [G.]—V. cruenta. See V. hæmorrhagica.—Variolæ crystallinæ. See VARICELLA and V. lymphatica.—V. curta. See VARIOLOID.—Variolæ cuspidatæ. V. the pustules of which are pointed or acuminate. [G, 11.]—V. discreta, V. distincta. V. in which the pustules remain distinct and separate. [G.]—V. emphysematica. See Emphysematous v.—V. equina. Fr., eaux aux jambes, javart. Ger., Mauke, Fussrose. (Pustular) grease, grease-pox, horse-pox; a contagious disease of horses, attended with fever and an erysipelatous or eczematous exanthem in the region of the pastern joint, furnishing a clear, yellowish, odorous, and greasy discharge, the hair falling out where the eruption appears. The disease is communicable to man, and is believed to be allied to cow-pox. [G.]—V. gangrænosa. See Gangrenous SMALL-POX.—V. gastrica. V. with gastric complications. [a, 34.]—Variolæ hæmatoideæ. See Variolæ sanguineæ.—V. hæmorrhagica. Ger., schwarze Blattern. V. (usually of a grave form) associated with hæmorrhages into the efflorescences, giving the pustules and crusts a blackish color. There is also a tendency to hæmorrhage from the mucous surfaces. [D, 1; G.] See also Variolæ sanguineæ, V. maligna, and V. petechialis.—Variolæ halituosæ (seu hybridæ, seu illegitimæ). See VARICELLA.—Variolæ inoculatorum. V. of inoculators; said to be a modified v., which consisted in the appearance of a pustule here and there upon the hands of those who practiced small-pox inoculation or of such as were in the habit of handling children with v., or occurring in persons who had already had small-pox. [G, 11.]—Variolæ insitivæ. V. acquired by inoculation. [G.]—Variolæ irregulares. V. that pursues an irregular course. [G, 11.]—V. lymphatica. V. in which the efflorescences are filled with clear lymph. [G, 11.]—V. maligna. Fr., variole foudroyante. Ger., faulige Blattern. A very severe and often fatal form of v., chiefly characterized by the presence of a hæmorrhagic tendency. The exanthem is marked by intense, diffuse redness and swelling of the skin, especially of the face, sometimes together with papular efflorescences or bloody vesicles, but without pustulation. Hæmorrhagic extravasations take place in the skin, forming deep-red maculæ or petechiæ, and severe hæmorrhages occur from the mucous orifices. [G.]—Variolæ miliares. V. with pustules of about the size of a millet-seed or a little larger. [Plenck (G, 11).]—V. mitigata. A mild form of v. without severe fever, and with comparatively few efflorescences. [G, 7.]—V. modificata. See VARIOLOID.—V. morbilli. V. complicated with measles. [G.]—Variolæ naturales. V. acquired by accidental (natural) infection. [G, 11.]—V. nigra. See V. hæmorrhagica and V. maligna.—Variolæ nothæ. See VARICELLA.—Variolæ ovinæ. See SHEEP-POX (1st def.).—V. petechi- alis. V. attended with hæmorrhagic efflorescences, either in the form of petechiæ in the interspaces between the pustules, or of bloody effusions within the pustules themselves, in consequence of which their contents become red. [D, 11.]—Variolæ præcursores. V. in which one or more pustules appear several days before the fever or just at the beginning of the stage of invasion; supposed by Plenck to indicate a favorable issue. [G, 11.]—V. puerperalis. Small-pox in a lying-in woman.—Variolæ purulentæ. See V. pustulosa.—V. pusillæ [Heberden]. See VARICELLA.—V. pustulosa. The ordinary form of v., characterized by a pustular exanthem. [G.]—Variolæ regulares. V. that pursues a regular course. [H, 11.]—Variolæ sanguineæ. V. hæmorrhagica with black pustules "containing and discharging blood, with a black, gangrenous base." [G, 11.]—V. semiconfluens. 1. V. in which the pustules partly coalesce. [G.] 2. V. confluens limited to a portion of the cutaneous surface. [D, 5.]—V. serosa. See V. lymphatica.—V. siliquosa, Variolæ siliquosæ. V. exhibiting pod-like vesicles, the contents having been absorbed. [G, 11.]—V. silvatica, V. silvestris. See VARICELLA.—Variolæ simplices crystallinæ. See VARICELLA.—V. sine eruptione (seu sine exanthemate). V. without eruption. [G.] Cf. Variolous FEVER.—V. sine variolis. V. without an eruption.—V. spuria. See VARIOLOID and VARICELLA.—Variolæ suillæ. See SWINE-POX.—V. syphilitica. See Variolaform SYPHILODERM.—V. truncata. See VARIOLOID.—V. tutoria. See VACCINIA.—Variolæ umbilicatæ. V. the pustules of which are umbilicated. [G, 11.]—V. vaccina atrophica. Ger., verkümmerte (oder warzige) Schutzpocken, Steinpocken. Stone-pox; an abortive form of vaccinia in which the pock, instead of developing normally, forms only a papular or small vesicular efflorescence and soon dries, with the production of a small brownish-yellow scab resembling a wart, and is not followed by a scar. The contents of the vesicle may or may not be inoculable. [G.]—V. vaccina bullosa. Ger., Blasenpocken. Vaccinia characterized by the appearance at the site of inoculation, in place of the ordinary papular or vesicular efflorescences, of single bullæ with watery contents which dry into crusts, are not further inoculable, and are not generally followed by scars, though sometimes deep ulcers form beneath the scabs, leaving deep cicatrices. [G.]—Variolæ vaccinæ [Jenner]. See VACCINIA and COW-POX.—V. vaccina erysipelatosa. Ger., Vaccinio-Erysipel, Impferysipel. Vaccinia complicated with erysipelas proceeding from the point of vaccination at the period of maturation and spreading, with pain, swelling, and redness, over the arm and sometimes on the body. [G.]—V. vaccina furunculosa. Ger., Vaccinefurunkel. A form of vaccinia in which, at the site of inoculation, a pea-sized red tubercle forms which suppurates and presents the appearance of a follicular furuncle, the contents of which are not inoculable, and which is not followed by a characteristic scar. [G.]—V. vaccina herpetica. Ger., Eczempocken, Krätzpocken. Vaccinia in which, on the third day after vaccination, there appear at the point of inoculation a number of watery vesicles attended with itching, which leads to rubbing or scratching of the part and rupture of the vesicles, together with the development of a surrounding eczema. [G, 3.]—V. vaccina pemphigodes. See V. vaccina bullosa.—V. vaccinatorum. See VARIOLOID.—V. vaccina ulcerosa. Ger., Vaccinegeschwür. Vaccinia characterized by the appearance, at the seat of vaccination, of an ulcer believed to be due to the presence of some extraneous virus. It is often attended with constitutional disturbance. ["Sem. méd.," Nov. 27, 1889, p. 439 (α, 18); G.]—V. varicelloides. See Abortive SMALL-POX and VARIOLOID.—V. vera. Small-pox as distinguished from varioloid. [D.]—V. verrucosa. Wart-pox; a mild form of v. in which the efflorescences fail to develop fully, not passing the papular stage, and begin to subside after a few days. [G.] Cf. Variolæ verrucosæ.—Variolæ verrucosæ. V. attended with an eruption of "hard, pointed papulæ resembling atheromatous material." [G, 11.]—Variolæ volaticæ. See VARICELLA.

VARIOLAD, n. Va^{2}r′i^{2}-o^{2}l-a^{2}d. One of the active or infectious elements or germs of small-pox virus. [Farr (α, 18).]

VARIOLAR, adj. Va^{2}r-i′o^{2}l-a^{3}r. Lat., variolaris. See VARIOLATE and VARIOLOUS.

VARIOLARIA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{2}r(wa^{3}r)-i^{2}-o^{2}l-a(a^{3})′ri^{2}-a^{3}. Fr., variolaire. From variola, small-pox. A genus of lichens. The Variolariaceæ (Variolariæ, Variolarieæ) are a division of the Idiothalameæ. [α, 35.]—V. amara. A species used as an anthelminthic and febrifuge. [α, 35.]

VARIOLARYNGITE (Fr.), n. Va^{3}-re-o-la^{3}-ra^{2}n^{2}-zhet. Laryngitis due to variola. [L, 41 (α, 14).]

VARIOLATE, adj. Va^{2}r-i′o^{2}l-at. Lat., variolatus. Having markings resembling the pits of small-pox. [α, 35.]

VARIOLATION, n. Va^{2}r-i^{2}-o^{2}l-a′shu^{3}n. From variola, small-pox. Ger., Blatterbelzen. The act of communicating variola. [D, 1.]—Artificial v. V. by inoculation. [D, 1.]

VARIOLATED, adj. Va^{2}r′i^{2}-o^{2}l-at-e^{2}d. Lat., variolatus. Fr., variolé. 1. Affected or inoculated with variola. 2. Pock-marked.

VARIOLI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Va^{2}r(wa^{3}r)-i(i^{2})′o^{2}l-i(e). An old term for variola. [G.]

VARIOLIC, adj. Va^{2}r-i′o^{2}l-i^{2}k. Lat., variolicus. Fr., variolique. 1. Variolous. 2. Pocky.

VARIOLIFORMIS (Lat.), adj. Va^{2}r(wa^{3}r)-i^{2}-o^{2}l-i^{2}-fo^{2}rm′i^{2}s. From variola (q. v.), and forma, form. Fr., varioliforme. Having the appearance of small-pox.

VARIOLINE, n. Va^{2}r-i′o^{2}l-en. Lat., variolinum. Ger., Pockengift, Blattergift. The specific virus of small-pox. [G.]

VARIOLOID, adj. Va^{2}r′i^{2}-o^{2}l-oid. Lat., varioloides (from variola, small-pox, and εἶδος, resemblance). Fr., varioloïde. Ger., v. Resembling variola; pertaining to the disease v.; as a n. (Lat., varioloides, variolois, varicella, varioloidea; Ger., V., Mittelpocken), small-pox modified by recent vaccination or by a previous attack of variola. It is usually milder in character and of shorter duration than ordinary variola, and the exanthem is apt to be less extensive and each efflorescence more superficial. [G.]

VARIOLOIS (Lat.), n. f. Va^{2}r(wa^{3}r)-i^{2}-o^{2}l′o^{2}-i^{2}s. Gen., -lo′idos (-idis). From variola (q. v.). 1. Variola mitigata. 2. Varioloid. [G.]—V. fimbriata. See CRASPEDECPHLOGIOIS.

VARIOLOUS, adj. Va^{2}r-i′o^{2}l-u^{3}s. Lat., variolosus. Fr., varioleux. Ger., variolös. Of the nature of or pertaining to variola. [G.]

VARIQUEUX (Fr.), adj. Va^{3}-re-ku^{5}. See VARICOSE.

VARIX (Lat.), n. m. and f. Var(wa^{3}r)′i^{2}x. Gen., var′icis. From varus, bent awry. Fr., varice. Ger., Aderbruch, Adergeschwulst, Aderknoten, Aderkropf, Blutadergeschwulst, Krampfader. A morbid dilatation of a vein; a varicosity. [C.]—Aneurysmal v. Fr., anévrysme de Pott (ou par érosion). A direct communication between an artery and a varicose vein, without any intervening sac. See also Varicose ANEURYSM and ANEURYSM by anastomosis.—Arterial v. A cirsoid aneurysm, especially one composed of a single dilated and tortuous artery. [E.]—Lymphatic v. V. of the lymphatic vessels. [α, 34.]—Varices arteriarum. See GEMMULÆ Hobokenii.—Varices gelatinosæ. Ger., Sulzknoten. Nodular accumulations of the gelatinous matter of the umbilical cord. [A, 112.]

VARUS (Lat.), adj. Var(wa^{3}r)′u^{3}s(u^{4}s). Bent awry, knock-kneed; as a n., see TALIPES v.

VARUS (Lat.), n. m. Var(wa^{3}r)′u^{3}s(u^{4}s). 1. An old term for acne. 2. See TALIPES v.—Equino-v. See EQUINO-V.—V. comedo. Acne punctata. [G.]—V. disseminatus. Acne disseminata. [G.]—V. équin (Fr.). VAS (Lat.), n. n. Va^{2}s(wa^{3}s). Gen., va′sis. Gr., ἀγγεῖον. See VESSEL.—V. aberrans. A vessel following an anomalous course or occupying an anomalous position. [L.]—V. aberrans Halleri. A long convoluted tube connected with the lower part of the canal of the epididymis or with the v. deferens. It has a blind extremity which lies in the lower part of the spermatic cord. [L, 31, 115, 142.]—V. aberrans inferius. A v. aberrans springing from the head of the epididymis. [L, 332.]—V. aberrans superius. See V. aberrans Halleri.—Vasa aberrantia bilifera. Biliary ducts in the triangular ligament of the liver, in its transverse fissure, and in other parts adjacent to the liver; commonly regarded as ducts of atrophied hepatic tissue, by some regarded as blood-vessels or lymphatic vessels. [L, 31.]—Vasa aberrantia media. Vasa aberrantia lying along the middle of the epididymis. [L.]—Vasa aberrantia testis. Certain convoluted vessels hanging free from the general substance of the epididymis, but communicating with its main tube, supposed to be vestiges of one or more of the tubes of the mesonephros. [A, 5.]—V. afferens glomeruli. The artery leading to a glomerulus of the kidney. [L.]—Vasa afferentia. Vessels conveying blood to a part. [L.]—Vasa afferentia of the Malpighian corpuscles. Branches of the interlobular arteries of the kidney from which the glomeruli are formed. [L, 31, 142.]—Vasa annularia. Ger., ringförmige Gefässe. In botany, those vessels whose membrane is thickened by successive cross-rings. [L, 49 (α, 14).]—V. capillare. See CAPILLARY (3d def.).—Vasa capreolaria. The arteries and veins of the spermatic cord. [A, 301, 322, 325.]—Vasa centralia retinæ. The central artery and veins of the retina. [L.]—Vasa chylifera. See Chyliferous VESSELS.—Vasa ciliaria. The ciliary arteries and veins. [L.]—V. deferens. Fr., canal déférent. Ger., Samenleiter. The excretory duct of the testicle, a tube about 2 feet long, the upward continuation of the canal of the epididymis. From the globus minor it passes up in the spermatic cord to the inguinal canal, through which it enters the abdominal cavity. Here it runs beneath the peritonæum across the external iliac vessels to the side of the bladder, where it curves backward and downward to the base of the prostate gland and unites with the duct from the seminal vesicle to form the ejaculatory duct. [L, 31, 142, 332.]—V. deferens mulieris. See OVIDUCT.—V. efferens glomeruli. The efferent vein from a glomerulus of the kidney. [L.]—Vasa efferentia corporis Malpighii. The venous twigs which emerge from the glomeruli of the kidney and form a dense network over the walls of the uriniferous tubules. [L.]—Vasa efferentia testis. Canals which continue those of the rete vasculosum, pierce the tunica albuginea beneath the globus major, form the coni vasculosi, and empty into the canal of the epididymis. [L, 349 (a, 34).]—V. spermaticum. See V. deferens.—Vasa umbilicalia. The umbilical arteries and veins.—Vasa vasorum. Small arteries and veins which supply blood to and return it from the coats of arteries, lymphatics, and veins. [L.]—Vasa vorticosa. Fr., vaisseaux tourbillonnés, tourbillons vasculaires. Ger., Wirbelvenen, büschelförmige Gefässe. The whorl-like arrangement of the veins of the chorioid just before they unite into the short, straight trunks which perforate the sclera obliquely to empty into the ophthalmic vein. [F.]

VASAL, adj. Va'sʼl. See VASCULAR.

VASCOA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{3}s'ko-a^{3}. Fr., v. A genus of the Leguminosæ. [a, 35.]—V. amplexicaulis. The licorice-bush of southern Africa. The roots are demulcent. [a, 35.]—V. perfoliata. A Cape-of-Good-Hope species. The root is diuretic. [a, 35.]

VASCULAR, adj. Va^{2}sk'u^{2}l-a^{3}r. Lat., vasculosus, vascularis (from vasculum [q. v.]). Fr., vasculaire, vasculeux. Ger., gefässreich, gefässig, vasculös. Having vessels; richly supplied with blood-vessels; pertaining to the circulatory system. The Vasculares of Lindley are a class of plants consisting of the Exogenæ and Endogenæ. [a, 35.]

VASCULARITY, n. Va^{2}sk-u^{2}l-a^{2}r'i^{2}t-i^{2}. Fr., vascularité. Ger., Vascularität, Gefassreichthum. The state of being vascular.

VASCULO-MOTOR, adj. Va^{2}sk''e^{2}l-o-mot'o^{2}r. Lat., vasculomotorius. See VASO-MOTOR.

VASCULOSE, adj. Va^{2}sk'u^{2}l-os. Lat., vasculosus. Fr., v. See VASCULAR; as a n., of Frémy, the ground substance of the vessels of plants. [B, 93 (a, 14).]

VASCULUM (Lat.), n. n. Va^{2}sk(wa^{3}sk)'u^{2}l(u^{4}l)-u^{3}m(u^{4}m). Dim. of vas, a vessel. 1. A vessel, especially a small vessel. [a, 48.] 2. A pitcher-shaped leaf. 3. A case used by botanists for freshly gathered specimens. [a, 35.]—V. aberrans Halleri (seu testis). See VAS aberrans Halleri.—V. testium. See SCROTUM.

VASELINE, n. Va^{2}s'e^{2}l-en. Lat., vaselinum. Fr., v. Ger., Vaselin. 1. Petroleum ointment; a commercial product for which the official petrolatum (q. v.) is intended as a substitute. [B.] 2. See Unguentum PARAFFINI.—White v. V. that is freed from volatile products by simmering over a water-bath and then filtered repeatedly through charcoal until it is opal-white. [a, 34.]

VASIFACTIVE, adj. Vas-i^{2}-fa^{2}kt'i^{2}v. From vas, a vessel, and facere, to make. See ANGEIOPLASTIC.

VASIFORM, adj. Va^{2}s'i^{2}-fo^{2}rm. Resembling a duct. [a, 35.]

VASO-CONSTRICTOR, n. Vas''o-ko^{2}n-stri^{2}kt'or. A nerve the action of which is to constrict blood-vessels.

VASODENTIN, n. Vas-o-de^{2}nt'i^{2}n. Fr., vaso-dentine. Ger., V. A variety of dentin which contains blood-vessels. [L.]

VASO-DILATOR, adj. Vas-o-di-lat'o^{2}r. From vas, a vessel, and dilatare, to dilate. Fr., vaso-dilatateur. Ger., vasodilatatorisch, gefässerweiternd. Causing active dilatation of the smaller arteries (said of certain nerves and drugs). [K.]

VASO-FORMATIVE, adj. Vas-o-fo^{2}rm'a^{2}t-i^{2}v. From vas, a vessel, and formare, to form. Fr., v.-f., vaso-formateur. Ger., vaso-formativ. See HÆMATOPOIETIC (2d def.).

VASO-INHIBITORY, adj. Vas-o-i^{2}n-hi^{2}b'i^{2}t-or-i^{2}. Producing or causing inhibition of the action of the vaso-motor nerves. [Landois (a, 34).]

VASO-MOTOR, adj. Vas-o-mot'o^{2}r. Fr., vaso-moteur, vasculo-moteur. Ger., vaso-motorisch. Causing constriction of the smaller arteries; pertaining to or constituting nerves or drugs so acting. [K, 9.]

VASO-MOTRICITÉ (Fr.), n. Va^{3}-zo-mo-tre-se-ta. The property possessed by blood-vessels of varying their calibres through the influence of the vaso-motor and vaso-inhibitory nerves. ["Sem. méd.," Oct. 9, p. 381 (a, 18).]

VASONEUROSE (Ger.), n. Va^{3}z-o-noir-oz'e^{2}. See ANGEIONEUROSIS.

VASO-SENSITIF (Fr.), adj. Va^{3}-so-sa^{3}n^{2}-se-tef. Pertaining to sensation and circulation (said of the nerves of blood-vessels). [A, 301 (a, 34).]

VASTUS (Lat.), adj. Va^{2}st(wa^{3}st)'u^{3}s(u^{4}s). Of large size, immense; as a n. m., the v. externus and v. internus regarded as one muscle. [L.]—V. anterior. See CRURÆUS.—V. externus. Ger., (äusserer) Unterschenkelstrecker. A muscle arising from the outer surface and base of the great trochanter, the line between this and the linea aspera, and the upper half of the outer border of the linea aspera. It passes down the outer and anterior surfaces of the thigh to be inserted into the tendon of the rectus femoris and the upper and outer margins of the patella. [L, 31, 142, 332.]—V. internus. Ger., innerer dicker Schenkelmuskel. A part of the quadriceps extensor cruris arising from the inner lip of the linea aspera of the femur. After blending with the cruræus and the tendon of the rectus femoris, it is inserted into the inner margin of the upper half of the patella. [L.]—V. lateralis [Ger. Anat. Soc.]. See V. externus.—V. longus. See ISCHIOTIBIALIS externus.—V. medialus [Ger. Anat. Soc.]. See V. internus.—V. medius. See CRURÆUS.

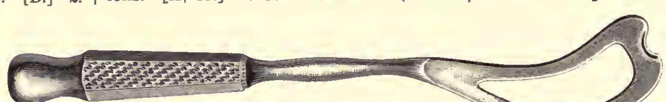
VATAIREA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{3}t-a^{2}r'e^{2}-a^{3}. Fr., vatairée. A genus of the Leguminosæ. [a, 35.]—V. guianensis. A Guiana tree. The seeds (Fr., graines à dartres) are used in skin diseases. [a, 35.]

VATERIA (Lat.), n. f. Va^{3}t-e^{2}r'i^{2}-a^{3}. From Vater, a German botanist. Fr., vatérie. A genus of tropical Asiatic trees. The Vaterieæ are a suborder of the Dipterocarpeæ. [a, 35.]—V. acuminata. A Ceylon tree yielding East Indian dammar. [a, 35.]—V. indica. 1. See V. acuminata. 2. Of Roxburgh, a species which is the source of Indian copal. The seeds contain an aromatic fat used in rheumatism, etc. The astringent bark is used to retard fermentation in making jaggery from toddy. [a, 35.]—V. malabarica. See V. indica (2d def.).

VATICINATIO (Lat.), n. f. Va^{2}t(wa^{3}t)-i^{2}s(i^{2}k)-i^{2}n-a(a^{3})'shi^{2}-(ti^{2})-o. Gen., -on'is. From vaticinari, to foretell. Prophesying. [D, 18.]—V. morientium. The last words of the dying. [D, 3.] Cf. ECSTASY.

VAUGNIÈRES (Fr.), n. Von-ye-e^{2}r. A place in the department of the Drôme, France, where there is a gaseous and chalybeate spring. [L, 49 (a, 14).]

VAULT, n. Va^{4}lt. See FORNIX.—V. of the cranium. The upper curved portion of the cranium. [L.]—V. of the vagina. Lat., fornix (seu fundus) vaginæ. Fr., fond du vagin. Ger., Scheidengewölbe, Scheidengrund. The upper portion of the vagina, forming, when the passage is distended, a v.-like structure surrounding the neck of the uterus.



VAUQUELINE (Fr.), n. Vok-len. An old term for strychnine. [B, 38, 93 (a, 14).]

VEAU (Fr.), n. Vo. A calf; also veal.—Gélée de v. médicinale. See Calf's-foot JELLY.—Suif de v. Veal suet. [B.]

VECORDIA (Lat.), n. f. Ve(wa)-ko^{2}rd'i^{2}-a^{3}. From vecors, destitute of reason. Of Kahlbaum, a mild form of insanity occurring mostly at the time of puberty. [A, 319.]—V. diastrephia. See DIASTREPHIA.

VECTIS (Lat.), n. m. Ve^{2}kt(we^{2}kt)'i^{2}s. Gen., vect'is. From vehere, to carry. Fr., levier. Ger., Hebel. 1. A lever; in obstetrics, an instrument, usually shaped like one of the blades of an obstetrical forceps, but with only the cephalic curve, used as a lever or tractor. It was probably invented by one of the Chamberlens. [A, 15.] 2. See LEMNISCUS (2d def.).—Baudelocque's v. A v. having a strong, large handle, and a shaft that is curved at its extremity and expanded into a fillet. [A, 15 (a, 34).]—Boddaert's v. A v. having a wooden handle holding a shaft that has a double curve: the shaft is concave from side to side, and scoop-shaped at its extremity. [A, 15 (a, 34).]—Hubert's v. A v. invented by the younger Hubert, of Louvain; used with a fillet. [A, 15.]—Roonhuysen's v. A v. supposed to be the original form, secretly sold to Roonhuysen by one of the Chamberlens. [A, 15.]—V. elevatorius. See Bone-ELEVATOR.—V. triploides. See Triploid ELEVATOR.—Veradini's v. A v. having a handle like a lithotrite, the shaft being long, concave, curved, and fenestrated. [A, 15 (a, 34).]

A VECTIS.

VEGETABLE, adj. Ve^{2}j'e^{2}t-a^{2}-bʼl. Lat., vegetabilis (from vegetare, to quicken). Fr., végétal. Ger., vegetabilisch, pflanzlich. Pertaining to or of the nature of plants; as a n., a plant, especially an esculent plant or the esculent portion of a plant. [a, 35.]

VEGETARIAN, n. Ve^{2}j-e^{2}t-a'ri^{2}-'n. Ger., Vegetarianer. A person who subsists exclusively on vegetable food. [L, 30, 57 (a, 14).]

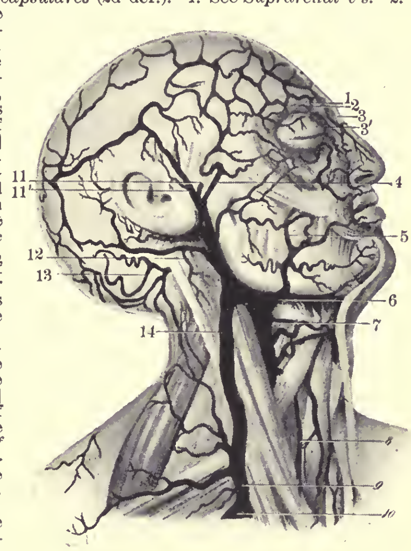
VEGETARIANISM, n. Ve^{2}j-e^{2}t-a'ri^{2}-'n-i^{2}z'm. Lat., vegetarianismus. Fr., végétarisme. The practice of living exclusively on vegetable food; also the doctrine that this is the only kind of food proper for man. [a, 48.]

VEGETATIO (Lat.), n. f. Ve^{2}j(we^{2}g)-e^{2}t-a(a^{3})'shi^{2}(ti^{2})-o. Gen., -on'is. See VEGETATION.—Vegetationes globulosæ cordis. Globular fibrinous vegetations found in the heart. [a, 34.]

VEGETATION, n. Ve^{2}j-e^{2}t-a'shu^{3}n. Lat., vegetatio (from vegetare, to quicken). Fr., végétation. Ger., V., Wachsthum (3d def.). 1. The vital processes (absorption, circulation, exhalation, assimilation, etc.) on which the life and growth of a plant depend. 2. Plants in general. [a, 35.] 3. A growth or deposit upon some portion of the body of a substance or tissue foreign to that part; especially a condyloma acuminatum. [D.]—Adenoid v's of the naso-pharynx. V's resulting from excessive growth (due to chronic inflammation) of the adenoid or cytogenous tissue contained in the stroma of the mucous membrane lining the naso-pharyngeal cavity. These v's are comb-like, tongue-shaped, or globular, and are mostly found on the superior pharyngeal wall, but often extend forward into the posterior nares. [F.]—Dermal v. See CONDYLOMA acuminatum.—Digital v's. Prominent villous v's. [A, 42.]—Fibrinous v's. Small or large semi-transparent or opaque grayish or grayish-yellow wart-like bodies, projecting from a serous surface, especially the pleura and pericardium. When separated from their base they leave a rough, slightly projecting surface. [a, 34.]—Travelled heart v. See EMBOLUS (2d def.).—Umbilical v. See Fungous EXCRESCENCE of the umbilicus. —Urethral v's. See Urethral PAPILLOMA.

VEGETATIVE, adj. Ve^{2}j'e^{2}t-at-i^{2}v. Lat., vegetativus. Fr., végétatif. Ger., vegetativ. 1. Pertaining to a vegetable. 2. Pertaining to growth, nutritive. [K.]

VEGETO-ALKALOID, n. Ve^{2}j''e^{2}t-o-a^{2}lk'a^{2}l-oid. A vegetable alkaloid. [B.]



VEGETUS (Lat.), adj. Ve^{2}j(we^{2}g)-e^{2}t-u^{3}s(u^{4}s). Ger., frisch, grünbleibend. Remaining green, not withering. [α, 35.]

VEHICLE, n. Ve'i^2-k'l. Lat., vehiculum (from vehere, to bear). Fr., véhicule. Ger., Bindemittel, Vehikel. A liquid or solid excipient. [B, 93 (α, 14).]

VEIL, n. Val. Lat., velum. Fr., voile. Ger., Schlier. 1. A cloth or similar fabric used as a covering. [α, 48.] 2. In botany, the partial covering of the stem or margin of the pileus of Fungi, also the indusium of ferns. [α, 35.]—Uterine v. Lat., pessarium occlusivum. A cap for the cervix uteri, used to prevent conception.

See VIOLA (1st def.).—Ackerv', Dreifarbiges V. See VIOLA tricolor (1st def.)—Hundsv'. See VIOLA canina.—Märzv'. See VIOLA odorata.—V'campher. See IRIS camphor.—V'syrup. Syrup of the flowers of Viola odorata. [B, 108 (α, 14).]—V'wurzel. See IRIS florentina (3d def.).

VEIN, n. Van. Gr., φλέψ. Lat., vena. Fr., veine. Ger., Ader, Blutader, Vene. 1. A vessel the function of which is to convey blood toward the heart. [α, 48.] 2. A rib or nervure of an insect's wing. [L, 206 (α, 27).] 3. A distinct thread-like structure in a plant-organ, especially one of a group of branching threads. [α, 35, 48.]—Accessory portal v's. Of Sappey, small v's from the areolar tissue and peritoneal folds around the liver, emptying into the portal v. [C.]—Acromio-thoracic v. A v. accompanying the artery of like name, and emptying into the axillary v. [C.]—Adipose v's. Lat., adiposæ venæ. Ger., Fettvenen. Branches of the emulgent v's arising in the fat around the kidneys. [A, 343.]—Alar thoracic v. A branch of the axillary v. accompanying the alar thoracic artery. [C.]—Anastomotic v. of Trolard. See VENA communicans magna.—Angular v. A v. formed by the union of the supra-orbital, frontal, superior palpebral, and nasal v's, emptying into the facial v. [C.]—Annular v. See VENA metacarpea ulnaris.—Anterior auricular v. A small v. emptying into the temporo-maxillary v. [F.]—Anterior cardiac v's. Lat., venæ cordis minores. Ger., vordere Kranzblutadern des Herzens. Two or three v's on the front of the right auricle and the right border of the heart, emptying separately into the auricle. [C.]—Anterior ciliary v's. Ger., vordere Blendungsblutadern. V's accompanying the anterior ciliary arteries which empty into the ophthalmic v. [L.]—Anterior cutaneous v. of the neck. See Anterior jugular v.—Anterior ethmoidal v. A v. accompanying the anterior ethmoidal artery, and emptying into the ophthalmic v. [C.]—Anterior facial v. See Facial v.—Anterior intercostal v's. Small offshoots of the internal mammary v. which accompany the arteries of like name. [L.]—Anterior internal maxillary v. See Deep facial v.—Anterior jugular v. Ger., vordere oberflächliche Halsvene. A v. formed by branches from the submaxillary region, the lower lip, and the chin, and ending in the external jugular v. or in the subclavian v. [C.]—Anterior longitudinal spinal v's. Lat., venæ spinales longitudinales. Two plexiform v's which extend along the whole spinal canal in front of the cord and connect above with the basilar sinus. [C.]—Anterior mediastinal v's. Lat., venæ mediastinæ anteriores. Branches of the innominate v. from the anterior mediastinal space. [L, 332.]—Anterior temporal v. A v. running from the diploe of the frontal and temporal bones, and emptying into one of the branches of the temporal v. [L.]—Anterior tibial v. Lat., vena poplitea anterior. A v. corresponding to the artery of like name; it empties into the popliteal v. [C.]—Anterior ulnar cutaneous v. A v. which ascends from the anterior surface of the wrist and unites below the bend of the elbow with the posterior ulnar cutaneous v. to form the common ulnar cutaneous v. [L.]—Anterior ulnar v. A v. which returns the blood from the dorsal plexus of the hand to the posterior ulnar v. or the median basilic v. [C.]—Anterior vertebral v. Lat., vena cervicalis ascendens. A v. arising from a plexus over the cervical vertebræ, receiving branches from the prevertebral and scaleni muscles, and emptying into the inferior end of the vertebral v. [C.]—Anterior vitelline v. Lat., vena vitellina anterior, vena omphalomesenterica anterior. Ger., vordere Dottervene. The v. (often two v's) by which the sinus terminalis of the primitive embryonic circulation empties into the posterior vitelline v. [A, 8.]—Articular v. A v. that returns blood from the structures of a joint. [α, 34.]—Ascending cervical v. See Anterior vertebral v.—Ascending lumbar v. A v. formed by a series of vertical communications between the lumbar v's, and also connecting the lateral sacral, ilio-lumbar, and common iliac v's. It empties into the azygous v. of its side. [C.]—Auditory v's, Auricular v's. Ger., Gehörblutadern. See VENÆ auditoriæ internæ and Deep auricular v's.—Axillary v. Lat., vena axillaris. Ger., Achselvene. A v. that returns the blood from the arm. It is a continuation of the basilic v., and extends from the lower border of the teres major muscle to the outer margin of the first rib. It receives the brachial, cephalic, circumflex, subscapular, long thoracic, acromio-thoracic, and superior thoracic v's. [C.]—Azygous v. See Large azygous v., Left upper azygous v., and Small azygous v.—Basilar v. Lat., vena basilaris. A branch of the v. of Galen from the chorioid plexus and the base of the brain in the vicinity of the inner side of the crus cerebri. [C; L.]—Basilic v. Ger., Ellenbogenhauptblutader. A v. formed by the union of the median basilic and posterior ulnar cutaneous v's; continuous with the axillary v. [C.]—Basivertebral v's. Ger., Wirbelkieferblutadern. Small v's, reduced to their intima, which ramify in the bodies of the vertebræ and empty into the anterior longitudinal spinal v's. [L, 332.]—Brachial v's. V's, one on each side of the brachial artery, which follow its branches and empty into the axillary v. at the lower border of the subscapularis. [L.]—Brachio-cephalic v. See Innominate v's.—Branchial v's. The vessels that return the blood from the branchial arches. [L.]—Bronchial v's. Small v's receiving the blood from the nutrient arteries of the lungs and bronchial tubes. They empty into the large azygos v. on the right side, and into the upper azygos v. on the left side. [L.]—Buccal v's. Ger., Mundblutadern. V's returning the blood from the buccal muscles and emptying into the facial v. [C.]—Capsular v's. Lat., venæ adveheutes capsulares (2d def.). 1. See Suprarenal v's. 2. Branches of the portal v. which return the blood from the capsule of the liver. [L, 142.]—Cardiac v's. Ger., Herzvenen. V's from the tissue of the heart. [L.]—Cardinal v's. Lat., venæ cardinales. The fœtal v's which return the blood from the mesonephros, the vertebral column, and the parietes of the trunk. Their inferior portions afterward become the internal iliac v's; above the latter they become obliterated for the most part. [A, 5.]—Central v's (of the liver). See Intralobular v's of the liver.—Central v. of the retina. Lat., vena retinæ centralis. A branch of the superior ophthalmic v. which returns the blood from the tissues supplied by the branches of the central artery of the retina. [L.]—Central v's of the spinal cord. Two v's, one on each side, in the substantia gelatinosa centralis of the spinal cord, which terminate at the upper and lower ends of the cord in a number of small branches. [L, 332.]—Cephalic v. A v. formed by the union of the median cephalic and radial cutaneous v's, which passes up along the outer border of the biceps brachii to empty into the axillary v. [L.]—Cerebral v's. Ger., Gehirnvenen. V's divided into two sets—those which return the blood from the surface of the brain, and those which return it from the ventricles. [L.]—Chorioid v. Lat., vena chorioidea (lateralis). A v. which returns the blood from the lateral ventricle and chorioid plexus, and unites with the vena corporis striati to form the v. of Galen. [L, 332.]—Ciliary v's. Ger., Blendungsblutadern. V's which usually extend from the choriocapillaris in a radiate direction through the chorioid, and form the vasa vorticosa, five or six in number, which perforate the sclera obliquely at or just behind the equator of the eye, pass into the orbit, and empty into the ophthalmic v. [F.]—Circumflex iliac v. Ger., umgeschlagene Hüftblutader. A v. receiving the blood from the circumflex iliac artery and emptying into the external iliac v. [L.]—Circumflex v's. V's accompanying the circumflex arteries. [L.]—Circumflex v's of Kohlrausch. See VENÆ circumflexæ penis.—Circumflex v's of the arm. Branches of the axillary v. returning the blood from the distribution of the anterior and posterior circumflex arteries of the arm. [L.]—Common facial v. Ger., gemeinschaftliche Gesichtsblutader. A v. formed by the union of the facial and temporal v's, emptying into the internal jugular v. [L.]—Common iliac v. Lat., vena iliaca communis. Ger., gemeinschaftliche Hüftblutader, Hüftvene. A v. formed by the union of the external and internal iliac v's. It extends from the sacro-iliac synchondrosis to about the junction of the fourth and fifth lumbar vertebræ, and unites with its fellow to form the inferior vena cava. [L.]—Common jugular v. 1. The portion of the internal jugular v. below the entrance of the common facial v. 2. Of the older authors, the innominate v. 3. The internal jugular v. [L.]—Common pudic v. Ger., gemeinschaftliche Schamblutader. See Internal pudic v.—Common ulnar cutaneous v. A v., formed by the union of the anterior and posterior ulnar cutaneous v's, which joins the median basilic v. at the bend of the elbow. [L, 142.]—Common vitelline v. See MEATUS venosus.—Condylar emissary v. See EMISSARIUM occipitale inferius.—Coronary v. See Large coronary v.—Coronary v. of the placenta. Lat., vena coronaria placentæ. Ger., grosses Randgefäss. A v. which courses along the border of the placenta for more or less of its extent, gathers its blood from radicles in the substance of the placenta, and returns it to the maternal organism by channels leading to the v's of the uterus. [A, 61.]—Coronary v. of the stomach. Lat., vena coronaria ventriculi. Ger., obere Magenblutader. A v. which runs parallel to the coronary artery and empties into the portal v. [L.]—Costal v. A v. proceeding from the midrib of a leaf. [α, 35.]—Crural v. See Femoral v.—Cystic v. See VENA cystica.—Deep auricular v's. V's which return the blood from a portion of the auricle and empty into the

the malar bone. [C.]—Deep femoral v. Lat., vena femoralis profunda. A branch of the femoral v. which returns the blood from the parts supplied by the deep femoral artery. [L, 332.]—Deep median v. A branch of the median cutaneous v. which communicates with the deep v's of the forearm. [L, 31, 142.]—Deep palmar v's. Branches of the brachial v's which follow the distribution of the deep palmar arch. [L.]—Deep temporal v's. Three or four v's coming from the temporal muscles to join the pterygoid plexus. [C.]—Diaphragmatic v's. See Phrenic v's.—Digital v's. Ger., Fingerblutadern. Small v's returning the blood from the parts supplied by the digital arteries. [L.]—Dorsal costal v's. See Intercostal v's.—Dorsal spinal v's. Lat., venæ spinales dorsales. V's returning the blood from the muscles and integument of the back, forming a plexus over the arches of the vertebræ and emptying into the posterior branches of the intercostal v's, or, as in the neck, into the vertebral v. [C.]—Dorsal v. of the clitoris. Lat., vena dorsalis clitoridis. A v. returning the blood from the clitoris and its vicinity and emptying into the pudendal plexus (2d def.). [L.]—Dorsal v. of the penis. Lat., vena dorsalis penis. A v. returning the blood from the glans penis and prepuce, the corpus spongiosum, the corpora cavernosa, and the overlying skin, and emptying into the prostatic plexus. [C.]—Dorsal v's of the tongue. V's which connect the plexus beneath the mucous membrane of the posterior third of the tongue with the internal jugular or common facial v. [C.]—Dorsi-spinal v's. V's lying on the exterior of the spinal column. [a, 34.]—Efferent v's of the kidney. The v's which emerge from the glomeruli of the kidney and form a network on the convoluted tubules. [L, 142.]—Emissary mastoid v. See Emissarium mastoideum.—Emissary v's. See Emissaria Santorini.—Emissary v. of Luschka. See Emissarium condyloideum anterius.—Emissary v. of Rektorzik. A v. or plexus of v's accompanying the internal carotid artery and connecting the internal jugular v. with the cavernous sinus. [C.]—Emulgent v. See Renal v.—Epigastric v. Ger., Bauchdeckenblutader. See Superficial epigastric v.—Ethmoidal v's. Ger., Siebbeinblutadern, Riechbeinvenen. The anterior and posterior ethmoidal v's.—External cervical v. See Anterior vertebral v.—External hæmorrhoidal v. A v. following the distribution of the inferior hæmorrhoidal arteries and emptying into the hæmorrhoidal plexus. [L, 142, 332.]—External iliac v. Ger., äussere Hüftblutader. The continuation of the femoral v. from Poupart's ligament to its junction with the internal iliac v. near the lumbosacral articulation. It receives the deep circumflex iliac and epigastric v's. [C.]—External jugular v. A v. formed by the union of the posterior auricular v. and the posterior part of the temporomaxillary v. and joined by the posterior external jugular, transverse cervical, and suprascapular v's. It descends from about the level of the angle of the inferior maxilla between the platysma and the fascia and empties into the subclavian v. by one or more trunks. [C ; L.]—External mammary v. A branch of the axillary v. or subclavian v. accompanying the artery of the same name. [L.]—External maxillary v. See Facial v.—External posterior spinal v's. Ger., äussere Rückenblutadern der Wirbelsäule. See Dorsal spinal v's.—External pudic v's. V's returning the blood from the parts supplied by the inferior and superior external pudic arteries and emptying into the internal saphenous v. [C.]—External saphenous v. Lat., saphena parva. Ger., äussere (oder kleine) Rosenader. A v. formed by the confluence of v's on the dorsum of the foot, which passes along the outer border of the tendo Achillis and runs on the gastrocnemius, between the heads of which it passes ending in the popliteal v. [C ; L.]—External spermatic v. A branch of the external iliac v. running from the inguinal canal. [L.]—External thoracic v. See External mammary v.—Facial communicating v. A short, nearly transverse v. uniting the facial and temporal v's near the angle of the jaw. [L.]—Facial v. Lat., vena facialis. Ger., Gesichtsblutader, äussere Kopfblutader. A v. which receives the frontal, supra-orbital, angular, inferior palpebral, superior labial, deep facial, buccal, submental, submaxillary, and inferior palatine v's, and empties into the common facial v. [C.]—Femoral v. Lat., vena femoralis. Ger., Schenkelblutader. The continuation upward of the popliteal v. above the opening in the adductor magnus to Poupart's ligament, where it terminates in the external iliac v. It lies at first on the outer side of the femoral artery, then behind it, and in the upper part of the thigh on the inner side of it, and is included with it in a common sheath. [L.]—Fluid-v's. Fr., veines fluides. Of Chauveau, the oscillatory movements of the blood-stream in the dilated portion of a vessel just beyond a point of constriction. [K, 25.]—Frontal v. Lat., vena frontalis. Ger., Stirnblutader. 1. A v. which returns the blood from the upper surface of the head and forehead, emptying into the facial v. [C.] 2. A branch of the supra-orbital v. from the diploe of the frontal bone. [L, 172.]—Funicular v. The umbilical v. [a, 18.]—Gastric v's. Lat., venæ gastricæ (breves). Branches of the splenic v. running from the left extremity of the stomach. [L.]—Gastro-duodenal v. A branch of the right gastro-epiploic v. running from the pancreas and duodenum. [L.]—Gastro-epiploic v's. The right and left gastro-epiploic v's. [L.]—Gastro-splenic v. See Splenic v.—Gate v. See Portal v.—Gluteal v. Lat., vena glutæa. Fr., veine fessière. Ger., Gesässvene. A branch of the internal iliac v. following the ramifications of the gluteal artery. [C.]—Great cardiac v. See Large coronary v.—Hæmorrhoidal v's. The external, inferior, middle, and superior hæmorrhoidal v's.—Hemi-azygous v. See Small azygous v.—Hepatic brachial v. See Right basilic v.—Hepatic v's. Ger., Lebervenen. A number of v's, usually in three sets, which empty into the inferior vena cava, where it lies in its fissure. They arise in the substance of the liver as the interlobular v's. [L.]—Hyaloid v. A v. accompanying the hyaloid artery. [L.]—Hypogastric v. See Internal iliac v.—Ileo-colic v. See Vena ileo-colica.—Iliac v's. The common external and internal iliac v's. [a, 34.]—Ilio-lumbar v's. Lat., venæ ilio-lumbales. V's from the posterior part of the abdominal wall, the muscles of the back, and the spinal canal, which empty into the common iliac v. [C.]—Inferior cerebellar v's. V's from the lower surface of the cerebellum which enter the inferior petrosal and the occipital sinuses. [C.]—Inferior cerebral v. A v. which receives the blood from the lower surface of the cerebrum and empties into one or another of the sinuses at the base of the skull. [L, 332.]—Inferior dental v. A v. which returns the blood from the parts supplied by the inferior dental artery into the pterygoid plexus. [L.]—Inferior diaphragmatic v's. See Inferior phrenic v's.—

THE VEINS ENTERING INTO THE FORMATION OF THE SINUSES AT THE BASE OF THE SKULL.
1, the ophthalmic vein.

Inferior hæmorrhoidal v. A v. which returns the blood from the parts supplied by the artery of like name and empties into the internal iliac v. [C.]—Inferior labial v's. Two or three v's which collect the blood in the lower lip and empty into the submental branch of the facial v. [C.]—Inferior laryngeal v. A branch of the inferior thyreoid v. which receives the blood from the lower part of the larynx. [L.]—Inferior longitudinal v. See Inferior longitudinal SINUS.—Inferior mesenteric v. A branch of the portal or the splenic v. which returns the blood from the distribution of the inferior mesenteric artery. [L, 172, 332.]—Inferior ophthalmic v. Lat., vena ophthalmica externa (seu facialis, seu inferior). Ger., untere Augenblutader. A v. which begins at the lower margin of the orbit by an anastomosis with the facial v. and empties into the cavernous sinus or the ophthalmic v. [L, 31, 332.]—Inferior palatine v. See Palatine v. (1st def.).—Inferior phrenic v's. Branches of the inferior vena cava or of the suprarenal v. which follow the distribution of the inferior phrenic arteries. [L.]—Inferior thyreoid v's. Ger., untere Schilddrüsenvenen. V's whose radicles form a plexus on the anterior surface of the larynx, returning the blood from the thyreoid gland, the lower part of the larynx, the trachea, and the œsophagus, and emptying, one on each side, into the innominate v's. [L, 142, 332.]—Infraorbital v. A branch of the inferior ophthalmic v. from the face just below the orbit. [L, 332.]—Innominate v's. Lat., venæ innominatæ. Ger., ungenannte Venen. The large v's, one on each side, formed by the union of the subclavian and internal jugular v's behind the sterno-clavicular articulations. They unite on the right side a little below the cartilage of the first rib to form the superior vena cava. That of the right side is short and nearly vertical, and lies on the pleura and the upper part of the right lung; that of the left side runs obliquely downward from left to right, and rests on the arch of the aorta in front of the innominate, left carotid, and subclavian arteries. [L, 34, 142, 332.]—Innominate v's of Vieussens. See Anterior cardiac v's.—Intercostal v's. Ger., Zwischenrippenblutadern. Branches of the large and small azygous v's and the superior intercostal v's which accompany the arteries of the same name. [L.]—Interlobular v's. Small v's running between the lobules of a gland. [L.]—Interlobular v's of the kidney. V's which accompany the interlobular arteries and convey the blood from the cortex of the kidney to the arches at the bases of the renal pyramids. [C.]—Interlobular v's of the liver. Lat., venæ interlobulares hepatis, venulæ centrales lobulorum. Small branches of the portal v. which run between and around the lobules of the liver. [C.]—Intermediate v's. See Interlobular v's.—Internal auditory v's. See VENÆ auditoriæ internæ.—Internal cerebral v. A v. formed by the union of the chorioid v. and the vena corporis striati, which is continuous with the v. of Galen of its own side when there are two, but converging to form the v. of Galen when it is single. [L, 31, 332.]—Internal hæmorrhoidal v. See Superior hæmorrhoidal v.—Internal iliac v. Ger., Beckenblutader, Unterbauchsvene. A short trunk which lies behind the internal iliac artery, receives the blood from the v's corresponding to the branches of that vessel, and unites near the margin of the pelvis with the external iliac v. to form the common iliac v. [L.]—Internal jugular v. Ger., innere Drosselblutader. 1. A large v. which is continuous above with the lateral sinus and joins below with the subclavian v. to form the innominate v. In its upper portion it lies to the outer side of and close to the internal carotid artery as far as the cornu of the hyoid bone, where it receives the common facial v. and descends upon the outer side of the common carotid artery. Its most important branches are the lingual, pharyngeal, occipital, laryngeal, and superior thyreoid v's. [L, 31, 142, 332.] 2. See Common jugular v.—Internal mammary v. A branch of the innominate v. receiving small v's from the costal region. [L, 332.]—Internal maxillary v. A v. which returns the blood from the pterygoid plexus, and empties into the temporal v. [C.]—Internal pudic v. Lat., vena pudenda communis (seu interna). A v. emptying into the internal iliac v. or into the pudendal plexus, formed by the union of a number of small v's from the perinæum, scrotum, and anus. It accompanies the internal pudic artery. [L, 332.]—Internal saphenous v. Lat., saphena, vena interna saphena (seu magna). Fr., saphène. Ger., grosse Rosenvene. A v. which, beginning in a plexus upon the dorsal aspect of the foot, runs upward in front of the inner ankle and along the inner side of the leg to the internal condyle of the femur, behind which it passes to ascend upon the inner side of the thigh to the saphenous opening, through which it passes to empty into the femoral v. a little below Poupart's ligament. It receives a large number of cutaneous branches and communicates freely with the deeper v's of the thigh and leg. [L, 142, 172, 332.]—Internal spermatic v. Ger., innere Samenblutader. A v. (sometimes one of several) that returns the blood from the testicle. It forms a constituent of the spermatic cord, and empties on the right side into the inferior vena cava and on the left into the renal v. [L, 142, 332.]—Interosseous v's. See VENÆ interosseæ antibrachii.—Intralobular v's of the liver. Branches of the interlobular v's which spring from the capillary plexus within the lobules of the liver. [L, 142, 172.]—Ischiadic v., Ischiatic v. See Sciatic v.—Jugular v's. Ger., Drosselblutadern. The anterior, external, and internal jugular v's. [L.]—Jugulo-cephalic v. An anomalous v. which passes over the clavicle, uniting the cephalic and external jugular v's. [L, 142.]—Labial v. A branch of the facial v. from the region of the lip. [L, 142.]—Lacrymal v's. Ger., Thränenvenen. V's from the upper eyelid and lacrymal gland which accompany the lacrymal artery and empty into the palpebral and ophthalmic v's. [F.]—Large azygous v. Lat., vena azygos major. Ger., grosse unpaarige Blutader, unpaare Vene. A v. of the right side which arises opposite the first or second lumbar vertebra by a branch from one or more of the lumbar v's, the renal v's, or the inferior vena cava. It perforates the diaphragm in company with the aorta and ends in the superior vena cava close to the pericardium. It receives the nine or ten lower right intercostal v's, the small azygos v., the right bronchial v., and small v's from the thoracic cavity. [L, 31, 142, 172, 332.]—Large coronary v. (of the heart). Lat., vena coronaria magna (cordis). Fr., grande veine cardiaque. Ger., grosse Kranzblutader des Herzens. A v. which arises upon the anterior surface of the apex of the heart, and ascends in the anterior interventricular groove to that between the left auricle and ventricle, along which it runs to the posterior surface of the heart, where it terminates in the left end of the coronary sinus. [L, 31, 142, 332.]—Large mesaraic v. See Superior mesenteric v.—Laryngeal v. Lat., vena laryngea (superior). Ger., Luftröhrenkopfsvene. A branch of the internal jugular v. or of one of its branches. It receives small vessels from the interior of the larynx which pierce the thyreo-hyoid membrane. [L, 142, 332.]—Lateral sacral v's. V's which receive the blood from the lateral sacral arteries and, with the middle sacral v's, form the anterior sacral plexus. [L, 142, 172.]—Lateral vitelline v's. Lat., venæ vitellinæ laterales. Those two of the vitelline v's which, arising laterally, accompany the trunks of the large arteries of the primitive embryonic circulation. On the left side this vessel unites with the posterior vetelline v., on the right side with the anterior, or, if the latter is wanting, forms alone the trunk of the right omphalo-mesenteric v. [A, 8.]—Left coronary v. See Large coronary v. of the heart.—Left gastro-epiploic v. A v. from the great curvature of the stomach which empties into the splenic v. [C.]—Left lower azygous v. See Small azygous v.—Left upper azygous v. An inconstant v. which receives those of the intercostal v's below the superior intercostal v. of the left side that do not empty into the small azygous v. When it is absent its place is supplied by the left superior intercostal v. [L, 31, 142, 172.]—Lieno-intestinal v. See Splenic v.—Lingual dorsal v's. See Dorsal v's of the tongue.—Lingual v. Lat., vena lingualis. Ger., Zungenvene. A branch of the internal jugular or facial v. which anastomoses freely with the v's of the vicinity and returns the blood from the tongue, the sublingual and submaxillary glands, and the floor of the mouth. [L, 31, 142, 332.]—Longitudinal spinal v's. The anterior and posterior longitudinal spinal v's. [L.]—Long saphenous v. See Internal saphenous v.—Long thoracic v. A branch of the axillary v. accompanying the branches of the external mammary artery. [C.]—Lumbar v's. Lat., venæ lumbales. V's accompanying the lumbar arteries and emptying into the inferior vena cava. [L, 142, 332.]—Lumbo-costal v. See Ascending lumbar v.—Marginal v. of the heart. See Middle cardiac v.—Masseteric v's. Lat., venæ massetericæ. Ger., Kaumuskelblutadern. Branches of the facial v. from the masseter muscle. [L.]—Mastoid emissary v. See EMISSARIUM mastoideum.—Maxillary v's. Ger., Kieferblutadern. The external and internal maxillary v's.—Median basilic v. Lat., vena basilica mediana. The innermost of the two terminal branches of the median cutaneous v. It is given off at the bend of the elbow on the anterior surface of the arm, passes up in front of the brachial artery between the biceps brachii and the pronator radii teres, and joins the basilic v. [L, 172, 332.]—Median cephalic v. Lat., vena cephalica mediana. The outer and smaller of the two terminal branches of the median cutaneous v. It passes upward in the bend of the elbow between the supinator longus and the biceps brachii to join the cephalic v. [L, 172, 332.]—Median cutaneous v. A cutaneous branch of the median v. [L.]—Median labial v. See VENA anguli oris.—Median v. (of the arm). Lat., vena mediana. Ger., Mittelarmblutader. A short v. upon the anterior surface of the forearm which divides at the bend of the elbow into the median basilic v. and the median cephalic v. [L.] See also Median cutaneous v. and Deep median v.—Median v. of the neck. Lat., vena colli mediana. See Anterior jugular v.—Mediastinal v's. The anterior and posterior mediastinal v's. [L.]—Medulli-spinal v's. A venous plexus between the spinal arachnoid and pia. [L.]—Meningeal v's. V's accompanying the meningeal arteries. [L.]—Meningo-rhachidian v's. V's situated in the interior of the spinal canal, between the vertebræ and the theca vertebralis. [a, 34.]—Menstruiferous v's of the uterus. An old term for certain v's of the uterus which were supposed to be the special source of the menstrual flow. [A, 42.]—Mental v. Lat., vena mentalis. A branch of the anterior jugular v. running from the chin. [L.]—Mesenteric v's. Ger., Gekrösblutadern. The inferior and superior mesenteric v's.—Middle cardiac v. Lat., vena cordis media. Ger., mittlere Kranzblutader des Herzens. The largest of the v's on the posterior surface of the heart. It lies in the groove between the ventricles, and empties into the right extremity of the coronary sinus. [L, 31, 142.]—Middle cerebral v. Lat., vena cerebri media. A v. accompanying the middle cerebral artery and emptying into the cavernous or sphenoparietal sinus (2d def.). [L, 31, 332.]—Middle hæmorrhoidal v's. Small v's which connect the hæmorrhoidal plexus with the internal iliac v. [L, 332.]—Middle meningeal v. A v. accompanying the middle meningeal artery, and emptying into the cavernous, sphenoparietal, or sphenosquamous sinus or the internal maxillary or pterygoid plexus. [L, 142, 332.]—Middle sacral v. Lat., vena caudalis (seu sacralis media). A v. on the anterior surface of the sacrum, returning the blood from the middle sacral artery and emptying into the left common iliac v. or the inferior vena cava. [L, 142, 172.]—Middle temporal v. A v. which arises in the vicinity of the eyebrow, communicates with the supra-orbital and frontal v's, receives the palpebral v's and branches from the temporalis, and unites with the superficial temporal v. over the temporal portion of the zygomatic arch. [L, 142, 332.]—Middle thyreoid v. Lat., vena thyreoidea lateralis (seu media). A branch of the lower portion of the internal jugular v. which returns the blood from the lower portion of the lateral lobe of the thyreoid gland and receives twigs from the trachea and larynx. [L, 142, 172.]—Midv'. The midrib of a leaf. [α, 35.]—Nasal v's. Lat., venæ nasales. Unimportant branches of the angular v. running from the dorsal and lateral surfaces of the nose. [L, 142, 332.]—Oblique v. of the heart. Lat., vena posterior atrii sinistri. A small v., the relic of the left innominate v. of the fœtus, which runs on the back part of the left auricle of the heart to the coronary sinus. [L, 172.]—Obturator v. Lat., vena obturatoria. Fr., veine obturatrice. Ger., Hüftlochvene. A branch of the internal iliac v. which returns the blood from the distribution of the obturator artery. [L, 332.]—Occipital emissary v. [Henle]. See Emissarium occipitale superius.—Occipital v. Ger., Hinterhauptsvene. 1. A branch of either the external or internal jugular v. which arises in a plexus in the occipital region. 2. A branch from the diploe of the occipital bone, emptying into the occipital sinus or the occipital v. (1st def.). [L.]—Œsophageal v's. Lat., venæ œsophageæ. Branches of the inferior thyreoid v's running from the œsophagus. [L, 332.]—Omphalo-mesenteric v's. See Vitelline v's.—Ophthalmic v. Lat., vena ophthalmica (cerebralis, seu interna, seu superior). Ger., Gesichtsaugenvene. A large v. which commences the frontal v. at the inner angle of the orbit, and passes out of the orbit through the inner extremity of the sphenoidal fissure to empty into the cavernous sinus. [F.]—Orbital v's. Ger., Augenhöhlenblutadern. Branches of the ophthalmic v. and the vena ophthalmica externa running from the tissues in the orbit. [L.]—Ovarian v. A v. following the same course as the ovarian artery and emptying into the vena cava or renal v. [L.]—Palatine v. Lat., vena palatina (inferior [1st def.]). Ger., Gaumenblutader. 1. A branch of the facial v., or of one of its branches, returning the blood from the vicinity of the tonsil and soft palate. 2. In the pl., small branches of the internal maxillary v. [L, 142, 332.]—Pancreatico-duodenal v's. Branches of the superior mesenteric v. running from the head of the pancreas and from the duodenum. [L, 7.]—Pancreatic v. A branch of the splenic v. running from the pancreas. [L.]—Parietal emissary v. See Emissarium parietale.—Parotid v's. Small v's running from the parotid gland to the temporal v. [α, 34.]—Parumbilical v. Lat., vena paraumbilicalis (seu paromphalica). 1. Of Hyrtl, a venous channel said to be formed in the adult by a reopening of the hepatic portion of the umbilical v. in cases of obstruction of the portal circulation. [A, 19.] 2. In the pl., branches of the portal v., or of a pervious umbilical v., which connect with the deep epigastric v. [L, 142, 332.]—Pericardiac v's. Ger., Herzbeutelvenen. Small branches of the azygous, internal mammary, and innominate v's running from the pericardium. [L, 332.]—Peroneal v's. See Vena peronea (1st def.).—Pharyngeal v's. Lat., venæ pharyngeæ. Ger., Schlundkopfblutadern. Branches of the internal jugular (occasionally of the superior thyreoid or lingual) v's which form a plexus in the walls of the pharynx. [L, 142, 332.]—Phrenic v's. Lat., venæ phrenicæ. Small branches of the inferior vena cava which accompany the phrenic arteries. [L, 142, 332.] Cf. Superior phrenic v's and Inferior phrenic v's.—Plantar v's. Lat., venæ plantares. The deep v's of the sole of the foot. [L, 332.]—Popliteal v. Lat., vena poplitea. Ger., Kniekehlblutader. A v. formed by the union of the anterior and posterior tibial v's, near the lower border of the popliteus. It becomes continuous with the femoral v. above the opening in the adductor magnus. It lies in a plane posterior to the popliteal artery, at first on its inner side, then behind it, and finally on its outer side. It receives small branches in the popliteal space and also the external saphenous v. [L, 142, 332.]—Portal v. Lat., vena portæ (seu portarum). Ger., Pfortader. A v. from three to four inches long, formed by the union of the splenic and superior mesenteric v's, which conveys the blood from the chylopoietic organs to the liver. It is situated behind the hepatic artery and bile duct, and is included within the layers of the lesser omentum. Close to the right end of the transverse fissure of the liver it divides into two branches which enter the substance of the liver (where it receives blood from the branches of the hepatic artery) and give off branches to form the vaginal plexus and the interlobular v's. [L, 31, 142, 172, 332.]—Postcaval v. In birds, the v. returning the blood from the trunk and lower extremities. [L, 221.]—Posterior auricular v. Ger., hintere Ohrvene. A branch of the temporomaxillary v. which receives the blood from the back part of the external ear and its vicinity. [L, 172, 332.]—Posterior cardiac v's. Lat., venæ cordis posteriores. Three or four v's which run on the posterior surface of the ventricles and empty into the coronary sinus at its lower border. [C.]—Posterior ciliary v's. V's which collect the blood from the chorioid, pass out through the sclera midway between the cornea and the optic nerve, and empty into the ophthalmic v. [C.]—Posterior cutaneous v. of the neck. See External jugular v. and Posterior external jugular v. (1st def.).—Posterior dental v. A branch of the internal maxillary v. accompanying an artery of the same name. [L.]—Posterior ethmoid v. A branch of the ophthalmic v. accompanying an artery of the same name. [L.]—Posterior external jugular v. 1. A v. which collects blood from the occipital region and from the integument and superficial muscles of the back of the neck, and empties into the external jugular v. [C.] 2. See External jugular v.—Posterior facial v. See Temporomaxillary v. and Temporal v.—Posterior intercostal v's. Lat., venæ intercostales posteriores. Branches of the intercostal v's accompanying the posterior intercostal arteries. [L.]—Posterior internal maxillary v. See Internal maxillary v.—Posterior longitudinal spinal v's. Two v's in the spinal canal between the dura and the posterior wall. They anastomose freely with each other and empty into the occipital sinus. [C.]—Posterior mediastinal v's. Lat., venæ mediastinæ posteriores. Branches of the large azygous v. running from the posterior mediastinum. [L, 332.]—Posterior saphenous v. See External saphenous v.—Posterior temporal v. 1. The posterior branch of the temporal v. 2. A v. from the diploe of the parietal bone, emptying into the lateral sinus. [L.]—Posterior tibial v's. Two v's following the distribution of the posterior tibial artery and emptying into the popliteal v. [C.]—Posterior ulnar (cutaneous) v. A v. beginning on the back of the hand by a number of vessels which unite to form the vena salvatella, and running up on the posterior aspect of the ulnar border of the forearm to unite with the anterior ulnar cutaneous v. [C.]—Posterior vertebral v. 1. See Deep cervical v. 2. In the pl., of Rathke, two fœtal v's, continuous with the upper portions of the cardinal v's, which receive the lumbar and intercostal twigs. [A, 5.]—Posterior vitelline v. Lat., vena vitellina posterior. Ger., hintere (linke) Dottervene. A v. of the primitive embryonic circulation which arises posteriorly from the sinus terminalis and empties into the left omphalo-mesenteric v.—Precaval v's. In birds, the v's returning the blood from the head and upper extremities. [L, 221.]—Primary v. Ger., Hauptader. One of the primary branches sent off from the mid-vein of a leaf. [a, 35.]—Primitive jugular v. A v. of the fœtus which receives the blood from the cranial cavity. The greater part of it afterward becomes the internal jugular v., but on the right side that portion of it situated below a communicating v. that runs to its fellow forms, together with the right duct of Cuvier, the vena cava superior. [A, 5.]—Pubic v. Lat., vena pubica. A v., sometimes doubled, which runs externally to the crural ring over the superior ramus of the os pubis to join the external iliac v. [L, 332.]

O, no; O², not; O³, whole; Th, thin; Th², the; U, like oo in too; U², blue; U³, lull; U⁴, full; U⁵, urn; U⁶, like ü (German).

1, the splenic vein; 2, the portal vein; 3, the superior mesenteric vein; 4, the inferior mesenteric vein.

—Pudic v's. Ger., Schamblutadern. The external and internal pudic v's.—Pulmonary v's. Lat., venæ pulmonales. Ger., Lungenvenen. Four (occasionally five) v's which return the aerated blood from the lungs to the left auricle of the heart, into the posterior portion of which they open. The two of the right side lie behind the right pulmonary artery, the aorta, the right auricle, and the superior vena cava; those of the left side lie in front of the aorta. They arise in the substance of the lung, in the capillary network of the alveoli and smaller bronchial tubes, and form freely anastomosing vessels, which become larger as they approach the root of the lung, where they unite to form the main trunks. [L, 31, 142, 172, 332.]—Radial (cutaneous) v. A v. which arises in a plexus on the posterior surfaces of the thumb and index finger and ascends upon the radial border of the forearm, where it unites with the median cephalic v. [L, 142, 172.]—Ranine v. Lat., vena ranina. A branch of the internal jugular, facial, or lingual v., which arises at the apex of the tongue and runs superficially on its lower surface close to the frenum, in company with the ranine artery. [L, 142, 172, 332.]—Renal v. Lat., vena renalis. Ger., Nierenblutader, Nierenvene. A short v. with a large lumen which returns the blood from the kidney into the inferior vena cava. That of the right side is the longer, and passes in front of the aorta. It receives branches from the suprarenal capsule and, on the left side, the internal spermatic v. [L, 142, 332.]—Right azygous v. See Large azygous v.—Right basilic v. The basilic v. of the right arm.—Right coronary v. See Small cardiac v.—Right gastro-epiploic v. A branch of the superior mesenteric v running from the right extremity of the stomach. [L, 332.]—Sacral v's. Ger., Kreuzbeinblutadern. The lateral and middle sacral v's. [L.]—Saphenous v's. The external and internal saphenous v's.—Satellite v's. See VENÆ comitantes.—Sciatic v. Lat., vena ischiadica. A v. which collects the blood from the parts supplied by the sciatic artery and empties into the internal iliac v. [C.]—Secondary v. One of the branches of a primary v. [a, 35.]—Short gastric v's. See Gastric v's.—Short saphenous v. See External saphenous v.—Small azygous v. Lat., vena hemi azygos. A v. which arises from one or two lumbar v's and the renal, suprarenal, or spermatic v. of the left side, and empties into the right azygos v. after crossing the vertebral column over the ninth dorsal vertebra. It receives a varying number of the lower intercostal v's, also small v's from the thoracic cavity. [C; L.]—Small cardiac (or coronary) v. Lat., vena coronaria parva. Ger., kleine Kranzblutader des Herzens. A v. which receives the blood from the posterior portion of the right auricle and ventricle of the heart, and empties into the right extremity of the coronary sinus. [L, 31, 142, 332.]—Smallest cardiac v's. See VENÆ cordis minimæ.—Small mesaraic v. See Inferior mesenteric v.—Spermatic v's. Ger., Samenvenen. The external and internal spermatic v's. [L.]—Spheno-palatine v. Lat., vena spheno-palatina. A v. from the sphenoid bone and palate, emptying into the pterygoid plexus. [C.]—Spinal v's. The venous plexuses placed upon and within the vertebral column. They include the dorsi-spinal v's, the meningo-rhachidian v's, the v's of the bodies of the vertebræ, and the medulli-spinal v's.—Splenic v. Lat., vena lienalis. Ger., Milzblutader, Milzvene. A large branch of the portal v. which returns the blood from the spleen, the pancreas, the duodenum, part of the rectum, the descending colon, and the larger part of the stomach and omentum; formed by the union of several vessels which emerge from the spleen. It runs beneath the pancreas in company with the splenic artery, and joins with the superior mesenteric v. in front of the vertebral column. It receives the gastric and left gastro-epiploic v's and a number of unnamed vessels from the intestines, etc. [L.]—Stellate v's. See VENÆ stellatæ.—Stylo-mastoid v. A v. accompanying the stylo-mastoid artery and emptying into the posterior auricular v. [a, 34.]—Subclavian v. Lat., vena subclavia. Ger., Schlüsselbeinblutader, Unterschlüsselbeinvene. A large v., the continuation of the axillary v., extending from the upper margin of the serratus anticus major to the inner end of the clavicle, where it unites with the internal jugular v. to form the innominate v. It receives the anterior and external jugular and the vertebral v's. [L, 31, 142, 332.]—Subintestinal v. In embryonic fishes, the homologue of the caudal v. and the ductus venosus. [L.]—Sublingual v. See Ranine v.—Sublobular v. A venous trunk formed by the union of several of the intralobular v's of the liver and emptying into the hepatic v. or its branches. [L, 351.]—Submaxillary v's. Branches of the facial v. running from the submaxillary gland. [L, 332.]—Submental v. Ger., Unterkinnblutader. A branch of the facial v. (occasionally of the lingual or superior thyreoid v.) which returns the blood from the submaxillary gland and the mylo-hyoideus. [L, 142, 332.]—Subscapular v. Lat., vena subscapularis. A branch of the axillary v. accompanying the distribution of the subscapular artery. [L, 142, 332.]—Superficial circumflex iliac v. A v. returning the blood of the artery of like name, and emptying into the internal

carpeæ.—Superficial temporal v. A v. made up of the posterior auricular v's and their branches that extend over the lateral and superior aspects of the skull, anastomosing freely with the vessels of the vicinity, and converging near the posterior portion of the zygoma to unite with the middle temporal v. [L, 142, 332.]—Superficial ulnar v's. The anterior and posterior ulnar v's. [L.]—Superior auricular v's. Branches of the external jugular v's running from the cranial aspect of the auricle and the side of the head. [L.]—Superior cerebellar v's. Branches of the straight or transverse sinus or of the v. of Galen running from the upper surface of the cerebellum. [L, 142, 332.]—Superior cerebral v's. Ten or twelve v's lying mostly in the sulci of the upper part of the cerebrum and emptying into the superior and inferior longitudinal sinuses. They anastomose freely with each other and with the inferior cerebral v's. [C.]—Superior epigastric v. A branch of the internal mammary v. which accompanies the superior epigastric artery. [L, 332.]—Superior gastric v. Ger., obere Magenblutader. See Coronary v. of the stomach.—Superior hæmorrhoidal v. A branch of the inferior mesenteric v. which returns the blood from the upper half of the rectum. [L, 332.]—Superior intercostal v's. Lat., venæ intercostales supremæ. V's which return the blood from the upper three or four intercostal spaces. That of the right side is the smaller, corresponds to the distribution of the superior intercostal artery, receives the blood from one, two, or three of the upper intercostal spaces, and empties into the right innominate v. or the large azygos v. That of the left side receives branches from the upper three or four intercostal spaces and the left branchial v., passes across the arch of the aorta, and empties into the left innominate v. [L, 142, 172, 332.]—Superior labial v. Ger., obere Lippenblutader. A branch of the facial v. which returns the blood from the upper lip. [L, 332.]—Superior laryngeal v. See Laryngeal v.—Superior mesenteric v. Ger., grosse (oder obere) Gekrösblutader. A large v. which by its union with the splenic v. forms the portal v. It lies on the right side of and a little in front of the superior mesenteric artery, accompanying its branches and returning the blood from the parts supplied by them. [L, 142, 332.]—Superior ophthalmic v. See Ophthalmic v.—Superior palatine v. See Palatine v.—Superior palpebral v's. Ger., obere Augenlidblutadern. Branches of the facial v. running from the upper eyelid. [L.]—Superior phrenic v's. Branches of the innominate v's running from the diaphragm. [L, 31.]—Superior thoracic v. A branch of the axillary v. which returns the blood from the parts supplied by the superior thoracic artery. [L, 142, 332.]—Superior thyreoid v. A branch of the internal jugular v. which arises by branches in the thyreoid gland which anastomose freely with the v's of the vicinity. [L, 142, 332.]—Supra-orbital v. Ger., Oberaugenhöhlenvene. A branch of the facial or frontal v. which lies beneath the occipito-frontalis, running in toward the eyebrow. It receives branches from the adjacent structures and anastomoses freely with the v's of the vicinity. [L, 142, 332.]—Suprarenal v's. Ger., Nebennierenblutadern. V's running from the suprarenal capsules. That of the right side empties into the vena cava, that of the left into the phrenic or renal v. of the same side. [L, 142, 332.]—Suprascapular v. Ger., Oberschulterblattblutader. A branch of the external jugular v., near its termination, which accompanies the suprascapular artery and its branches. [L, 142, 332.]—Sural v's. See Venæ gastrocnemicæ.—Systemic v's. Ger., Körpervenen. The v's which return the blood to the right auricle of the heart from all the tissues and organs except the lungs and chylopoietic organs. [L.]—Temporal v. Lat., vena temporalis (communis). Ger., Schläfenvene. A v. formed by the union of the superficial and middle temporal v's and joining with the internal maxillary v. to form the temporo-maxillary v. [C.] See also Anterior temporal v., Posterior temporal v., and Deep temporal v's.—Temporo-maxillary v. A v. formed by the union of the temporal and internal maxillary v's near the neck of the lower jaw. It divides near the angle of the jaw into two branches, one of which goes to the facial v., the other to the external jugular v. [L, 142, 332.]—Thymic v's. Branches of the right and left innominate v's (especially of the former) running from the thymus gland. [L, 332.]—Thyreoid v's. The inferior, middle, and superior thyreoid v's and the vena thyreoidea ima.—Tibial v's. The anterior and posterior tibial v's. [L.]—Transverse cervical v. Lat., vena colli transversa. A branch of the transverse cervico-scapular v. which receives blood from the deep lateral cervical muscles. [L, 332.]—Transverse cervico-scapular v. Lat., vena transversa colli et scapulæ. A v. formed by the union of the transverse cervical and scapular v's. It lies beneath the trapezius and empties normally into the subclavian v., occasionally into the external jugular v. [L, 332.]—Transverse facial v. A branch of the temporal v. which accompanies the branches of the transverse facial artery. [L, 142, 332.]—Transverse lumbar v's. See Lumbar v's.—Transverse scapular v. Lat., vena scapulæ transversa. A branch of the transverse cervico-scapular v. which receives blood from the posterior and upper scapular regions. [L, 332.]—Ulnar cutaneous v. See Anterior ulnar cutaneous v., Posterior ulnar cutaneous v., and Superficial ulnar v's.—Ulnar v. A branch of the brachial v. accompanying the branches of the ulnar artery. [L.]—Umbilical v's. Lat., venæ umbilicales. Ger., Nabelvenen. Two v's, a right and a left, made up of radicles arising in the chorionic villi of the placenta, and formed in the embryo at the time of the development of the allantoid circulation. Uniting to form a short trunk, they return the blood from the placenta into the meatus venosus. The right umbilical v. soon disappears; the left one, now termed the umbilical v., courses through the umbilical cord, enters the abdomen of the fœtus, and proceeds to the lower border of the suspensory ligament of the liver, in the anterior part of the longitudinal fissure, where it divides into two branches, one of which goes to the portal v., while the other, the ductus venosus Arantii, empties into the ascending vena cava. [A, 23.]—Uterine v's. Ger., Muttervenen. Branches of the internal iliac v. which accompany the uterine arteries and form a plexus in the walls of the uterus. [L.]—Utero-ovarian v. See Ovarian v.—Vaginal v's of the liver. V's ramifying in Glisson's capsule, accompanying the vaginal branch of the hepatic artery. [a, 34.]—Varicose v. See Varix.—V's of Galen. Two v's, one on each side, which are continuations of the internal cerebral v's. They run back in the folds of the velum interpositum, emerge through the transverse fissure of the cerebrum, and, after joining to form one trunk, empty into the straight sinus. Often they are replaced by a single vessel, then called the v. of Galen, which sometimes is separated by a longitudinal sæptum into two. [L, 31, 142, 172, 332.]—V's of Santorini. See Emissaria Santorini.—V's of the corpus spongiosum. V's carrying blood from the corpus spongiosum to the dorsal v. of the penis. [a, 34.]—V's of Thebesius. See Venæ cordis minimæ.—V. of the corpus cavernosum. A v. which returns the blood from the corpus cavernosum and empties into the internal pudic v. [C.]—V. of the liver. The right basilic v. [L, 104.]—Ventricular v's. See V's of Galen.—Vertebral v. Lat., vena vertebralis interna (seu lateralis, seu superficialis). Ger., Wirbelblutader, Halswirbelvene. 1. A branch of the subclavian v., near its termination, which arises in the suboccipital region and accompanies the vertebral artery. [L.] 2. In the pl., the vertebral v., anterior vertebral v., posterior vertebral v., and basivertebral v's. [L.]—Visceral v's. V's which return the blood from the viscera. [L.]—Vitelline v's. Lat., venæ vitellinæ (seu omphalo-mesentericæ). Ger., Dottervenen. Several venous trunks of the primitive embryonic circulation which carry the blood from the sinus terminalis to the meatus venosus. See Anterior vitelline v., Meatus venosus, Lateral vitelline v's, and Posterior vitelline v.

1, the external saphenous vein.

VEINED, adj. Vand. Fr., veiné. Ger., geadert. Provided with veins. [a, 35.]—Digitately v. See Palminerved.—Feather-v. See Pinninerved.—Fork-v. Having the fibro-vascular bundles forking. [a, 35.]—Hidden-v. Having the veins, as of a leaf, buried in the parenchyma so that they are not visible. [a, 35.]—Netted-v. Of leaves, reticulate. [a, 35.]—Palmately v. See Palminerved.—Pinnately v. See Pinninerved.—Radiately v. See Palminerved.

VEINING, n. Van'i²n². See Venation.

VEINLESS, adj. Van'le²s. Without veins. [a, 35.]

VEINLET, n. Van'le²t. Lat., venula. Fr., veinule. Ger., Aederchen. A branch of a primary vein; of some botanists, a primary vein or branch of the midvein. [a, 35.]

VEINOSITÉ (Fr.), n. Ve²-no-ze-ta. A variety of varicosity in which, according to Briquet, there is a simple development of little veins, which are very numerous, enlarged, and excessively branched, and have become very superficial, almost hypepidermic, so that they color the skin violet or bright red. It is most commonly seen on the lower limbs in women of middle age or older. [A, 15.]

VEINULET, n. Van'u^{2}l-e^{2}t. A branch of a veinlet (in either sense). [α, 35.]

VEINY, adj. Van'i^2. See VENOSE.

VEITSTANZ (Ger.), n. Vits'ta^{3}nts. See CHOREA.—Englischer V. See CHOREA minor.—Grosser V. See CHOREA magna.—Kleiner V. See CHOREA minor.

VELAMEN (Lat.), n. n. Ve^{2}l(wal)-a(a^3)'me^{2}n. Gen., -am'inis. From velare, to cover. A covering; a veil; in the pl., velamina, the meninges of the brain. [I, 3 (K).]—V. radicum. A peculiar covering formed on epiphytal roots by epidermal cells which have become filled with air after losing their succulent contents. [α, 35.]—V. vulvæ. See Pudendal APRON.

VELAMENTOUS, adj. Ve^{2}l-a^{2}m-e^{2}nt'u^{3}s. Ger., velamental, velamentös. Resembling a veil or membrane. [α, 48.]

VELAMENTUM (Lat.), n. n. Ve^{2}l(wal)-a^3-me^{2}nt'u^{3}m(u^{4}m). From velare, to cover. A covering or investment. [G.]—V. abdominale. See PERITONÆUM.—Velamenta cerebri. The cerebral dura, pia, and arachnoid. [L.]—V. nativum. The skin; the common integument. [G.]

VELAMINARIS (Lat.), adj. Ve^{2}l(wal)-a^{2}m(a^{3}m)-i^{2}n-a(a^3)'ri^{2}s. From velamen, a cover. Fr., vélaminaire. Of the dehiscence of an anther, valvular. [α, 35.]

VÉLAR (Fr.), n. Va-la^{3}r. Of the Fr. Cod., either the flowering plant or simply the leaves of Sisymbrium officinale. [α, 38.]

VELATE, adj. Vel'at. Lat., velatus (from velare, to cover). Fr., voilé. Ger., beschleiert, verschleiert. Veiled, partly concealed from view (said of Fungi with a veil or of fruits with induviæ). [α, 35.]

VELLARINE, n. Ve^{2}l'a^{2}r-en. Fr., v. Ger., Vellarin. An oily liquid obtained from Hydrocotyle asiatica. It has been recommended against leprosy. [B, 93, 108 (α, 14).]

VELLERON (Fr.), n. Ve^{2}l-l'-ro^{2}n^2. A place in the department of Vaucluse, France, where there is a gaseous and alkaline spring. [L, 49 (α, 14).]

VELLICATION, n. Ve^{2}l-i^{2}k-a'shu^{3}n. Lat., vellicatio (from vellicare, to pluck). See CARPHOLOGY.

VELLUS (Lat.), n. Ve^{2}l(we^{2}l)'lu^{3}s(lu^{4}s). Gen., vel'leris. The stipe of certain Fungi. [α, 35.]

VELOPORPHYRE, n. Ve^{2}l-o-po^{2}rf'ir. A cylindrical apparatus used for mixing fatty bodies intimately by means of a solid ball which rolls inside it. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxiv, p. 307 (α, 50).]

VELOSYNTHESIS (Lat.), n. f. Vel(wal)-o(o^3)-si^{2}n(su^{6}n)'the^{2}s-i^{2}s. Gen., -thes'eos (-synth'esis). From velum, a veil, and σύνθεσις, a putting together. Of Syme, staphylorrhaphy. [α, 34.]

VELU (Fr.), adj. V'-lu^6. See VILLOUS.

VELUM (Lat.), n. n. Vel(wal)'u^{3}m(u^{4}m). Fr., voile. Ger., Schleier. A veil or curtain; a membrane or other thin structure serving as a covering or partition; in the brain, the posterior medullary v. [A, 312 (α, 17); I, 17 (K).]—Anterior medullary v. See VALVE of Vieussens.—Inferior medullary v., Posterior medullary v. Ger., hinteres Marksegel. [α, 34.]—V. flocculi, V. interjectum cerebelli. See Posterior medullary v.—V. interpositum. Fr., toile vasculaire. Ger., obere Gefässplatte, Gefässvorhang. A fold of pia situated just beneath the fornix, which extends over the third ventricle and the optic thalami. Its borders are vascular fringes which constitute the chorioid plexuses of the lateral ventricles. [I, 15 (K).]—V. medullare anterius. See VALVE of Vieussens.—V. medullare cerebelli, V. medullare posterius (seu posticum). See Posterior medullary v.—V. medullare superius. See VALVE of Vieussens.—V. palati, V. palatinum. Fr., voile du palais. Ger., Gaumensegel. The incomplete partition between the mouth and the pharynx which is suspended from the posterior margin of the hard palate. Its anterior and posterior surfaces are covered with mucous membrane continuous respectively with that covering the hard palate and that lining the pharynx and the nasal passages. In the middle line it is prolonged into the uvula, and is made up of muscular fibres, acinous glands, and areolar tissue. [L.]—V. partiale. The veil extending from the stipe to the margin of the pileus in the Hymenomycetes. [α, 35.]—V. processibus a cerebello ad testes interjectum. See VALVE of Vieussens.—V. pendulum palati. See V. palati.—V. pupillæ. See MEMBRANA pupillaris.—V. VELUMEN (Lat.), n. n. Ve^{2}l(we^{2}l)-u^2(u)'me^{2}n. Gen., -um'inis. From vellere, to pluck. Fr., velours. The velvety covering formed over some leaves by hairs. [α, 35.]

VELUTINOUS, adj. Ve^{2}l-u^{2}t'i^{2}n-u^{3}s. Lat., velutinus. Fr., velouté. Ger., sammtartig, sammtig. Velvety, covered with a short silky pubescence. [α, 35.]

VELVET-LEAF, n. Ve^{2}lv'e^{2}t-lef. The Cissampelos pareira, Abutilon Avicennæ, and Anthema arborea. [α. 35.]

VELVOTE (Fr.), VELVOTTE (Fr.), n's. Ve^{2}l-vot. The Linaria elatine and Linaria spuria. [α, 35.]

VENA (Lat.), n. f. Ven(wan)'a^3. 1. See VEIN. 2. Of the ancients, either a vein or an artery. [H, 12.]—Ascending v. cava. See Inferior v. cava.—Descending v. cava. See Superior v. cava.—Inferior v. cava. Ger., aufsteigende Hohlblutader. A large vein which collects the blood from the lower limbs and the abdomen. It starts from the junction of the common iliac veins and ends in the right auricle of the heart. [C.]—Superior v. cava. A large vein which carries the blood from the head and neck, the upper limbs, and the walls of the thorax to the heart. It originates in the union of the right and left innominate veins. [C.]—Venæ absorbentes. The lymphatics. VENTRICLE, n. Ve^{2}nt'ri^2-k'l. Lat., ventriculus (dim. of venter, the belly). Fr., ventricule. Ger., Ventrikel, Kammer. A small thick-walled cavity in an organ, especially the heart or brain.—Anterior v's. See Lateral v's.—Anterior v. of the heart. See Right v. of the heart.—Aortic v. See Left v. of the heart.—Cerebellar v. [Owen]. A prolongation of the fourth v. into the primary cephalic vesicle; described as strictly embryonic in man, but persistent in birds, fishes, and reptiles. [I, 14 (K).]—Cerebral v. A v. of the brain.—Fifth v., First v. [Wenzel]. Lat., sinus quintus. Ger., Kammer der Scheidewand. The space between the two laminæ of the sæptum lucidum. [L.]—Fourth v. Lat., ventriculus cerebri quartus. Ger., Kammer des kleinen Hirns. A lozenge-shaped space bounded laterally above by the processus e cerebello ad testes and below by the posterior pyramids and the restiform bodies. Its floor is formed by the posterior surface of the pons Varolii and medulla oblongata, and its roof by the valve of Vieussens and the inferior surface of the cerebellum (a layer of the pia being interposed). It connects above with the aqueduct of Sylvius, and below with the central canal of the spinal cord. [L, 31, 172, 332.]—Large v's, Lateral v's (of the brain). Lat., ventriculi cerebri laterales. Ger., Seitenventrikel des Gehirns. Serous cavities, one on each side, in the cerebral hemispheres, lined with ciliated epithelium, and separated from each other in the middle line by the sæptum lucidum. They communicate with the anterior portion of the third v. and with each other by the foramen of Monro. Each is divided into a central triangular portion, the body, from which the anterior, middle, and posterior cornua descend into the substance of the hemisphere. The roof is formed by the lower surface of the corpus callosum and the substance of the cerebrum, and the floor by the corpus striatum, tænia semicircularis, optic thalamus, chorioid plexus, corpus fimbriatum, fornix, cornu Ammonis, eminentia collateralis, fascia dentata, and the substance of the cerebrum. [L, 142, 172, 332.]—Lateral v. of the cerebellum. A furrow on the floor of each half of the fourth v. near the lateral wall. [I, 35 (K).]—Left v. of the heart. Lat., ventriculus cordis sinister. Ger., linker Ventrikel. The cavity which occupies a small part of the left anterior portion of the heart and the larger part of its left posterior portion, and forms the apex. It communicates with the aorta and the left auricle. By the contractions of its walls it propels the arterial blood into the arterial system through the aorta. [L.]—Middle v. See Third v.—Middle v. of the cerebellum. The median fissure on the floor of the fourth v. [I, 14 (K).]—Right v. of the heart. Lat., ventriculus cordis dexter. Ger., rechter Ventrikel. The rounded triangular cavity of the heart which forms the greater part of its anterior and a small part of its posterior portion. It communicates with the right auricle, and propels the venous blood through the pulmonary arteries. [L.]—Second v's, Superior v's. See Lateral v's.—Sylvian v. See Fifth v.—Terminal v. See Fourth v.—Third v. Ger., Mittelhirnhöhle, mittlere Kammer. An open space between the optic thalami, bounded above by the lower surface of the velum interpositum, and laterally by the peduncles of the pineal gland. Its floor is formed by the lamina cinerea, tuber cinereum, infundibulum, corpora albicantia, and posterior perforated space. It communicates with the lateral v's through the foramen of Monro, and with the fourth v. through the aqueduct of Sylvius and with the cavity of the infundibulum. [L, 31, 142, 172.]—Third v. proper. The third v. as distinguished from the foramen of Monro. ["Boston Med. and Surg. Jour.," Aug. 12, 1880, p. 152 (K).]—V. of Arantius. 1. VERATRIC ACID, n. Ve^{2}r-at'ri^{2}k. Ger., Veratrinsäure, Veratrumsäure. An insoluble crystalline substance, $C_6H_3(OCH_3)_2$-CO.OH, found in Veratrum sabadilla. [B, 3, 93 (α, 14, 38).]

VERATRINA (Lat.), n. f. Ve^{2}r(war)-a^{2}t(a^{3}t)-rin(ren)'a^3. See VERATRINE.—Oleatum veratrinæ [U. S. Ph.]. A preparation made by rubbing up 2 parts of veratrine with a little oleic acid, gradually adding more of the acid till 100 parts are obtained, and stirring till the veratrine is dissolved. [B, 95 (α, 38).]—Tinctura veratrinæ [Belg. Ph.]. A solution of veratrine in 199 times as much 92-per-cent. alcohol. [B, 95 (α, 38).]—Unguentum veratrinæ. An ointment consisting of 4 parts of veratrine, 6 of alcohol, and 96 of benzoinated lard [U. S. Ph.]; or of 1 part of veratrine, triturated with a little almond-oil, and 90 parts of lard [Br. Ph.]; or of 1 part of veratrine, 7 parts of olive-oil, and a mixture of 14 of solid paraffin and 41 of petrolatum [Russ. Ph.]. [B, 95 (α, 38).]

VERATRINE, n. Ve^{2}r'a^{2}t-ren. Lat., veratrina, veratria. A poisonous alkaloid, $C_{32}H_{49}NO_9$, or mixture of alkaloids, obtained from the seeds of Schœnocaulon officinale. Commercial v. occurs as a yellowish-white or grayish-white amorphous powder. Though it has no odor, it produces violent sneezing. The crystalline v. of Merck (identical with the pure v. of Flückiger and the cevadine of Wright and Luff) occurs as anhydrous, transparent crystals becoming opaque in the air. A soluble variety, the amorphous v. of Flückiger and the veratridine of Bosetti, is known as a yellow-white resinous mass soluble in cold water but passing into the insoluble crystalline form when its solution is heated. Schmidt and Köppen recognize a third modification of v., but this seems to be a mixture similar to commercial v. V. is used externally in neuralgia. [B, 95, 270 (α, 38).]

VERATRINUM (Lat.), n. n. Ve^{2}r(war)-a^{2}t(a^{3}t)-rin(ren)'u^{3}m-(u^{4}m). See VERATRINE.—Unguentum veratrini [Russ. Ph.]. See Unguentum VERATRINÆ.

VERATROIDINE, n. Ve^{2}r-a^{2}t-roid'en. Fr., vératroïdine. An amorphous or partially crystalline alkaloid said to be found in veratrum. Its existence is doubted by E. Schmidt. [B, 270 (α, 38).]

VERATROL, n. Ve^{2}r'a^{2}t-ro^{2}l. Fr., vératrol. Ger., V. A liquid, $C_6H_4(OCH_3)_2$. [B, 3, 270 (α, 38).]

VERATRUM (Lat.), n. n. Ve^{2}r(war)-a^{2}t(a^{3}t)'ru^{3}m(ru^{4}m). Fr., vératre, vératrum. Ger., Germer. False hellebore; a genus of the Veratreæ, which are a tribe of the Liliaceæ. [α, 35.]—Decoctum veratri. Fr., décoction (ou hydrolé) d'ellébore blanc. A preparation made by boiling 39 parts of white hellebore in 946 parts of water until reduced one half, then straining and adding 61 parts of alcohol. [B, 119 (α, 38).]—Extractum veratri viridis fluidum [U. S. Ph.]. A preparation made by exhausting 100 grammes of V. viride with alcohol in a percolator, reserving 90 c. c., evaporating the residue to a soft extract, mixing the two, and bringing up to 100 c. c. [B, 5, 93 (α, 38).]—Infusum veratri albi [Russ. Ph.]. A preparation made by treating 18 centigrammes of white hellebore over the water-bath for five minutes with water enough to make 30 grammes of strained infusion. [B, 95 (α, 38).]—Radix veratri. 1. The root of Helleborus niger. [α, 35.] 2. Of the Ger. Ph., see under V. album.—Rhizoma veratri (albi). Fr., hellébore blanc (souche) [Fr. Cod.]. Cod.] (through a 1,000-mesh sieve [Russ. Ph.]) [B, 95 (α, 38).]—Tinctura veratri [Ger. Ph., Swiss Ph.] (albi [Austr. Ph., Belg. Ph., Russ. Ph.]). Fr., teinture d'hellébore blanc [Fr. Cod.]. A tincture made by macerating or digesting the rhizome of white hellebore in 5 (10 [Ger. Ph., Russ. Ph.]) times as much dilute alcohol. [B, 95 (α, 38).]—Tinctura veratri viridis. A tincture made by treating 1 part of the rhizome of V. viride in No. 60 powder with alcohol enough to make 2 parts by percolation after one day's maceration [U. S. Ph.]; or 4 oz. of the rhizome in No. 40 powder with alcohol enough to make 20 fluid oz. after two days' maceration [Br. Ph.]; or 1 part of the rhizome with 5 parts of dilute alcohol [Hung. Ph., 1st ed.]. [B, 95 (α, 38).]—V. album. Fr., vératrum (ou vératre) blanc, varaire. Ger., weisser Germer, weisse Nieswurz. 1. Langwort, lyngwort, white hellebore; a native of the mountainous regions of Europe and northern and middle Asia. It has the acrid, poisonous properties of V. viride, and probably in greater degree. The fleshy root-stock (radix veratri [Ger. Ph.], v. album [U. S. Ph., 1870]) occurs in cylindrical or subconical, rough pieces, more or less beset with the remains of roots. It is a general stimulant to the secretions, but is now rarely used, except in scabies, etc., and by the veterinarians. It was formerly used in dropsy, mania, epilepsy, leprosy, etc. It contains, according to Wright and Luff, jervine, rubijervine, pseudojervine, veratralbine, and traces of a sternutatory alkaloid. It does not contain veratrine (Maisch). [α, 35.] 2. Of the U. S. Ph., see under 1st def.—V. frigidum. A Mexican species. The rhizome closely resembles that of V. album, and has like properties. [α, 35.]—V. lobelianum. Ger., Lobel's Germer. A variety (by some considered a distinct species) of V. album found in southern and middle Europe. [α, 35.]—V. nigrum. 1. The Helleborus niger and other species of Helleborus. 2. A species found in central and southern Europe. Its rhizome is substituted for that of V. album, but is smaller and less active. [α, 35.]—V. officinale. See SCHŒNOCAULON officinale.—V. sabadilla. A species indigenous to Mexico, the West Indies, and (according to some) China. It resembles V. album, and is said, probably erroneously, to furnish a portion of the cevadilla-seed of commerce. [α, 35.]—V. viride. Fr., vératrum (ou vératre) vert. Ger., grüner Germer. 1. American (or swamp-) hellebore, Indian poke, poke-root, itch-weed, a variety, according to Hanbury, of V. album, but usually regarded as a distinct species, growing in the United States and Canada. The acrid rhizome (the v. viride of the U. S. Ph.), a powerful spinal and arterial depressant, is from an inch to three inches long, obtuse at the end, externally of a dark-brown color, and beset with yellowish roots marked with numerous indentations; in the shops it occurs in small fragments or transverse slices or discs of a buff, brownish, or whitish color. By the early colonists it was used as a purgative, antiscorbutic, and insecticide, but it is now employed as a cardiac, arterial, and nervous sedative. It is said not to be narcotic and rarely to cause purging. [α, 35.] 2. Of the U. S. Ph., see under 1st def.

[α, 35.]—Resina v. See SANDARAC.—V. caseosa. Fr., enduit sébacé, vernis caséeux. Ger., käsige Schmiere, Hautschlacke, Fruchtschleim. A viscid, whitish, fatty material found on the fœtus at birth; a mixture of cast-off epithelium, downy hairs, and the secretion of the sebaceous glands.—V. sandaraca, V. sicca. See SANDARAC.

VERNONIA (Lat.), n. f. Vu^{5}rn-on'i^2-a^3. From W. Vernon, an English botanist. Fr., vernonie. Ger., Vernonie. Iron-weed; a genus of the Vernoniaceæ, or Vernonieæ (a division or tribe of the Compositæ). [α, 35.]—V. anthelminthica. Khatzum (or kinka) oil-plant of the East Indies. The nauseous, bitter seeds, which yield a solid green oil, are diuretic, powerfully anthelminthic, and, according to some, tonic and stomachic, and are used in Malabar for coughs and flatulence. They form a part of a powder used in snake-bites, and, mixed with lime-juice, are used to kill pediculi. The bitter leaves and roots are used externally in rheumatism. [α, 35.]—V. arborescens. West Indian fleabane. The flowers and fruits are used in stimulating fomentations, and the leaves as an antispasmodic and diaphoretic. [α, 35.]—V. chinensis. A species found in southern Asia; used as a tonic, astringent, pectoral, and emmenagogue. [α, 35.]—V. cinerea. An East Indian and tropical African species, used as a tonic and diaphoretic. The root is used as a pectoral and in diarrhœa. The young leaves are eaten. [α, 35.]—V. leptophylla. A species found in the Moluccas; used as a tonic, pectoral, and aphrodisiac. [α, 35.]—V. nigritiana. A species found in western Africa, where it is called batiatior. The root is used as a febrifuge. ["Gaz. hebd. de méd. et de chir.," May 25, 1888, p. 330 (α, 50).]—V. noveboracensis. New York iron-weed, flat-tops. The herb and root are said to be used against snake-bites. [α, 35.]—V. præalta. 1. See V. noveboracensis. 2. A North American species; considered alexipharmac and used like V. noveboracensis. [α, 35.]—V. Rheedii. An East Indian shrub doubtfully referred to this genus. The spicy leaves are diaphoretic, stomachic, etc. [α, 35.]—V. scabra. A Brazilian shrub. The leaves and flowers have a vanilla-like odor, and are used in ophthalmia and, together with the young branches, in aromatic baths and fomentations. [α, 35.]

VERNONIN, n. Vu^{5}rn'o^{2}n-i^{2}n. A glucoside, $C_{10}H_{24}O_7$, obtained from Vernonia nigritiana, a white hygroscopic powder. [B, 270 (α, 38).]

VERNUS (Lat.), adj. Vu^{5}rn(we^{2}rn)'u^{3}s(u^{4}s). See VERNAL.

VERÖDUNG (Ger.), n. Fe^{2}r-u^{5}d'un^2. Atrophy, obliteration.

VERONICA (Lat.), n. f. Ve^{2}r(war)-o^{2}n-ik(ek)'a^3. Perhaps from verus, true, and εἰκών, an image. Fr., véronique. Ger., Ehrenpreis. Cancer-wort, speedwell; a genus of the Scrophularineæ. The Veronicæ are an order of plants consisting of V., Pedicularis, Polygala, etc. The Veroniceæ are a tribe of the Scrophulariaceæ. [α, 35.]—V. americana. American brooklime, found in the United States and Canada; formerly used in scurvy and as an alterative. [α. 35.]—V. anagallis. Fr., mouron d'eau, petit beccabungue. Ger., Wasserehrenpreis, Wassergauchheil. Great water-speedwell, water-pimpernel, faverell; found in Europe, northern Asia, northern Africa, and North America. The fresh herb, herba anagallidis aquaticæ, is used as a laxative and the dried herb as a digestive. [α, 35.]—V. arvensis. Fr., velvotte sauvage. Wall- (or spiked field-, or corn-) speedwell; a European and North American species. The leaves are said to be stimulant, diuretic, and antiscorbutic. [α, 35.]—V. beccabunga. Fr., beccabunga [Fr. Cod.], beccabungue, grand beccabungue, cresson de chien, laitue (ou salade) de chouette. Ger., Bachbungen, Bachbohnen, Wasserbungen, Quellehrenpreis, Wassergauchheil. Brooklime, horse-well grass, water-pimpernel; a succulent salad plant found in all climates, especially in the temperate regions. The fresh herb, herba recens beccabungæ (seu veronicæ beccabungæ, seu veronicæ aquaticæ, seu anagallidis aquaticæ), is used as an antiscorbutic and in chronic diarrhœa. [α, 35.] Cf. V. americana.—V. chamædrys. Fr., fausse germandrée, pichot-chaîne, (veronique) chamædrys, véronique chênette (ou des bois, ou des haies, ou germandrée, ou petit chêne). Ger., Gamanderehrenpreis, wilder Gamander, kleines Gamanderlein, Blaumanderle, Frauenbiss. Angel's-eyes, God's-eye, bird's- (or blue-) eyes, blue stars, female fluellen, germander speedwell; a European species. The herb, gathered usually with the flower, was formerly official as herba chamædris (seu chamædrys, seu chamædryos) spuriæ fœminæ, and was used like V. officinalis. [α, 35.]—V. latifolia. See V. teucrium.—V. major., V. mas. See V. officinalis.—V. montana. The mountain-speedwell of Europe; similar to V. chamædrys in properties. [α, 35.]—V. officinalis. Fr., véronique officinale (ou mâle), herbe aux ladres, thé d'Europe (ou du Nord). Ger., ächter (oder gebräuchlicher, oder gemeiner) Ehrenpreis, Grossbathengel, Grundheil, europäischer Thee, Köhlerkraut, Wundkraut, Mundkraut, Frauenbiss, Hühnerraute, Heil aller Welt. European tea, fluellen, common medicinal tea-speedwell, ground-hele; found throughout all (especially temperate) climates. The stem, herba veronicæ (seu veronicæ officinalis [seu majoris, seu maris, seu vulgaris serpentis], seu betonicæ albæ [seu Pauli], seu alsines palustris), including the leaves and flowers, is astringent and tonic. [α, 35.]—V. parviflora. A New Zealand plant furnishing koromiko (q. v.).—V. scutellata. Fr., véronique à feuilles linéaires (ou à écusson). The bog- (or marsh-) speedwell of Europe. The stimulant stomachic tops are used like tea. [α. 35.]—V. spicata. The spike-flowered speedwell of Europe; used like V. officinalis. [α, 35.]—V. teucrifolia, V. teucrium. Fr., véronique à feuilles de germandrée, germandrée bâtarde, teucride d'Allemagne, teucriette, véronique des prés. Ger., breitblättriger (oder edler, oder wahrer) Gamanderehrenpreis, Erdbathengel, Erdweirauch. Hungarian (or saw-leaved) speedwell. The herb, herba chamædrys (seu chamædris, seu chamædryos) spuriæ maris (seu veronicæ teucriifoliæ), was formerly used like that of V. officinalis. [α, 35.]—V. triphyllos. Fr., véronique à trois feuilles. Ger., dreiblättriger Ehrenpreis, blaues Hungerblümchen, Händleinkraut. A European species; formerly used, especially in jaundice, under the name of herba alsines triphyllæ. [α, 35.]—V. virginica. Culver's physic (or root), great Virginian speedwell; a North American herb. The bitterish, somewhat acrid rhizome is the leptandra of the U. S. Ph. In its dried state it is a mild cathartic and is recommended in duodenal indigestion and chronic constipation. The eclectics use it in place of mercurials, though it has but little influence on the liver. The fresh root is a violent purgative and emetic. [α, 35.]—V. vulgaris serpens. See V. officinalis.

[G.]—V. febrilis. See VARIOLA verrucosa.—V. filiformis. See ACROCHORDON (2d def?).—V. follicularis. Fr., verrue séborrhéique (ou plate de la vieillesse). Ger., Sebumwarze [Hebra], Comedonenscheibe. A disease first described by Hebra, consisting in an accumulation of dried horny and sebaceous matter about the orifices of the sebaceous glands upon the surface of the skin, forming circumscribed, dark-colored, rough, wart-like elevations, which, on being removed, show the skin beneath to be intact. [Barthélemy, "Ann. de derm. et de syph.," 1881, No. 3; G, 3, 75.]—V. formicaria. Fr., myrmécie. Ger., Ameisenwarze. A wart developed in the palmar and plantar regions, producing painful itching. [L, 43.]—V. gallica. See CONDYLOMA latum.—V. glabra. A smooth wart, one the surface of which is not broken by clefts. [G.]—V. gregalis. A wart of a kind occurring in clusters on the hands or face. They often disappear spontaneously. [G, 11, 17.]—V. lobosa. A wart characterized by vertical clefts. [G.]—V. madida [Plenck]. See CONDYLOMA latum.—V. mollusca. See V. carnea.—V. necrogenica. Ger., Leichentuberkel, Leichenwarze. Anatomical tubercle; a form of tuberculosis verrucosa cutis occurring on the hands of persons engaged in dissecting the dead bodies of men or animals. There first appears a pustule with an inflamed base, which is succeeded by a tough, warty growth, with a rough, horny surface, often broken by numerous clefts or fissures. It may disappear in time spontaneously or may remain for life. [G.]—V. non gallica. See CONDYLOMA acuminatum.—Verrucæ œsophagi. A simple elongation of a group of normal papillæ of the œsophageal mucous membrane, with simultaneous thickening of their epithelial covering. [α, 34.]—Verrucæ palpebrarum, V. pensilis. See ACROCHORDON (2d def.).—V. perstans. A wart that persists for a long time, that does not tend to disappear spontaneously. [G.]—V. plana. A wart that has a flattened appearance, and is not much elevated above the surrounding skin. [G.]—V. plana juvenilis. Flat warts occurring in young people, affecting usually the backs of the hands or the face. ["Mntsh. f. prakt. Dermat.," ix, 10, p. 471 (G).]—V. rhagoidea. A wart with a cleft or fissured surface. [G.]—V. senilis. Ger., Greisenwarze, Alterswarze. A wart occurring on the trunk, face, or extremities of an old person. They are usually discolored, flat, and uneven, and are easily detached, usually leaving a bleeding surface. They differ from ordinary warts chiefly in that the papillæ of the skin are very slightly implicated. [G, 34.]—V. sessilis. See V. plana.—V. simplex. See ACROCHORDON (2d def.) and V. vulgaris.—V. syphilitica. Condyloma of syphilitic origin. [G.]—Verrucæ venereæ. Of Plenck, tubercular syphiloderm of the face with the tubercles in compact clusters. [G.]—V. vulgaris. 1. Common or simple wart; a tough, insensitive, more or less elevated growth, varying in size from that of a pin-head to that of a pea. Its surface is sometimes smooth, but often rough and split into many divisions by numerous vertical clefts. It is most common in children, and occurs usually on the hands. [G.] 2. Of Alibert, see V. plana.

VERRUCARIA (Lat.), n. f. Ve²r(we²r)-ru²k(ruk)-a(a³)'ri²-a³. From verruca, a wart. Fr., verrucaire? Ger., Warzenflechte. The typical genus of an order (Verrucariaceæ, Verrucariæ, Verrucaridæ, Verrucarieæ, Verrucariei, Verrucarii, or Verrucarinæ) of angeiocarpous lichens, various species of which are often found on medicinal barks; also the Heliotropium europæum, Calendula officinalis, or Lapsana communis. [α, 35.]

VERRUGA (Sp.), n. Ve²r-rug'a³. See VERRUCA and VERRUGAS.—V. andina, V. peruana. See VERRUGAS.

VERRUGAS (Sp.), n. pl. Ve²r-rug'a³s. An endemic disease resembling frambœsia in its general appearances, which is not known to exist except in Peru, on the Pacific slope of the Andes. Fatigue, debility, and non-acclimation are predisposing causes; neither age, sex, nor race seems to have any influence on the disease, and it attacks animals as well as man. There is a period of incubation of from twenty to forty days, in which malaise, lassitude, depression, and gastric disturbances are present; subsequently there are muscular soreness, arthritic and spinal pain (worse at night), and sometimes muscular spasm, producing torticollis or opisthotonus, etc. A chill initiates a fever (Oroya fever) that is accompanied by a rise of temperature to from 102° to 104° F. (39° to 40° C.), defervescence occurring about midnight. The pulse is soft and compressible, the blood-corpuscles are decreased in number, and there is loss of hæmoglobin. The mind becomes dull, there is effusion into the serous cavities, and, after the twentieth day, there is an eruption on the face, body, limbs, and mucous membranes, of small reddish spots that become papules and eventually form wart-like, sessile tumors usually of about the size of a pea. According to Izguierdo ["Arch. f. path. Anat. u. Physiol. u. f. klin. Med.," xcix, p. 411], they are connective-tissue neoplasms, having a strong resemblance to sarcomata. They are very vascular, and are associated with a peculiar bacillus (see BACILLUS of verruga peruana). They eventually desiccate, leaving no scar. Occasionally they attain a diameter of several centimetres, and exhaust the patient by suppuration and hæmorrhage. The eruption may last from a few weeks to several months. Convalescence is slow. [B; α, 34.]—Frog v. V.; so called from the resemblance of the eruption to the skin of the frog. [α, 34.]—Mule v. V. in mules. [α, 34.]—Peruvian v. See V.

VERSION, n. Vu^{5}r'zhu^{3}n. Gr., στροφή. Lat., versio (from vertere, to turn). Fr., v. Ger., Wendung (1st def.), Lageabweichung (2d def.). 1. The operation of turning the fœtus in utero so as to change the presenting part materially. 2. A deviation of an organ, especially the uterus, from its natural posture; an inclination.—Abdominal v. See External v.—Ano-pelvic v. Of Cazeaux and Guéniot, a method of pelvic v., recommended in difficult cases, in which the child is seized by the pubic arch or the tip of the coccyx, a finger being hooked into the mother's rectum for the purpose. [A, 15.]—Bipolar v. Turning by acting upon both poles of the fœtus. See also Combined external and internal v.—Busch's cephalic v. See under METHOD.—Cephalic spontaneous v. That variety of spontaneous v. in which the cephalic pole engages. [A, 24.]—Cephalic v. Syn.: head-turning, rectification (applied to a mere change of position). Turning so as to cause the head to present.—Combined (external and internal) v. Fr., v. par manœuvres internes et externes combinées (ou combinée, ou bipolaire, ou mixte). Ger., combinirte äussere und innere Wendung. Of J. B. Hicks, a variety of bipolar v.; only two or three fingers are introduced into the uterus, and with them the presenting pole is pushed away from the brim of the pelvis while the other hand, applied to the abdominal wall, presses or slides the opposite pole down into the pelvic inlet.—D'Outrepont's cephalic v. See D'Outrepont's METHOD of cephalic v.—External v. Fr., v. par manœuvres externes. Ger., Wendung durch äussere Handgriffe. V. by external manipulation solely.—Forced v. See ACCOUCHEMENT forcé.—French method of v. A method of podalic v. in which the hand is first directed to the breech as a guide, and then follows down between the thighs to the feet. [A, 61.] Cf. German method of v.—German method of v. A method of podalic v. in which the hand is carried up on the abdominal aspect of the fœtus directly to the feet. [A, 61.] Cf. French method of v.—Hicks's method of v. See Combined v.—Internal v. Fr., v. par manœuvres internes. Ger., Wendung durch innere Handgriffe. V. with the hand carried into the uterus.—Mixed v. See Combined v.—Pelvic spontaneous v. That variety of spontaneous v. in which the pelvic pole engages. [A, 24.]—Pelvic v. Fr., v. pelvienne. Ger., Wendung auf den Steiss. Turning by the breech; v. by the pelvic pole.—Podalic v. Lat., in pedes versio. Fr., v. podalique. Ger., Wendung auf die Füsse. Turning by the feet.—Spontaneous v. Ger., Selbstwendung. The process by which a transverse presentation of the fœtus is converted by the powers of nature into a presentation of one or the other pole. See also Cephalic spontaneous v., Pelvic spontaneous v., and Spontaneous EVOLUTION.—Two-finger v. V. by the introduction of two fingers within the uterus.—V. by the breech. Fr., v. sur le siége. See Pelvic v.—V. by the head. See Cephalic v.—V. monopode (Fr.), V. on one leg. Podalic v. in which only one foot is brought down.

VERTEBRA (Lat.), n. f. Vu^{5}rt(we^{2}rt)'e^{2}b-ra^3. From vertere, to turn. Gr., σφόνδυλος, σπόνδυλος. Fr., vertèbre. Ger., Wirbel. 1. One of the osseous segments of which the "skeleton proper" is made up. It consists typically of a number of osseous pieces definitely arranged so as to form two rings, a dorsal and a ventral, meeting in a common centre (the centrum), which inclose respectively the central nervous system and the circulatory organs and viscera, and are known as the neural and hæmal arches (q. v.). 2. As commonly used, one of the separate pieces which make up the vertebral column. [L.]—Amphicœlous v. [Huxley]. A v. of which the body is concave both before and behind. Cf. Procœlous v. and Opisthocœlous v.—Basilar v. The last lumbar v.—Caudal vertebræ. 1. The vertebræ of the tail. [L. 41 (a, 14).] 2. In man, see Coccygeal vertebræ.—Cephalic vertebræ. Ger., Kopfwirbel. The bones of the skull considered as vertebral in type. Some writers restrict the term to such of the cranial bones as are developed from primordial cartilage, excluding those of intra-membranous formation. Cf. Cranial vertebræ.—Cervical vertebræ. The anterior or superior seven of the vertebræ, the two nearest the skull being termed the atlas and axis. They have the transverse processes perforated for the vertebral artery, the spinous process short and bifid and the lumen of the neural arch somewhat triangular and larger than in the dorsal or lumbar vertebræ. [L.]—Coccygeal vertebræ. Ger., Steisswirbel. Syn.: caudal vertebræ. The vertebræ of the coccygeal region. They are rudimentary, commonly four in number, sometimes five, seldom three.—Cranial vertebræ. Ger., Schädelwirbel. Vertebræ whose component parts consist of cranial bones and the osseous and cartilaginous appendages of the skull. The theory of their existence was advanced by Goethe and Oken and elaborated by Cuvier and Sir Richard Owen. Their homology with true vertebræ is no longer accepted on embryological evidence. [L.]—Dorsal vertebræ. The vertebræ, twelve in number, with which the ribs articulate. They are especially characterized by articular surfaces for the ribs, downward-sloping spinous processes, and a small circular lumen of the neural arch. [L.]—False vertebræ. The fused segments of the coccyx and the sacrum.

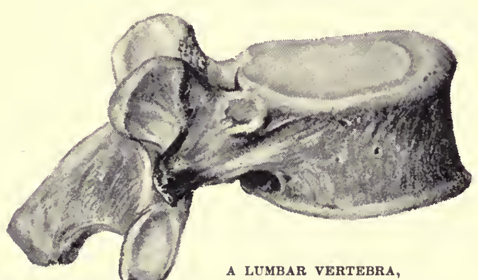
THE ATLAS, VIEWED FROM ABOVE.



Viewed from above. Viewed laterally.
THE SEVENTH CERVICAL VERTEBRA.

[L.]—First cervical v. See Atlas.—Fixed vertebræ. See False vertebræ.—Fronto v., Fronto-mandibular v. A cranial v. having the body of the presphenoid as its centrum, its neural arch made up of the presphenoid, orbito-sphenoid, and frontal bones, and its hæmal arch consisting of the vomer and the prefrontal and nasal bones. [L, 27.]—Lumbar vertebræ. Ger., Lendenwirbel. The five vertebræ which lie above or anterior to the sacrum. They lack costal articular surfaces, and the transverse diameters of their bodies is greater than the antero-posterior. —Movable vertebræ. See True vertebræ.—Nasal v., Naso-turbinal v. A cranial v. with its vomer as its centrum, its neural arch made up of the ethmoid and nasal bones, and its hæmal arch of the turbinate bones. [L, 13.]—Occipital v., Occipito-hyoidal

A LUMBAR VERTEBRA, VIEWED FROM ABOVE.

v. The basilar process of the occipital bone (centrum), the lateral and anterior portions of the same bone and the mastoid walls of the tympanum (neural arch), and the scapulæ, clavicles, and hyoid bones (hæmal arch). [L, 13.]—Opisthocœlous v. [Huxley]. A v. having its body concave behind. Cf. Procœlous v. and Amphicœlous v.—Parietal v., Parieto-maxillary v. A cranial v. having the body of the basisphenoid bone as its centrum, its neural arch made up of the basisphenoid, alisphenoid, parietal, and mastoid bones, and its hæmal arch of the inferior maxilla. [L, 13, 27.]—Pelvic vertebræ. See Sacral vertebræ.—Primitive v., Primordial vertebræ. See Mesoblastic somites.—Procœlous v. [Huxley]. A v. having its body concave in front. Cf. Amphicœlous v. and Opisthocœlous v.—Sacral vertebræ. Fr., vertèbres sacrées. Ger., Kreuzbeinwirbel. The segments, five in number, which in adult life fuse to form the sacrum. [L.]—Spheno-frontal v. See Fronto-v.—Thoracic vertebræ. Ger., Brustwirbel. See Dorsal vertebræ.—Tricuspid v. The sixth cervical v. in lower animals. [L, 13.]—True vertebræ. Ger., wahre Wirbel. The vertebræ which are not fused in adult life, i. e., the cervical, dorsal, and lumbar. [L.]—United vertebræ. See False vertebræ.—Vertebræ abdominales (seu abdominis). See Lumbar vertebræ.—Vertebræ caudales. See Caudal vertebræ.—Vertebræ cervicis. See Cervical vertebræ.—Vertebræ coccygeales. See Coccygeal vertebræ.—Vertebræ colli. See Cervical vertebræ.—Vertebræ interscapulii [Vesalius]. See False vertebræ.—Vertebræ thoracicæ (seu thoracis). See Dorsal vertebræ.—Vertebræ veræ. See True vertebræ.

VERTEBRAL, adj. Vu^{5}rt'e^2-br'l. Lat., vertebralis. Fr., vertébral. Ger., wirbelig. 1. Pertaining to a vertebra. 2. Having vertebræ, vertebrate. [C.]

VETEBRARTERIAL, adj. Vu^{5}rt-e^{2}b-ra^{3}rt-e'ri^2-'l. Pertaining to the vertebral arteries or veins. [L, 153.]

VERTEBRATA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Vu^{5}rt(we^{2}rt)-e^{2}b-rat(ra^{3}t)'a^3. From vertebra (q. v.). Fr., vertébrés. Ger., Wirbelthiere. 1. Animals having a backbone, or spinal column. They are distinguished by a partition, shown in a transverse or vertical section, completely separating the body into two cavities: the dorsal (containing the cerebro-spinal nervous system), and the ventral (containing the heart, alimentary canal, and ordinarily the sympathetic nervous system). The V. are divided into three primary groups: Ichthyopsida (fishes and amphibians), Sauropsida (reptiles and birds), and Mammalia. Haeckel proposes the division into Leptocardia and Pachycardia. [L, 12.] 2. A phylum of the animal kingdom characterized by a notochord, pharyngeal clefts, and a dorsal median nerve tract, derived from the epiblast, beneath the surface of the body and usually tubular. It includes the Craniata, Cephalochorda, Unichorda, and Hemichorda. [L, 121.]

VERTEBRATE, adj. Vu^{5}rt'e^{2}b-rat. Lat., vertebratus, vertebralis. Fr., vertébré, vertébral. Ger., wirbelartig, gewirbelt. 1. Pertaining to a vertebra; having vertebræ; as a n., a v. animal. [C.] 2. In botany, (a) see Lomentaceous; (b) having the blade connected with the petiole by a joint (said of a leaf). [a, 35.]

VERTEBRO-BASILAR, adj. Vu^{5}rt'e^{2}b-ro-ba^{2}s'i^{2}l-a^{3}r. Pertaining to the vertebræ and the lower portion of the skull, especially the basilar bone or process. [L.]

VERTEBRO-CHONDRAL, adj. Vu^{5}rt''e^{2}b-ro-kond'r'l. Connecting the vertebræ and the costal cartilages. [L.]

VERTEBRO-COSTAL, adj. Vu^{5}rt''e^{2}b-ro-ko^{2}s't'l. Pertaining to or connecting the ribs and the vertebræ. [L.]

VERTÉBRO-CRÂNIEN (Fr.), adj. Ve^{2}r-ta-bro-kra^3-ne-a^{3}n^2. Pertaining to or connecting the spinal column and the skull. [A, 385 (a, 48).]

VERTEBRODIDYMIA (Lat.), n. f. Vu^{5}rt(we^{2}rt)-e^{2}b-ro(ro^3)-di^2-di^{2}m(du^{5}m)'i^2-a^3. From vertebra (q. v.), and δίδυμος, double. A double monstrosity in which the individuals are united by the vertebræ. [a, 34.]

VERTEBRO-FEMORAL, adj. Vu^{5}rt''e^{2}b-ro-fe^{2}m'o^2-r'l. Pertaining to the vertebral column and the femur. [L.]

VERTEBRO-ILIAC, adj. Vu^{5}rt''e^{2}b-ro-i^{2}l'i^2-a^{2}k. Lat., vertebro-iliacus. Fr., vertébro-iliaque. Pertaining to the vertebræ and the ilium. [C.]

VERTEBRUM [Zerbis] (Lat.), n. n. Vu^{5}rt(we^{2}rt)'e^{2}b-ru^{3}m-(ru^{4}m). The head of the femur. [L, 349.]

VERTEX (Lat.), n. m. Vu^{5}rt(we^{2}rt)'e^{2}x. Gen., vert'icis. From vertere, to turn. Gr., κορυφή. Fr., sommet. Ger., Scheitel. 1. The crown of the head; a somewhat indefinite area of the head that is highest when the subject is in the erect posture. Obstetrical writers vary in the meaning they attach to the term, some applying it to the anterior fontanelle, others to the posterior fontanelle, others to a point a little in front of the posterior fontanelle, others to a point midway between the two fontanelles, and others to the whole portion of the head between them. The last-mentioned sense of the term is generally recognized by writers of the present day. [A, 60.] 2. The apex of an organ. [a, 35.]—V. cranii. See V. (1st def.).—V. cubiti. See Olecranon.—V. of the bladder. Ger., Blasenscheitel, Blasengipfel. The portion of the urinary bladder at the upper extremity of its longest axis (when distended). [L.]—V. palpitans. See Fontanelle (1st def.).

VERTIBULUM (Lat.), n. m. Vu^{5}rt(we^{2}rt)-i^{2}b'u^{2}l(u^{4}l)-u^{3}m(u^{4}m). From vertere, to turn. See Articular head and Trephine.

VERTICAL, adj. Vu^{5}rt'i^2-k'l. Lat., verticalis (from vertex [q. v.]). Fr., v. Ger., vertikal, scheitelrecht. Perpendicular to the plane of the horizon. [a, 48.]

VERTICIL, n. Vu^{5}rt'i^2-si^{2}l. Lat., verticillus (dim. of vertex, a whirlpool). Fr., verticille. Ger., Quirl, Wirtel. A circle of leaves or other parts lying in the same horizontal plane around an axis. [a, 35.]—Dimidiate v. Ger., Halbwirtel, Halbquirl. A whorl in which the parts are so inclined toward one side of the axis or so spread out as to seem to surround only half the axis. [a, 35.]

VERTICILLASTER, n. Vu^{5}rt-i^{2}s-i^{2}l-a^{2}st'u^{5}r. Lat., verticillastrum (from verticillus, a verticil, and aster, a star). Fr., verticillastre. A spurious verticil, one of the pairs of cymes in the axils of the opposite leaves of Mentha, etc. [a, 35.]

VERTICILLATE, adj. Vu^{5}rt-i^{2}s'i^{2}l-at. Lat., verticillatus, verticillaris (from verticillus, a whirl). Fr., verticillé. Ger., quirlich, wirtelig. Whorled, arranged in a whorl or whorls; of leaves, having the verticil composed of three whorls. The Verticillatæ are an order of plants corresponding to the Labiatæ. [a, 35.]

VERTICILLIUM (Lat.), n. n. Vu^{5}rt(we^{2}rt)-i^{2}s(i^{2}k)-i^{2}l'li^2-u^{3}m-(u^{4}m). From verticillus, a whirl. A genus of Fungi. [a, 35.]—V. candelabrum. A species occurring on rotten wood. Its micrococcus form was said by Tschamer to occur in the blood, urine, fæces, epithelial cells, and mucus of scarlet-fever patients. ["Ctrlbl. f. Kinderheilk.," 1879, no. 23; "Ctrlbl. f. Bacteriol. u. Parasitenk.," 1887, 13, p. 381 (B).]—V. cylindrosporum. A species forming colorless threads often overgrowing Claviceps purpurea. [a, 35.]

VERTICILLUM (Lat.), n. n. Vu^{5}rt(we^{2}rt)-i^{2}s(i^{2}k)-i^{2}l'lu^{3}m-(lu^{4}m). From vertere, to turn. See Tourniquet.

VERTICO-MENTAL, adj. Vu^{5}rt''i^{2}k-o-me^{2}n't'l. Pertaining to the vertex and the chin. [L, 125.]

VERTICO-TRANSVERSE, adj. Vu^{5}rt''i^{2}k-o-tra^{2}ns-vu^{5}rs'. 1. Transverse and passing through the vertex of the skull. 2. Vertical and transverse at the same time (said of the perpendicular transverse plane or section of a body). [L.]

VERTICULA (Lat.), VERTICULUM (Lat.), VERTICULUS (Lat.), n's f., n., and m. Vu^{5}rt(we^{2}rt)-i^{2}k'u^{2}l(u^{4}l)-a^3, -u^{3}m(u^{4}m), -u^{3}s(u^{4}s). From vertere, to turn. 1. See Joint and Articulation. 2. See Vertebra.

VERTIEFUNG (Ger.), n. Fe^{2}r-tef'un^2. A cavity, a recess. [a, 14.]

VERTIGE (Fr.), n. Ve^{2}r-tezh. See VERTIGO.—V. de Ménière. See Ménière's DISEASE.—V. marin. See SEASICKNESS.—V. paralysant. See Gerlier's DISEASE.—V. stomacal. See Gastric VERTIGO.

VERTIGINOUS, adj. Vu^{5}rt-i^{2}j'i^{2}n-u^{3}s. Lat., vertiginosus. Fr., vertigineux. Ger., schwindelig, schwindelsüchtig. Pertaining to, of the nature of, subject to, or affected with vertigo. [D.]

VERTIGO (Lat.), n. f. Vu^{5}rt(we^{2}rt)-ig(eg)'o; in Eng., vu^{5}rt'i^{2}g-o. Gen., -ig'inis. From vertere, to turn. Gr., δῖνος. Fr., vertige. Ger., Schwindel. 1. Any movement or sense of movement, either in the individual himself or in external objects, that involves a real or seeming defect in the equilibrium of the body and is associated with more or less disturbance of consciousness. [α, 34.] 2. Of Rhazes, see COCHLEA (4th def.).—Arterio-sclerotic v. V. due to impaired brain nutrition in consequence of arterio-sclerosis of the cerebral vessels. [α, 34.]—Auditory v., Aural v., Auricular v. Ger., Ohrenschwindel. See Ménière's DISEASE.—Bilious v. Of C. L. Dana, v. due to self-intoxication from hepatic torpidity. [α, 34.]—Cerebral v. Ger., Kopfschwindel. V. entirely due to cerebral disorder. [D, 47.]—Epileptic v. A vertiginous or quasi-vertiginous condition assumed in one of the forms of epilepsy. [D, 35.]—Essential v. Of Gowers, v. that is caused by some unrecognizable morbid state. [α, 34.]—Gastric v. Lat., v. a stomacho læso. Fr., vertige stomacal. Ger., Magenschwindel. V. caused by disorder of the stomach. [α, 34.]—Greenland fisherman's v. An hallucination occurring to an Eskimo fisherman when he finds himself alone in his boat with no land and no other boat in sight, in which he believes his boat has lost its balance so that he rushes from one end of it to the other to restore the equilibrium. ["N. Y. Med. Jour.," July 30, 1887, p. 131 (α, 34).]—Horizontal v. V. which appears when the patient reclines, and ceases when he assumes the erect posture. [L, 88 (α, 50).]—Intestinal v. V. due to some intestinal disturbance. [α, 34.]—Labyrinthine v. See Ménière's DISEASE.—Laryngeal v. A mild v. that begins with a short cough followed by a laryngeal spasm, limited convulsive movements, and transitory syncope. [α, 34.]—Lateral v. V. appearing while the patient is walking along by the side of some structure (e. g., a fence) made up of similar parts. [L, 88 (α, 50).]—Lithæmic v. Of C. L. Dana, paroxysmal v. due to lithæmia. [α, 34.]—Mechanical v. V. produced by the movements of a ship, steam-car, elevator, or other rapidly moving objects. [α, 34.]—Ménière's v. See Ménière's DISEASE.—Mental v. V. caused by some mental disturbance. [α, 34.]—Migrainous v. Of Gowers, v. occurring either as part of an attack or as an occasional symptom of migraine. [α, 34.]—Neurasthenic v., Neurotic v. Subjective v. due to exhausted or irritated nerve-centres. [α, 34.]—Nocturnal v. A sensation of falling felt shortly after going to sleep.—Objective v. V. in which external objects seem to whirl around. [α, 34.]—Ocular v., Ophthalmic v., Optical v., Optic v. Ger., Augenschwindel, Gesichtsschwindel. Of Abadie, a variety of v. accompanied by severe pain in the back of the neck, inability to elevate the pupils more than two or three millimetres above the horizontal plane, and a feeling as of falling backward. It is secondary to disorder of the ocular muscles. [F.]—Otopathic v. See Ménière's DISEASE.—Rotatory v. V. produced by rapid rotation of the body or by looking at rotating objects. [α, 34.]—Stomachal v. See Gastric v.—Subjective v. V. in which the person affected seems to himself to move. [α, 34.]—Vertical v. V. caused by looking upward to or downward from an elevation. VERWIRRTHEIT (Ger.), n. Fe^{2}r-vert'hit. See HALLUCINATION.

VERWITTERUNG (Ger.), n. Fe^{2}r-vi^{2}t'te^{2}r-un^2. Decay, etc., resulting from exposure to the weather. [α, 14.]

VERWUNDUNG (Ger.), n. Fe^{2}r-vund'un^2. A wounding, a wound. [α, 14.]

VERZEHREND (Ger.), adj. Fe^{2}r-tsar'e^{2}nd. Consuming, consumptive. [α, 14.]

VERZERRTSEHEN (Ger.), n. Fe^{2}r-tse^{2}rt'za-e^{2}n. Distorted vision. [L, 57 (α, 14).] See METAMORPHOPSIA.

VERZERRUNG (Ger.), n. Fe^{2}r-tse^{2}r'run^2. Distortion by external force, a sprain. [α, 14.]

VERZIEHUNG (Ger.), n. Fe^{2}r-tse'un^2. Distortion by displacement. [A, 450 (α, 17).]

VERZUCKUNG (Ger.), n. Fe^{2}r-tsuk'un^2. See CONVULSION.

VERZÜCKUNG (Ger.), n. Fe^{2}r-tsu^{6}k'un^2. Ecstasy, delirium. [α, 14.]

VERZWEIGUNG (Ger.), n. Fe^{2}r-tswig'un^2. See DIVARICATION and RAMIFICATION.

VESANIA (Lat.), n. f. Ve^{2}s(was)-an(a^{3}n)'i^2-a^3. From vesanus, insane. Fr., vésanie. See INSANITY.—Primary intellectual v. See DELIRIUM grandiosum.—V. abortiva. An abortive insanity. [α, 34.]—V. acuta. Of Kahlbaum, see Febrile DELIRIUM.—V. in puerpera. See Puerperal INSANITY.—V. paralytica progressiva. Progressive paralytic insanity. [L, 57 (α, 34).]—V. paralytica progressiva circularis. Of Fabre, a recurrent form of general paresis. [L, 57 (α, 34).]—V. paralytica progressiva divergens. Of Kahlbaum, general paresis with occasional lucid intervals in the early part of the disease. [L, 57 (α, 34).]—V. paralytica progressiva maniacalis. Progressive paralytic insanity with access of fury. [L, 57 (α, 34).]—V. paralytica progressiva melancholica. Progressive paralytic insanity with melancholic symptoms. [α, 34.]—V. paralytica progressiva rapida. See Galloping PARALYSIS.—V. paralytica progressiva stuporosa (seu stupida). Progressive paralytic insanity in which the patient is generally in a state of stupor. [L, 57 (α, 14).]—V. progressiva simplex. Of Kahlbaum, primary paralytic dementia. [L, 57 (α, 14).]—V. typica completa circularis. Recurrent typical insanity. [L, 57 (α, 14).]—V. typica incompleta. Periodic insanity with variable symptoms. [L, 57 (α, 14).]—V. typica katatonica. See CATATONIA.—V. typica legitima incompleta. Transitory insanity. [L, 57 (α, 14).]—V. typica legitima sæviens. Acute insanity, generally followed by death. [L, 57 (α, 14).]—V. typica vera. Typical insanity without stuporous accidents. [L, 57 (α, 14).]

VESANICUS (Lat.), VESANUS (Lat.), adj's. Ve^{2}s(was)-a^{2}n-(a^{3}n)'i^{2}k-u^{3}s(u^{4}s), -an(a^{3}n)'u^{3}s(u^{4}s). From ve-, not, and sanus, sane. Fr., vesanique. See INSANE.

VESCE (Fr.), n. Ve^{2}s. See VICIA.

VESCUS (Lat.), adj. Ve^{2}sk(we^{2}sk)'u^{3}s(u^{4}s). In botany, small, thin, weak. [α, 35.]

VESICA (Lat.), n. f. Ve^{2}s(was)-ik(ek)'a^3. Gr., κύστις. Fr., vessie. Ger., Blase. 1. A bladder, especially the urinary bladder. 2. See Graafian VESICLE.—V. bilearia. See Gall-BLADDER.—V. bipartita. A more or less incomplete division of the urinary bladder into two parts by the shortening of a band of the longitudinal muscular fibres. [L.]—V. bovina [Finn. Ph.]. The bladder of the ox blown up and dried. [B, 95 (α, 38).]—V. cordis. See PERICARDIUM.—V. fellea, V. fellis. See Gall-BLADDER.—V. natatoria. See Swim-BLADDER.—V. prostatica. See UTERUS masculinus.—V. saccata. See Sacculated BLADDER.—V. urinæ, V. urinaria. See Urinary BLADDER.

VESICAL, adj. Ve^{2}s'i^2-k'l. Lat., vesicalis. Fr., vésical. Pertaining to the bladder. [C.]

VESICALIS (Lat.), adj. Ve^{2}s(was)-i^{2}k(ek)-al(a^{3}l)'i^{2}s. From vesica, the bladder. Vesical; as a n. m., see COMPRESSOR prostatæ; as a n. f., a vesical artery. [α, 48.]—V. suprema. Ger., vierte Blasenarterie. Of Hyrtl, a fourth vesical artery found during the patency of the funicular portion of the umbilical artery. [A, 19.]

VESICANT, adj. Ve^{2}s'i^2-k'nt. Lat., vesicans (from vesica, a bladder). Fr., vésicant. Ger., blasenziehend. Producing vesication; as a n. (Ger., Blasenzieher), a v. substance.

VESICARIA (Lat.), n. f. Ve^{2}s(was)-i^{2}k(ek)-ar(a^{3}r)'i^2-a^3. From vesica, the bladder. Fr., vésicaire. 1. Of Crantz, a section of the genus Trifolium. 2. Of Lamarck, a genus of the Cruciferæ. 3. An old name for the Physalis alkekengi and Cardiospermum halicacabum. [α, 35.] 4. Of Schranck, a genus of the Tæniadæ in the larval state. [L, 16.]—V. granulosa. See ECHINOCOCCUS hominis.—V. hygroma, V. lobata (suilla), V. orbicularis. See CYSTICERCUS cellulosæ.—V. socialis. See CŒNURUS cerebralis.

VESICARIUM (Lat.), n. n. Ve^{2}s(was)-i^{2}k(ek)-ar(a^{3}r)'i^2-u^{3}m(u^{4}m). From vesica, a bladder. See OVARY.

VESICATION, n. Ve^{2}s-i^{2}k-a'shu^{3}n. Lat., vesicatio (from vesica, a bladder). Fr., vésication. Ger., Blasenziehen (1st def.). 1. The act or process of raising a blister. 2. The formation of a blister.

VÉSICATOIRE (Fr.), n. Vaz-ek-a^3-twa^{3}r. See BLISTER (2d def.).—V. ambulant. See Flying BLISTER.—V. ammoniacal. See POMMADE de Goudret.—V. camphré [Fr. Cod.]. See Emplastrum CANTHARIDUM camphoratum.—V. de Janin. See Emplastrum PICIS irritans.

O, no; O^2, not; O^3, whole; Th, thin; Th^2, the; U, like oo in too; U^2, blue; U^3, lull; U^4, full; U^5, urn; U^6, like ü (German).

VESICATORY, adj. Ve^{2}s'i^{2}k-a^{2}t-or-i^2. Lat., vesicatorius. See VESICANT.

VESICLE, n. Ve^{2}s'i^2-k'l. Gr., κυτός. Lat., vesicula (dim. of vesica, a bladder). Fr., vésicule. Ger., Bläschen, Blase. 1. A little sac or cyst; in histology, a minute solid or semisolid mass (e. g., a cell or nucleus) inclosed by a membrane. [J.] 2. A lesion of the skin or mucous membrane formed by a collection of clear liquid within or beneath the epithelium, causing a small, circumscribed elevation of the surface. Cf. BLEB, BULLA, and POCK. 3. In botany, (a) a cell of vegetable tissue; (b) an air-cavity or little bladder (e. g., one of the air-bladders in many Fucaceæ, which render the branches buoyant); and (c) a spore-v. [a, 35.]—Adipose v. See Fat-CELL.—Air v. 1. See Air-LACUNULE. 2. See Air-CELL (1st def.) and ALVEOLUS (2d def.). 3. See V. (3d def. [b]).—Air v's of the lungs. See Air v. (2d def.).—Allantoic v. The internal, epithelial portion of the allantois.—Anterior cephalic (or cerebral, or encephalic) v. Ger., vordere Hirnblase. A thin-walled cavity formed by the closing in of the dorsal laminæ over the cephalic extremity of the primitive groove of the embryo and a subsequent transverse constriction at about the extremity of the notochord. From it are developed the cerebral hemispheres, pineal gland, pituitary body, corpus callosum, cerebral peduncles, fornix, and lateral and third ventricles. Subsequently it is divided by an antero-posterior cleft, which finally becomes the longitudinal fissure. [L.]—Antipodal v. See Antipodal CELL.—Aschersonian v's. V's formed by shaking fluid fat and fluid albumin together, the latter forming a kind of investment or membrane for the minute globules of the fat. [J.] See also Haptogenous MEMBRANE.—Auditory v. See Otic v.—Blastodermic v. See BLASTULA.—Blood v's. Blood-corpuscles. [J.]—Cerebral v's. See Encephalic v's.—Contractile v. 1. An expansion of the lower end of the excretory canal of some of the Distomidæ. [L, 16.] 2. See Contractile VACUOLE.—Directing v. See Directing GLOBULE.—Embryonal v., Embryonic v. Ger., Keimschlauch. See Embryonic CELL (4th def.).—Encephalic v's. Lat., vesicula cephalica. Ger., Hirnbläschen. The three compartments into which the anterior extremity of the primitive medullary tube is divided at an early period in fœtal life. Other secondary v's spring from the primary one, from which are formed the organs of sense. [I, 15 (K).]—Erythroid v. Fr., vésicule erythroïde. Of Pockel, a vesicular structure described as constituting one of the elements of the ovum; pyriform, milky white, and larger than the umbilical vesicle; thought by Velpeau to be pathological. [A, 45.]—Fat-v. See Fat-CELL.—Germinal v., Germinative v. 1. A somewhat spherical body in the ovum with an investing membrane, having fluid and granular contents with a protoplasmic network and germinal spot or spots; regarded essentially as a nucleus. [L, 142, 201.] See cut under OVUM. 2. In botany, the imperfectly formed germ-cell in the embryo-sac previous to fertilization. [a, 35.]—Glandular v., Gland-v. See ACINUS (7th def.).—Graafian v. Fr., vésicule de Graaf, poche vésiculaire. Ger., Eierstocksfollikel, Eiersack. A closed sac which contains the ovarian ovum. It consists of an external membrane lined with small granular cells (the membrana granulosa) which are condensed at one point to form the discus proligerus. Prior to the ripening of the ovum the v. is situated within the stroma of the ovary, but as maturation advances it becomes superficial, its walls grow vascular, and it is distended with a serous fluid. It finally ruptures, allowing the ovum to escape. [L.]—Kupffer's v. See Postanal v.—Lens v. See Secondary ocular v.—Malignant v. See Contagious ANTHRAX.—Marginal v's. See Marginal BODIES.—Medullary v. of the eye. See Primary optic v.—Mesencephalic v., Middle cerebral (or encephalic, or primary) v. Ger., mittlere Hirnblase. In embryology, the dilatation of the medullary tube just posterior to the cephalic extremity of the notochord, from which the corpora quadrigemina, cerebral peduncles, and aqueduct of Sylvius are developed. [L.]—Nuclear v. See NUCLEUS (1st def.).—Ocular v's. See Primary optic v's.—Olfactory v. The primitive v. from which is developed the olfactory lobe. [I, 2 (K).]—Otic v. Ger., Gehörbläschen, Ohrbläschen, Gehörkapsel. The embryonic rudiment of the organ of hearing, formed by an involution of the epiblast from the outer surface of the head in the region of the medulla oblongata, opposite the dorsal end of the hyoidean arch. [A, 5.]—Ovarian v. See Graafian v.—Polar v. See Extrusion GLOBULE.—Pituitary v. The primitive pituitary body in the embryo. [I, 2 (K).]—Postanal v. A vesicular dilatation of the posterior extremity of the postanal gut. [L, 201.]—Posterior cephalic (or cerebral, or encephalic) v. The posterior enlargement of the medullary tube from which the cerebellum, pons Varolii, medulla oblongata, and fourth ventricle are developed. [L.]—Primary ocular (or optic) v's. Lateral projections from the anterior cerebral v., from which the eyes are developed. [L.]—Primitive cerebral v. An expansion at the anterior extremity of the medullary tube, from which is developed the encephalon. It is subsequently divided into the anterior, middle, and posterior cerebral v's. [I, 28 (K); L.]—Primitive optic v's. See Primary ocular v's.—Prosencephalic v. See Anterior cephalic v.—Prostatic v. See UTERUS masculinus.—Pulmonary v. See Air-CELL (1st def.) and ALVEOLUS (2d def.).—Purkinjean v., Purkinje's v. See Germinal v. (1st def.).—Secondary occipital v. See Posterior cerebral v.—Secondary ocular (or optic) v. A depression, or involution, in the wall of the primary optic v., which receives the lens. [I, 15 (K).]—Seminal v's. Lat., vesiculæ seminales. Ger., Samenbläschen, Samenblasen, Samensäckchen. Two membranous tubes, coiled and doubled upon themselves so as to present a sacculated appearance, and lying on the base of the bladder with their blind posterior extremities (between which the vasa deferentia run) considerably separated. They converge toward the prostate and unite each with its corresponding vas deferens. They serve as receptacles for the semen. [L.]—Sense-v. A v. from which an organ of special sense is developed. [L.]—Spore-v. Lat., vesicula sporarum (seu sporidiorum). Ger., Sporenblase. In the Physomycetes (vesicular molds), one of the bladder-like fruits containing sporidia. [a, 35.]—Umbilical v. Ger., Nabelbläschen, Dottersack, Nabelblase. The navel sac, a structure of the human ovum which in the lower animals is called the vitelline sac or yolk sac. It is situated on the abdominal aspect of the embryo, being continuous with the omphalo-mesenteric duct. [A, 11.]—Unpaired (anterior) v. See Anterior cephalic v.—Urinary v. The allantois.—V. of Baer. The ovum in the Graafian v. [J, 33.]—V. of Balbiani. See Yolk NUCLEUS.—V. of Graaf. See Graafian v.—V's of Naboth. See Nabothian FOLLICLES.—V. of Purkinje. See Germinal v.—V. of the optic thalamus. See Anterior cerebral v.

VESICO-ABDOMINAL, adj. Ve^{2}s''i^{2}k-o-a^{2}b-do^{2}m'i^2-n'l. For deriv., see VESICA and ABDOMEN. Pertaining to the urinary bladder and the abdomen. [L.]

VESICOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Ve^{2}s(was)-i^{2}k(ek)-o(o^3)-sel(kal)'e(a); in Eng., ve^{2}s'i^{2}k-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es. From vesica, a bladder, and κήλη, a tumor. See CYSTOCELE.

VESICO-CERVICAL, adj. Ve^{2}s''i^{2}k-o-su^{5}rv'i^2-k'l. For deriv., see VESICA and CERVIX. Pertaining to the urinary bladder and cervix uteri. [L.]

VESICOCLYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Ve^{2}s(was)-i^{2}k(ek)-o^{2}k'li^{2}s(lu^{6}s)-i^{2}s. Gen., -clys'eos (-oc'lysis). From vesica, the bladder, and κλύσις, a washing. Of McDowall, the injection of fluids into the bladder. [a, 34.]

VESICOPLASTIK (Ger.), n. Vaz-ek-o-pla^{3}st-ek'. The plastic surgery of the urinary bladder. [L.]

VESICO-PROSTATIC, adj. Ve^{2}s''i^{2}k-o-pro-sta^{2}t'i^{2}k. Pertaining to the urinary bladder (or the seminal vesicle) and the prostate.

VÉSICO-PROSTATIQUE (Fr.), n. Va-se-ko-pro-sta^3-tek. See COMPRESSOR prostatæ.

VÉSICO-PUBIEN (Fr.), adj. Va-se-ko-pu^6-be-e^{2}n. Pertaining to the urinary bladder and the pubic bone or region. [L.]

VESICO-SPINAL, adj. Ve^{2}s''i^{2}k-o-spi'n'l. Pertaining to the urinary bladder and the spinal cord. [L.]

VESICO-UMBILICAL, adj. Ve^{2}s''i^{2}k-o-u^{3}mb-i^{2}l'i^2-k'l. Pertaining to the urinary bladder and the umbilicus. [L.]

VESICO-UTERINE, adj. Ve^{2}s''i^{2}k-o-u^{2}t'e^{2}r-i^{2}n. Pertaining to the urinary bladder and the uterus. [L.]

VESICO-UTERO-VAGINALIS (Lat.), adj. Ve^{2}s(was)-ik(ek)-o(o^3)-u^{2}t(u^{4}t)-e^{2}r-o(o^3)-va^{2}j(wa^{3}g)-i^{2}n(en)-al(a^{3}l)'i^{2}s. Pertaining to the urinary bladder, uterus, and vagina. [L.]

VESICO-VAGINAL, adj. Ve^{2}s''i^{2}k-o-va^{2}j'i^2-n'l. Pertaining to the urinary bladder and the vagina. [L.]

VESICULA (Lat.), n. f. Ve^{2}s(was)-i^{2}k(ek)'u^{2}l(u^{4}l)-a^3. VÉSICULEUX (Fr.), adj. Va-se-ku⁶-lu⁵. See VESICULOSE.

VESICULIFEROUS, adj. Ve²s-i²k-u²l-i²f'e²r-u³s. Lat., vesiculiferus (from vesicula, a vesicle, and ferre, to bear). Fr., vésiculifère. Bearing vesicles. The Vesiculiferi are the Physomycetes. [a, 35.]

VESICULIFORM, adj. Ve²s-i²k-u²l'i²-fo²rm. From vesicula, a vesicle, and forma, form. Fr., vésiculiforme. Bladdery, having the form of a vesicle. [a, 35.]

VESICULITIS (Lat.), n. f. Ve²s(was)-i²k(ek)-u²l(u⁴l)-i(e)'ti²s. Gen., -it'idos (-idis). From vesicula, a vesicle. Inflammation of a vesicle, especially of the seminal vesicles. [a, 34.]—Seminal v. An acute or chronic infective inflammation of the seminal vesicles. ["N. Y. Med. Jour.," Aug., 1889, p. 631 (a, 34).]

VÉSICULO-PROSTATIQUE (Fr.), adj. Va-se-ku⁶-lo-prosta³-tek. Pertaining to the bladder and the prostate.

VESICULOSE, adj. Ve²s-i²k'u²l-os. Lat., vesiculosus. Fr., vésiculeux. Ger., blasig. 1. Consisting of or covered with vesicles. 2. Vesiculiform. [a, 35.]

VESICULO-TUBULAR, adj. Ve²s-i²k″u²l-o-tu²b'u²l-a³r. Vesicular and tubular at the same time (said of a murmur). [L.]

VESICULOUS, adj. Ve²s-i²k'u²l-u³s. Lat., vesiculosus. Fr., vésiculeux. See VESICULAR and VESICULOSE.

VESOU (Fr.), n. V'zu. Sugar-cane juice. [L, 49 (a, 14).]

VESPA (Lat.), n. f. Ve²sp(we³sp)'a³. Gr., σφήξ. Fr., guêpe. Ger., Wespe. A genus of the Vespidæ, or wasps (a family of hymenopterous insects). [a, 35.]—V. crabro. Fr., frelon. Ger., Hornisse. The hornet; formerly used as a purgative and diuretic. [a, 35.]—V. vulgaris. Ger., gemeine Wespe, Erdwespe. The common wasp; formerly used as a purgative and diuretic. [a, 35.]

VESPAJO (It.), n. Ve²s-pa³'yo. 1. A wasp's nest. 2. Anthrax. 3. Malignant pustule. [G, 71.] Cf. FURUNCULUS vespajus.—V. del capillizio. See KERION.

VESPARIUS (Lat.), adj. Ve²sp(we³sp)-a(a³)'ri²-u³s(u⁴s). From vespa, a wasp. Fr., guêpaire. Pertaining to or containing wasps. [A, 385 (a, 48).]

VESPERTINE, adj. Ve²sp'u⁵rt-i²n. Lat., vespertinus (from vesper, the evening). Of the evening, appearing in the evening; of flowers, opening at nightfall. [a, 35.]

VESSE-DE-LOUP (Fr.), VESSE-LOUP (Fr.), n's. Ve²s-d'-lu, ve²s-lu. The Lycoperdon giganteum and other species of Lycoperdon. [a, 35.]

VESSEL, n. Ve²s'e²l. Gr., ἀγγεῖον. Lat., vas. Fr., vaisseau. Ger., Gefäss. A utensil for holding liquids, etc.; in anatomy, a duct or channel for containing or conveying any fluids of the body, especially the blood. [a, 48.]—Absorbent v's. The lacteals and lymphatics. [C.]—Ambulacral v's. A system of v's consisting of a circular canal around the mouth (in the echinoderms), giving origin usually to canals which follow the middle line of each of the ambulacral metameres. [A, 12.]—Blood-v. See the major list.—Capillary v. See CAPILLARY (3d def.).—Chyliferous v's. Lat., vasa chylifera. Ger., Milchgefässe. Absorbent v's which arise in the villi of the intestinal walls and terminate in the thoracic duct. Those from the descending colon and sigmoid flexure connect with the lumbar lymphatics or the thoracic duct by a separate trunk. [C.]—Hæmorrhoidal v's. The dilated veins of the rectum and anus. VILLUS (Lat.), n. m. Vi^{2}l(wi^{2}l)'lu^{3}s(lu^{4}s). Fr., villosité. Ger., Zotte, Zottenhaar. Lit., a tuft of hair, a hair-like growth or process, especially from a membranous surface; in botany, one of numerous shaggy or long and weak hairs, also such hairs considered collectively as a covering of a part or organ. [G; α, 35.]—Arachnoidal villi [Luschka]. See Pacchionian BODIES.—Fœtal villi. See Villi of the chorion.—Intestinal villi. Fr., villosités intestinales. Ger., Zotten des Dünndarms, Darmzotten. Minute finger-like or tongue-like processes projecting from the free surface of the mucous membrane of the small intestine. They consist of a central part, or core, formed by a projection of the mucous membrane and a few longitudinally arranged muscular fibre-cells from the muscularis mucosæ. The core of the v. contains a closely set network of blood-vessels and one or more lacteal trunks with a cæcal termination near the free end of the v. If a v. contains more than one lacteal vessel, as in the sheep, there are usually numerous anastomosing branches between them. The villi are covered with typical columnar epithelium continuous with that lining the lumen of the intestine and dipping into the crypts of Lieberkühn. In the duodenum and jejunum the villi are large and closely set, but near the termination of the ileum they are comparatively small and sparse. [J, 24, 30, 35.]—Synovial villi. Ger., Synovialzotten. Minute finger-like processes projecting from the surface of the vascular or Haversian fringes of the synovial membranes. They consist of a central non-vascular core of connective tissue and a covering of small, rounded cells which appear, after staining with silver nitrate, somewhat like endothelia. Some of these villi seem to be entirely composed of fibro-cartilage. [J, 30; "Arch. f. mik. Anat.," 1874, p. 401 (J).]—Vascular villi. See Villi of the chorion.—Villi of a mucous membrane. Small thread-like elevations of the corium seen in the stomach and elsewhere. They are covered with epithelium, and contain blood-vessels, nerves, and lacteals. [C.]—Villi of the chorion. Fr., villosités choriales. Cellular processes or fringes growing outward from the external surface of the vitelline membrane or the outer layer of the blastoderm and eventually covering the entire chorion. Only those confined to that portion of the chorion that forms the fœtal part of the placenta become fully developed. [α, 34.]—Villi pericardiaci. Vascular villi on the inner surface of the pericardium. [L, 332.]—Villi peritonæales. Villi upon the free surface of the peritonæum. Ph.], v. quernum, were formerly used in epilepsy, catarrh, etc. The bark is rich in bird-lime, as are also the poisonous berries (baccæ visci albi, etc.), which were formerly employed as emollients, discutients, and maturatives. [α, 35.]—V. flavescens. See PHORADENDRON flavescens.—V. quercinum, V. quernum. See V. album and LORANTHUS europæus.

VISCUS (Lat.), n. n. Vi²sk(wi²sk)′u³s(u⁴s). Gen., vis′ceris. Gr., σπλάγχνος. Fr., v., viscère. Any one of the internal organs of the body; generally used in the pl., viscera (Ger., Eingeweide).

VISH, n. Vi²sh. See BISH.

VISION, n. Vi²zh′u³n. Gr., ὄψις. Lat., visio, visus (from videre, to see). Fr., v., vue. Ger., Sehen. The act of seeing; the power of seeing; sight. [F.]—After-v. The perception of an after-image. [K.]—Binocular (single) v. V. in which both eyes are used simultaneously to obtain a simple (single) image. When the fovea centralis of the retina of each eye is fixed on an object, all objects lying in the same horopter will form images on the respective retinæ which will lie at equal distances from the fovea, and will therefore be appreciated as single. [F.]—Double v. See DIPLOPIA.—False v. See PSEUDOBLEPSIA.—Half-v. See HEMIOPIA.—Iridescent v. An anomaly of v., usually arising in the lens, in which objects appear either colored (chromatopsia) or with their edges or outlines exhibiting prismatic colors. [F.]—Lateral v. See DYSOPIA lateralis. Manifold v., Multiple v. See POLYOPIA.—Quadruple v. Ger., Vierfachsehen. The perception of four visual images at once. ["Rev. des sci. méd.," April, 1889, p. 682 (α, 18).]—Skin-v. The apperception of light, both quantitatively and qualitatively, by the skin, without a visual organ, as in earthworms, Triton cristatus, etc. [Graber, "Am. Nat.," xvii, p. 680 (α, 32).]—Stereoscopic v. That form of v. in which the combined virtual image seen appears to be a solid body and a perfect counterpart of the object. It is a blending of the virtual images of an object presented separately one to each eye. [F.]—Triple v. See TRIPLOPIA.

VISIREBENE (Ger.), n. Ve-zer′ab-e²n-e². See PLANE of regard.

VISIR-LINE, n. Vi²z-er′lin. Fr., ligne de visée. Ger., Visirlinie. See Visual AXIS.—Crossing-point of the v.-l. See LINE of sight.—Principal v.-l. See LINE of fixation.

VISIR-PLANE, n. Vi²z-er′plan. Fr., plan de visée. Ger., Visirebene. See Visual PLANE.

VISITE (Fr.), n. Ve-zet. A visit; a search or examination.—V. de l'aisselle. An examination of the lymphatic glands of the axilla, as in cases of mammary tumor, with a view to their removal if necessary. [A, 94.]

VITELLOLUTEIN, n. Vi²t″e²l-o-lu²t′e²-i²n. A non-nitrogenous yellow pigment obtained from the yolk of hen's eggs. [B.]

VITELLOMESENTERIC, adj. Vi²t″e²l-o-me²z-e²n-te²r′i²k. Fr., vitello-mésentérique. Of Velpeau, see OMPHALO-MESENTERIC.

VITELLORUBIN, n. Vi²t″el-o-ru²b′i²n. Fr., vitellorubine. A red pigment obtained from the yolk of hen's eggs, a chemically unstable, dark-red powder. [B.]

VITELLOSE, n. Vi²t′e²l-os. Intermediate products in the hydration of vitellin analogous to an albumose. [Halliburton (α, 34).]

VITELLUS (Lat.), n. m. Vi²t(wi²t)-e²l′lu³s(lu⁴s). Dim. of vitulus, a calf. Gr., λέκιθος. Fr., v., matière vitelline (ou jaune), jaune de l'œuf (2d def.). Ger., Dotter, Eigelb (2d def.). Syn.: ovi v. [Br. Ph.] (2d def.). 1. The cell-body of the ovum: the yolk of an egg or of an ovule; that portion of the contents of the vitelline membrane which is to afford nutriment to the embryo and take part in its development during the period of incubation in the Ovipara, and up to the time of the establishment of a nutrient connection with the maternal organism in the Vivipara. 2. Of the U. S. Ph., yolk of egg, the yolks of hen's eggs.—Formative v., Germinal v., Germ v. Lat., morpholecithus. Fr., v. de formation. Ger., Bildungsdotter, Hauptdotter. The protoplasmic portion of the v. as distinguished from the nutritive v.—Glyceritum vitelli [U. S. Ph.]. A preparation made by triturating together 9 parts of yolk of egg and 11 of glycerin. [B, 95 (α, 38).]—Nutritive v. Lat., tropholecithus. Fr., protolécythe. Ger., Nahrungsdotter. The granular portion of the yolk; the part that serves not directly for development, but in a subsidiary way by nourishing the formative v. [A, 5.]—Oleum e vitellis ovorum. See Oil of EGGS.—Plastic v. See Formative v.—Primary v. The v. of a simple ovum.—Retrait du v. (Fr.). A process of shrinkage on the part of the v., giving rise to a space between it and the vitelline membrane. See LACUNA (2d def.).—Secondary v. [Kölliker]. An additional nutritive-v. substance found in compound ova, formed in special organs or in special cells of the ovary. [A, 8.]—V. ovarieu (Fr.). The yolk of an ovarian ovum.—V. ovi. See V. (2d def.).—White v. Ger., weisser Dotter, weisser Nahrungsdotter, Dotterweiss. A thin, white portion of the nutritive v., forming a layer surrounding the yellow v. and penetrating to the centre of the latter in the form of a whitish cord terminating in a globular mass. [A, 8.]—Yellow v. Ger., Gelb, gelber Dotter. The whole of the nutritive v. that is not included in the term white v.

VITERBO (It.), n. Vet-e²rb′o. A place in the province of Rome, Italy, where there are hot sulphurous springs and a gaseous chalybeate spring. [L, 30, 37, 49, 57 (α, 14).]

VITEX (Lat.), n. f. Vit(wet)′e²x. Gen., vit′icis. Fr., gattilier. Ger., Müllen. A genus of verbenaceous trees and shrubs. The Viticeæ are a family comprising the Myoporeæ and Verbeneæ, or a division (tribe) of the Verbenaceæ. The Vitices are the Verbenaceæ. [α, 35.]—V. agnus castus. Fr., (gattilier) agnus castus, arbre au poivre, poivre faux. Ger., gemeine Müllen, Keuschbaum, Schafmüllen, Keuschlammstrauch, Abrahamsbaum, Mönchspfefferstrauch. Tree-of-chastity, hemp- (or chaste-, or monk's pepper-) tree; an aromatic shrub of the Orient and southern Europe, known as ἄγνος to the ancients, who ascribed to it anterotic virtues, and used the leaves as an emmenagogue and oxytocic and externally as a discutient. The hot, pungent, and acrid seeds (or by substitution the fruits), semen agni casti (seu arboris castæ, seu viticis offici- nalis), have been used as an emmenagogue, as a digestive, in diarrhœa and intermittent fever, and as a diaphoretic and diuretic in snake-bites; more recently they have been used, like cubebs, in gonorrhœa. [α, 35.]—V. arborea. A Sumatra species. The bark is used in ophthalmia. [α, 35.]—V. latifolia. An East Indian tree. The leaves are used for venomous bites and the bark and root in diarrhœa and dysentery. [α, 35.]—V. moluccana. A tree of the Moluccas, where the bark is used as a vulnerary. [α, 35.]—V. negundo. Fr., gattilier incisé. Five-leaved chaste-tree of India and other warm parts of Asia. The aromatic leaves are used as a topical application in rheumatism, sprains, etc., and in decoction as a bath for women after delivery. The bitter root and the dried fruits are anthelminthic, and the former also febrifuge. The Mohammedans smoke the dried leaves for headache and catarrh. [α, 35.]—V. pinnata. A Ceylon species. The flowers are used to aromatize tea. [α, 35.]—V. Rheedii. A Malabar tree. The mildly aromatic bark is used in abdominal complaints and, with the fragrant leaves, as an emmenagogue and in after-pains. The young branches are used for rheumatism and gout. [α, 35.]—V. spicata. A species found in China and Cochin-China; used as a calefacient, stimulant, and discutient, and especially in various nervous disorders. [α, 35.]—V. trifolia. Three-leaved chaste-tree, (East) Indian privet; a species having the medicinal properties of V. negundo in greater degree. The young shoots and the leaves are a powerful discutient. The powdered leaves are used as a febrifuge, and the root as an anodyne application. The fruit is used in the Fiji Islands as a nervine, cephalic, and emmenagogue. [α, 35.]

VITIATED-HUMORIST, n. Vi^{2}sh′i^{2}-at-e^{2}d-hu^{2}m′o^{2}r-i^{2}st. A believer in the origin of a given disease in a vitiation of the fluids of the body. [A, 84.]

VITILIGO (Lat.), n. f. Vi^{2}t(wi^{2}t)-i^{2}l-ig(eg)′o. Gen., -ig′inis. From vitium, a defect. Fr., v., achrome, vitilige. Ger., Pigmentschwund, Nebelfleck, Malfleck, vertiefter Hautfleck. 1. In the modern acceptation of the term, and also as defined by certain of the older writers (e. g., gorræus), an acquired form of achromatosis, characterized by white or light-colored patches of skin of irregular shape, usually bordered by a zone more darkly pigmented than the surrounding skin. [G, 3.] Cf. V. of Bateman and V. of Celsus, also ALBINISMUS partialis. 2. See LEPROSY.—V. alba. See V. (1st def.).—V. alba gravior. See White LEPROSY (1st def.).—V. alba levior. An old term for macular leprosy. [G.] See LEPRA maculosa.—V. alphus. See White LEPROSY.—V. capitis. 1. Vitiligo of Celsus (q. v.) in which white spots appeared on the hairy scalp. 2. V. (1st def.) affecting the hairy scalp so as to produce circumscribed areas of canities. 3. Of Cazenave, alopecia areata. [G.]—V. congéniale (Fr.). See ALBINISMUS partialis.—V. gravior. See V. of Celsus.—V. hepatica. See CHLOASMA hepaticum.—V. hydropicorum. Linear atrophy of the skin due to its over-distention from dropsy. [G.]—V. matrum. Linear atrophy of the skin due to pregnancy. [G.]—V. melas. Probably a variety of leprosy. [G, 17.] See Black LEPROSY and cf. V. of Celsus and MORPHŒA nigra.—V. nigra. See Black LEPROSY.—V. obesorum. Linear atrophy of the skin due to corpulence. [G.]—V. of Bateman. A tubercular skin disease of uncertain character said to be followed, on the subsidence of the tubercles, by permanent white, glistening patches. [G, 17.]—V. of Celsus. "A loathsome disease" arising "from a bad habit of body," attended with alteration of the color of the skin (leprosy ?). Celsus described three kinds: alphos, melas, and leuce. The first occurred in disseminated white patches or spots, attended with roughening of the surface. The second (melas) differed from alphos only in the spots being black or dark-colored. The third (leuce) was characterized by spots whiter than those of alphos, affecting the skin more deeply, so that the hairs were rendered white, and the disease was incurable. By some the first and second forms are supposed to have been superficial scaly diseases belonging either to psoriasis or to eczema, while the third form was leprosy. [G, 13.]

VITILIGOIDEA (Lat.), n. f. Vi^{2}t(wi^{2}t)-i^{2}l-i^{2}g(eg)-o(o^{2})-i^{2}d(ed)-e^{2}-a^{3}. From vitiligo (q. v., 1st def.), and εἶδος, resemblance. See XANTHOMA.—V. granulosa. See XANTHOMA tuberculatum.—V. palpebrarum. See XANTHELASMA palpebrarum.—V. papulosa. See XANTHOMA tuberculatum.—V. plana. See XANTHOMA planum.—V. tuberosa. See XANTHOMA tuberosum.

The edible fruits are used in making wine. [α, 35.]—V. latifolia. An East Indian species; used in odontalgia, as a detergent in indolent ulcers, and as an alterative. [α. 35.] Cf. CISSUS latifolia (glauca).—V.-salix. Of Dumortier, a section of the genus Salix. [α, 35.]—V. setosa. A very acrid East Indian species. The leaves, toasted and smeared with oil, are used as a maturant. [α, 35.]—V. silvestris. See BRYONIA alba, BRYONIA dioica, and SOLANUM dulcamara.—V. trifolia. An East Indian species. The leaves are used as a febrifuge and the roots as a discutient. [α, 35.]—V. vinifera. Fr., vigne cultivée (ou de Noé). Ger., edle Weinrebe, Weinstock, Traubenstock. The grape-vine; a native probably of Caspian regions, but now cultivated under numerous forms (alexandria, alicantia, apyrena, muscatella, etc.) in all countries having a mean summer temperature of 66° F. or more. The leaves and tendrils (Lat., folia et pampini) contain tartaric and malic acids, tartrates and malates, glucose and cane-sugar; they are cooling and astringent, and have been used in diarrhœa, hæmorrhages, etc. The juice which flows from the stem when incised in the spring was formerly official as lacrymæ v., and has been used as a tonic eye-wash and in ophthalmia. The unripe fruits contain malic, tartaric, and racemic acids, and (in their skins) tannic acid; their refrigerant juice (Lat., omphacium, succus omphacii, agresta, succus agrestæ) was formerly used against epilepsy. The ripe fruits are diuretic, laxative, and refrigerant, and their fermented juice constitutes wine. The dried fruits constitute raisins. The seeds contain 5 or 6 per cent. of tannin and over 15 per cent. of a bland fixed oil consisting of the glycerides of erucic, stearic, and palmitic acids; they have been used in chronic diarrhœa. [α, 35.]—V. vulpina. Bullet- (or Muscadine, or Southern fox-) grape; a United States species, found also in Japan. A variety known as "scuppernong" is cultivated in the Southern States. [α, 35.]

VITIUM (Lat.), n. n. Vi^{2}(wi^{2})′shi^{2}(ti^{2})-u^{3}m(u^{4}m). Gr., ἁμάρτημα, νόσος. A fault, a defect; an abnormity. [α, 17.]—V. primæ conformationis. See Congenital MALFORMATION.

VOLLLEIBIG (Ger.), adj. Fo3l'lib-i2g. See CORPULENT.

VOLLSAFTIG (Ger.), adj. Fo3l'za3ft-i2g. Full of sap; plethoric.

VOLLZELLBILDUNG (Ger.), n. Fo3l'tse2l-bi2ld-un2. See REJUVENESCENCE (2d def.).

VOLSELLA (Lat.), n. f. Vo2l(wo2l)-se2l'la3. From vellere, to pluck. Gr., λαβίς. A forceps having one or more hooks at the free extremity of each blade. [a, 34.]

VOLT, n. Vo3lt. From A. Volta, one of the discoverers of galvanism. Ger., V., Volte. The unit of electromotive force. [a, 48.]

VOLTAGE, n. Vo3lt'e2j. The electro-motive strength of an electrical current measured in volts.

VOLTAIC, adj. Vo3lt-a'i2k. Fr., voltaïque. Ger., voltaisch. See GALVANIC.

VOLTAISM, n. Vo3lt'a3-i2z'm. Lat., voltaismus. Fr., voltaisme. See GALVANISM.

VOLTAMETER, n. Vo2lt-a2m'e2t-u6r. Lat., voltametrum (from Volta [see VOLT], and μέτρον, a measure). Ger., V. An apparatus for measuring absolute quantities of electricity by electrolytic decomposition. [L; a, 49.]

VOLTMETER, n. Vo2lt'met-u6r. An instrument for indicating the voltage of an electric current. [a, 49.]

VOLUBLE, adj. Vo2l'u2-b'l. Lat., volubilis (from volvere, to turn). Fr., volubile. Ger., windend, gewunden. Twining, ascending by coiling round a support. [a, 35.]

VOLUME, n. Vo^{2}l'u^{2}m. Lat., volumen (from volvere, to roll). Fr., v. Ger., Volum, Volumen, Umfang. Bulk.—Atomic v. Fr., v. atomique. Ger., Atomvolum. 1. As formerly used, molecular v. 2. The v. occupied by an atom in a solid or liquid compound as measured by the increase in molecular v. of the compound due to the addition of one atom of the element to its molecule. This quantity is not constant for each element, but varies according to the method of its union with the compounds. [B, 4.]—Diffusion v. The v. through which a given v. of matter will diffuse itself within a given time on being added to a fluid. [a, 49.]—Equivalent v., Molecular v., Specific v. Formerly called atomic v. The v. occupied by a molecule of a substance. In the gaseous state, and under equal conditions of temperature and pressure, the molecular v's are the same for all substances, and are equal to the molecular weights divided by the specific gravity referred to hydrogen as a unit. In the solid and liquid states the molecular v. is equal to the molecular weight divided by the specific gravity referred to water as a unit. [B.]

VOLUMEN (Lat.), n. n. Vo^{2}l(wo^{2}l)-u^2(u)'me^{2}n. Gen., -um'inis. From volvere, to roll. Ger., V. 1. A roll; anything rolled or wound up. [L, 30 (a, 14).] 2. See VOLUME.—V. chirurgicum. See Eighteen-tailed BANDAGE.—V. pulmonum auctum. See Pulmonary EMPHYSEMA.

WÄSSERUNG (Ger.), n. Vas'se^{2}r-un^2. Irrigation, maceration.

WASTING, n. Wast'i^{2}n^2. A familiar term for tuberculosis in cattle. [a, 34.]

WATER, n. Wa^{4}t'u^{5}r. Gr., ὕδωρ. Lat., aqua. Fr., eau. Ger., Wasser. It., acqua. Sp., agua. 1. A transparent, colorless liquid, H_2O, devoid of odor or taste and neutral in reaction. It is found everywhere in nature, constituting, in the form of seas, rivers, lakes, and springs, about three quarters of the earth's surface, forming also one of the constant constituents of the atmosphere, in which it appears under the forms of invisible aqueous vapor, mist, clouds, rain, hail, and snow ; and, lastly, constituting the important element of all animal and vegetable fluids and entering into the composition of every one of the liquid and solid animal and vegetable tissues. As occurring in nature, w. is never perfectly pure, but contains solid, liquid, or gaseous admixtures, either suspended or dissolved. Hence different varieties of w. are recognized and named according to their source or their contained constituents (river-water, sea-water, lake-water, spring-water, rain-water, hard water, soft water, mineral-water, chalybeate water, sulphurous water, etc.). Pure w. may be obtained by distillation. It freezes at 0° C. (32° F.) to form ice, and boils at 100° C. (212° F.), forming invisible aqueous vapor. Steam is aqueous vapor associated with particles of liquid water in a very fine state of subdivision. Above the temperature of 4° C. water expands on heating and contracts on cooling ; below that temperature the reverse is the case. Hence water at 4° C. occupies a minimum amount of space and consequently possesses its maximum degree of density. As w. is taken as a standard of density for solids and liquids, its sp. gr. is reckoned, at the temperature of maximum density, or 4° C., as 1. W. is a poor conductor of heat. It possesses very great solvent powers, dissolving a large number of solid, liquid, and gaseous substances. Aqueous solutions of non-volatile solids are usually called simply solutions (Lat., liquores) ; solutions of liquids are designated as dilutions, and solutions of gases or of volatile substances are called waters (Lat., aquæ). Partial aqueous solutions of many substances are also employed in pharmacy, and are prepared by boiling or steeping vegetable substances in w. (infusions, decoctions). In certain crystalline compounds w. appears to enter into a weak chemical combination with salts (w. of crystallization), and its presence appears to define and maintain the crystalline form. A similar weak chemical combination perhaps takes place in the formation of an aqueous solution (see Cryohydrate). 2. In pharmacy, a solution of a gas, a solid, or a liquid in w. [B.] See also Waters. 3. A familiar term for urine.—Aerated w.

Ger., Aërat. W. containing air or other gas in solution. [B.]—Antimephitic w. of Larnaudès. A solution of 23 parts of zinc sulphate and 2 of copper sulphate in 975 of w. ["Med. News," Apr. 8, 1882 (B).]—Black mercurial w. See Lotio HYDRARGYRI nigra.—Black w. A disease of cattle, characterized by the emission of red, chocolate-colored, or black urine containing albumin and broken-down blood-corpuscles. [a, 34.]—Camphorated w. See Aqua CAMPHORÆ.—Carbonated w., Carbonic-acid w. See Aqua ACIDI CARBONICI.—Carrara w. W. containing calcium carbonate held in solution by an excess of carbonic acid. [L, 41, 77 (a, 14).]—Chalybeate w's. W's holding salts of iron in solution. [a, 48.]—Chlorine w. See Aqua CHLORI.—Chloroformated w. See Aqua CHLOROFORMI.—Cologne w. See SPIRITUS odoratus.—Cosmetic w. See AQUA cosmetica.—Distilled w. W. freed from its impurities by distillation. Such w. requires more soap than ordinary w. to make a lather, because the fatty acid of the soap forms an insoluble compound with calcium and magnesium, and the salts of these metals must first be decomposed before a permanent lather is formed. [B, 3.]—Hell w. See AQUA infernalis.—Ice-w. Fr., eau de glace, eau de neige. W. obtained wholly or in part from the melting of ice or made cold by the addition of ice.—Javelle w. Lat., kali hypochlorosum solutum [Russ. Ph.], liquor kali chlorati. Fr., eau de Javelle. Ger., Chlorkaliflüssigkeit. An aqueous solution of hypochlorite of potassium, used for bleaching purposes. [B.]—Marmala w. A perfume distilled in Ceylon from the flowers of Ægle marmelos; said to be alexipharmac. [a, 35.]—Mineral w's. Fr., eaux minérales. W's having a special effect upon the system in virtue of salts or similar substances contained in them to such an amount as to give them a characteristic taste. [B, 5 (a. 38).]—Morphinated w. A saturated (0·04-per-cent.) watery solution of morphine, by frequent and long-continued agitation. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxv (a, 14).]—Natural w. W. as it occurs in nature. [B.]—Nitrous-oxide w. See Searle's patent oxygenous aerated w.—Oxygenated w., Oxygenized w. See HYDROGEN peroxide.—Red w. See Black w.—River w. W. obtained from rivers. [B.]—Saline purgative w. See AQUA sedlitzensis.—Searle's patent oxygenous aerated w. Fr., eau azotée. A remedy consisting of nitrogen monoxide dissolved in water. [B, 5.]—Sea w. The salt w. of the ocean and the great seas communicating with it. It contains from 33 to 36 parts in a thousand of solid ingredients, of which over 30 parts are made up of various chlorides (sodium chloride from 26 to 27 parts, magnesium chloride 3 parts, and potassium chloride ⅘ part). The sulphates form the next largest constituent, comprising 3 to 4 parts in a thousand (magnesium sulphate forming 2 parts, and calcium sulphate 1⅓ part). [B, 3.]—Soft w. W. which readily forms a lather with soap. [B.]—Spring w. Fr., eau de fontaine. W. derived from springs. It is often prescribed in medicines.—Subsoil w. A sheet of w. found below the surface of the soil, at depths that vary with the character and situation of the ground.—Sulphurated w. See EAU sulfurée.—Vegeto-mineral w. of Goulard. Lat., aqua vegeto-mineralis [Fr. Cod.]. A preparation corresponding nearly to the liquor plumbi subacetatis dilutus of the U. S. Ph., but usually containing a small amount either of alcohol or of an alcoholic solution of a drug. It is sometimes designated spirituous vegeto-mineral w. [B, 10.]—W.-brash. See PYROSIS.—W. closet. Fr., garderobe, cabinet d'aisance, latrine. Ger., Abtritt. A closet containing a stool for defecation, the discharges being carried off by a current of water. [a, 48.]—W.-cure. Ger., Wasserkur. See HYDROTHERAPY.—W. in the head. See HYDROCEPHALUS.—W'jags. A provincial term for varicella. [G.]—W. of carbonated soda. See Liquor SODÆ effervescens.—W. of Cotunnius. See PERILYMPH.—W. of crystallization. Fr., eau de combinaison. W. which is associated with another substance in a state of molecular combination and in definite proportions, and is essential to the preservation of the crystalline form of that substance. The proportion of w. of crystallization increases as the temperature is lowered, and is reduced as the temperature is elevated; and by exposure to a temperature of 100° C. or to a vacuum all the w. of crystallization may be removed, when the substance immediately loses its crystalline form. In chemical formulæ, the w. of crystallization is designated by appending the symbol for water, (H_2O), with the intervention either of a comma or a sign of addition, to the formula of the anhydrous salt. Thus, $Na_2SO_4,10H_2O$, or $Na_2SO_4 + 10H_2O$, denotes sodium sulphate containing ten molecules of w. of crystallization. [B.]—W. of the labyrinth. See PERILYMPH.—W. on the brain. See HYDROCEPHALUS.—W. on the chest. See HYDROTHORAX.—W. pang, W. qualm. See PYROSIS.—W.-pox. Ger., Wasserpocken. See VARICELLA.—W.-stiffening. See WASSERSTARRE.

WATERS, n., pl. of water (q. v.). Wa^{4}t'u^{6}rz. Fr., eaux. See Liquor AMNII.—Bag of w. See AMNION (1st def.).—Breaking of the w. Lat., aquarum effluxus. Ger., Abfluss des Fruchtwassers. The rupture of the fœtal envelopes at the time of parturition.—False w. Fr., fausses eaux. 1. The liquid sometimes found between the chorion and the amnion at an advanced stage of gestation. [A, 43.] 2. The liquid discharged from the uterus in cases of hydrorrhœa gravidarum. [A, 15.]

WATER-VASCULAR, adj. Wa^{4}t'/u^{6}r-va^{2}sk'u^{2}l-a^{3}r. Vascular and carrying watery contents.

WATERY, adj. Wa^{4}t'u^{6}r-i^{2}. See AQUEOUS.

WATT, n. Wo^{2}t. The unit of electrical energy. [a, 48.]

WATTE (Ger.), n. Va^{3}t'te^{2}. See WADDING.—W'nträger. See WADDING-bearer.—W'nverband. A padded bandage. [E.]

WATTENWEILER (Ger.), n. Va^{3}t'te^{2}n-vil-e^{2}r. A place in Alsace-Lorraine, where there is a gaseous, chalybeate, and sulphurous spring. [L, 30, 49 (a, 14).]

WATTLE, n. Wo^{2}t't'l. In Australia and California, the Acacia decurrens and other astringent species of Acacia. [a, 35.]—Black w. See ACACIA decurrens and ACACIA mollissima.

WATTWILLER (Fr.), n. Va^{3}t-vel-ya. See WATTENWEILER.

WAVE, n. Wav. Gr., κῦμα. Lat., unda. Fr., onde. Ger., Welle. A ridge-like elevation (accompanied by a corresponding depression) of the surface of a fluid which advances while the particles of the fluid have little or no onward motion; hence a cycle of rhythmical alternating movement. [a, 48.]—Contraction w. Fr., onde musculaire. 1. The w.-like progression of the contraction from the point of stimulation in a muscle. The length of the w. is 200 to 350 millimetres in striated muscle, and consequently greater than the length of the fibres, so that normally a whole fibre is in contraction at once. The rapidity with which the w. travels is in a living man 10 to 13 metres a second, but is much slower in cold-blooded animals (3 to 4 metres in the frog). [J, 19, 55, 57.] 2. The graphic representation of a contracting muscle. [K.]—Dicrotic w. A pulse-w. showing dicrotism (q. v.), due to low tension and extensibility of the vessel-walls. It is regarded as an oscillation w. (q. v.). [K, 3.]—Expansion-w. See PULSE (1st def.).—Fixed w. of contraction of voluntary-muscle tissue. One or more swellings which appear on a dead muscle-fibre (as prepared for the microscope), where the remainder of the fibre is stretched, giving the idea that when the fibril contracted from one end to the other it would produce a w. of contraction. [C.]—Negative w. A w. of blood which moves toward the heart during the auricular systole; used as synonymous with "negative pressure," to which expression it is preferable. [K, 13.]—Oscillation w. A secondary pulse-w. due to inertia of the vessel-walls. [K, 3.]—Percussion w. A vibration produced by the act of percussing. [D.]—Predicrotic w. A slight rise in the pulse-w. which precedes the dicrotic rise. [K.]—Pulse-w. The w. of blood proceeding throughout the arterial system from the root of the aorta. The velocity is 9·24 metres a second, and it is propagated more slowly in arteries with soft, extensile walls than in arteries having resistant and thick walls. [Landois (a, 34).]—Recoil w. See Dicrotic w.—Reflected w. In physiological physics, a w. which travels along a closed tube, and, meeting with an obstruction, is reflected back to its origin. [K.]—Respiratory w. An oscillation in the blood-pressure curve, rising during inspiration and falling during expiration in consequence of the variations of intra-thoracic pressure during respiration. [a, 34.]—Stationary flexion w's. Oscillations of all the particles of an elastic vibrating body, so that all of them are always in the same phase of a vibrating tuning fork or plucked string. The small parts of the auditory apparatus oscillate in stationary flexion w's. [Landois (a, 34).]—Stimulus-w. Ger., Reizwelle. The contraction-w. which passes along a muscle as the result of a stimulus applied at a certain point. [Gruenhagen (K).]—Tricrotic w. A third w., in addition to the tidal and dicrotic w's, occurring during systole and giving the impression of a triple-striking pulse. [Walshe (a, 34).]—True tidal w. [Mahomed]. That portion of a sphygmographic tracing which is sometimes seen between its apex and its aortic notch; supposed to correspond to the onward passage of the blood resulting from the ventricular systole. [D, 68.]

WAVED, WAVY, adj's. Wavd, wav'i^{2}. Wave-like, undulate, repand. [a, 35.]

WAX, n. Wa^{2}x. Gr., κηρός. Lat., cera. Fr., cire. Ger., Wachs. A softish, plastic concrete substance, consisting essentially of various compounds of the higher acids of the fatty-acid series, especially myricylic and cerotic acids. [B.]—Andaquies w. The w. of a peculiar species of bee found near the Orinoco and Amazon rivers. [B, 2.]—Beesw., Bees' w. Fr., cire d'abeille [Fr. Cod.]. A yellowish or brownish concrete substance deposited by the honey-bee in the honeycomb. It dissolves in boiling alcohol and sparingly in ether, and melts at 63° C. It consists essentially of myricin, cerotic acid, and cerolein. When bleached, it forms the cera alba of the U. S. Ph. [B.]—Brazil w. See CARNAUBA-w.—Butter of w. A strongly smelling, buttery substance left behind on freeing w. of its acid principle by distillation. [B, 86.]—Carnauba-w., Ceara w. See CARNAUBA-w.—China w., Chinese (insect) w. A hard, white, crystalline substance, consisting chiefly of ceryl cerotate, used in China and Japan medicinally and for making candles. It is the purified product of an insect (Coccus ceriferus), which deposits it on the twigs of Fraxinus chinensis. It melts at 82° to 86° C. [B, 4 (a, 35).]—Ear-w. See CERUMEN.—Earth w., Fossil w. See OZOKERITE.—Grave-w. See ADIPOCERE.—Ibota w. A white insect w. deposited on Ligustrum ibota. [a, 35.]—Indian vegetable w. See GETAHLAHOE.—Insect w. Any w. deposited by insects. [a, 35.]—Japanese w., Japan w. A hard, waxy fat, derived from the stone-fruits of several species of Rhus, consisting chiefly of palmatin. It occurs in commerce in hard, yellowish cakes or large, rectangular blocks covered with a fine white efflorescence, and is used like beesw'. [a, 35.]—Mineral w. See CERESIN and CIRE minérale.—Myrica w., Myrtle w. Ger., Myrtenwachs, Myricatalg, Myricawachs. Myrtle-berry w., the bayberry tallow of commerce; a hard, green, or grayish-yellow substance of resinous smell, obtained from various species of Myrica. It is more brittle than beesw', is somewhat bitter, and is readily saponifiable with the alkalies. It varies somewhat in composition. It is used with beesw' for candles, and by the Hottentots as food. [B, 5, 77, 185 (a, 35); B, 270 (a, 38).]—Ocuba w. A fatty substance (sometimes confounded with myrtle-w.) obtained from the fruits of Myristica ocuba; used like beesw'. [a, 35.]—Oil of w. See Oleum CERÆ.—Ointment of w. See Unguentum CERÆ.—Paraffin w. See PARAFFIN (1st def.).—Pulverulent w. See CERA amylata.—Vegetable insect w. See Chinese w.—Vegetable w. Lat., phytocerasium. Fr., cire végétale. Ger., Pflanzenwachs. A w. or waxy substance of vegetable origin, especially myrtle w. It occurs (in the form of coherent layers, or crowded, vertical rods, or rounded or acicular grains) as excretions on the cuticularized epidermis of many plants to protect them from moisture and to check excessive evaporation, and is sometimes so abundant as to furnish a commercial product. [a, 35.]—W'berry. See MYRICA.—W. plaster. See SPARADRAP de cire and CERATUM (2d def.).—W.-tree. In China and Japan, the Ligustrum lucidum; in Japan, also the Rhus succedanea and other species of Rhus; in Brazil, the Vismia brasiliensis; in Guiana, the Vismia guianensis; in New Granada, the Elæagia utilis. [a, 35.]—White w. See CERA alba.—Yellow w. Lat., cera flava. Fr., cire jaune [Fr. Cod.]. Sp., cera [Sp. Ph.]. Beesw' as obtained from the comb without purification. [B.]

WAXY, adj. Wa^{2}x'i^2. Gr., κήρινος. Lat., cereus. Fr., cireux. Ger., wachsartig. Of the nature of or having the appearance of wax. [a, 48.]

WAY, n. Wa. Gr., ὁδός. Lat., via. Fr., voie. Ger., Weg. 1. A road or path. 2. A manner or method. [a, 48.]—Dry w. Lat., via sicca. Fr., voie sèche. In chemistry, the employment of heat for liquefaction (see also ANALYSIS in the dry w.). [B, 38 (a, 14).]—Wet w. Lat., via humida. Fr., voie humide. In chemistry, the employment of liquid solvents (see also ANALYSIS in the wet w.). [B, 38 (a, 14).]

WAYLAND SPRINGS, n. Wa'l'nd. A place in Lawrence County, Tennessee, where there is a saline and chalybeate spring.

WEAKNESS, n. Wek'ne^{2}s. Gr., ἀσθένεια. Lat., infirmitas. Fr., infirmité. Ger., Schwachheit. A condition in which there is a lack of physical or mental force. It may be simply the result of over-exertion and fatigue, without any attendant pathological condition, or it may be an accompaniment of an acute or a chronic disease. [D.]—Cerebro-acoustical w. [Goltz]. The temporary loss of hearing resulting from destruction of the auditory area in the cortex cerebri. [Landois (K).]—Cerebro-optical w. [Goltz]. A temporary loss of vision due to lesions of the visual area in the cortex cerebri. [Landois (K).]—Inward w. A popular term for leucorrhœa.

WEANING, n. Wen'i^{2}n^2. Gr., ἀπογαλακτισμός. Lat., ablactatio. Fr., sevrage. Ger., Entwöhnung. The discontinuation of the supply of mother's milk to a child. [a, 48.]

WEANLING, n. Wen'li^{2}n^2. A child or animal newly weaned.

WEB, n. We^{2}b. Gr., ἱστός. Lat., tela. 1. A fabric produced by weaving. [a, 48.] 2. The vane of a feather on either side of the rhachis. 3. The membrane connecting the toes of some animals. [L, 341 (a, 27).]—Mucous w. See RETE mucosum.—Spider's w. See COBWEB.

WEBBED, adj. We^{2}bd. Of digits, connected by a web or membrane. [a, 48.]

WEBER, n. Vab'e^{2}r. See AMPÈRE.

WEBERA (Lat.), n. f. Vab'e^{2}r-a^3. Fr., wébère. 1. A genus of the Rubiaceæ. 2. A genus of mosses; of some authors, a section of the genus Bryum.—W. corymbosa. An East Indian shrub. [a, 35.]—W. tetranda. An East Indian shrub. The leaves and root are used as an astringent, the root also as an anthelminthic, the bark and young shoots as an antidysenteric. [a, 35.]

WEB-EYE, n. We^{2}b'i. An old term for caligo and leucoma.

WECHSEL (Ger.), n. Ve^{2}ch^{2}s'e^{2}l. See CONVERSION and MUTATION.—Hautöffnungsw'. See METAPOROPŒIA (1st def.).—Krankheitsw'. 1. The crisis of a disease. 2. See METASTASIS (1st def.).—W'jahre der Frau. See MENOPAUSE.

WECHSELFIEBER (Ger.), n. Ve^{2}ch^{2}s'e^{2}l-feb-e^{2}r. See Intermittent FEVER.—Alltägiges W. See Quotidian FEVER.—Bösartiges W. See Pernicious malarial FEVER.—Doppeltes W. See Double (intermittent) FEVER.—Dreitägiges W. See Tertian FEVER.—Schwarzgallichtes W. See Atrabiliary FEVER.—Viertägiges W. See Quartan FEVER.

WEDEL (Ger.), n. Vad'e^{2}l. See FROND (1st def.).

WEDELIA (Lat.), n. f. Vad-e^{2}l'i^2-a^3. Fr., wédélie. A genus of the Wedelieæ, which are a division of the Helíantheæ. [a, 35.]—W. calendulacea. An East Indian herb. The aromatic leaves, seeds, and flowers are used as a deobstruent and discutient. The juice of the plant is an ingredient in amritakalpa rasa. [a, 35.]

WEDGE, n. We^{2}j. Gr., σφήν, σφηνεύς, σφηνίσκος. Lat., cuneus. Fr., coin. Ger., Keil. 1. A solid block two of the opposite sides of which slope to a narrow edge. [a, 48.] 2. A piece of soft rubber to be inserted between two teeth to force them apart.

WEED, n. Wed. 1. A troublesome, useless, or unsightly plant. [a, 35.] 2. See WEID.—Bitter-w. See AMBROSIA artemisiæfolia.—Emetic w. See LOBELIA inflata.—White w. See CHRYSANTHEMUM leucanthemum, ACHILLEA ptarmica, and ANTHRISCUS silvestris.—Yellow-w. See RESEDA luteola.

WEG (Ger.), n. Vag. 1. A way. 2. A passage, a duct. [a, 14.]—Gallenw'e. See Bile-DUCTS.—Lymphw'. A lymphatic channel or vessel. [a, 18.]—W'dorn. See RHAMNUS.—W'weiser. See GORGET (1st def.).

WEGERICH (Ger.), WEGERIG (Ger.), n's. Vag'e^{2}r-i^{2}ch^2, -i^{2}g. See PLANTAGO.

WEGFALLEN (Ger.), n. Vag'fa^{3}l-le^{2}n. See INTERCISIO.

WEGHUSTEN (Ger.), v. tr. Vag'hust-e^{2}n. To cough up. [A, 450 (a, 17).]

WEGLEITEND (Ger.), adj. Vag'lit-e^{2}nd. See EFFERENT.

WEGNAHME (Ger.), n. Vag'na^{3}m-e^2. See ABLATION (1st def.).

WEGSCHNEIDEN (Ger.), WEGSCHNEIDUNG (Ger.), n's. Vag'shnid-e^{2}n, -un^2. See ABSCISSION.

WEGWARTE (Ger.), n. Vag'va^{3}rt-e^2. The genus Cichorium.

WEH (Ger.), n. Va. Pain, suffering; in the pl., W'en, labor-pains. [a, 14.] See also DOLOR.—Abspringende W'en. See Metastatic LABOR.—Blutige W'en. See DOLORES sanguinolenti.—Falsche W'en. See False PAINS.—Gebärw'en, Geburtsw'en. See Expulsive PAINS.—Gichtisches Halsw'. See TRACHELAGRA.—Hüftgelenkw', Hüftw'. See COXALGIA.—Knochenw'en. See DOLORES osteocopi.—Krampfw'en. Spasmodic labor pains.—Nachgeburtsw'en, Nachw'en. See AFTER-PAINS.—Treibw'en. See Expulsive PAINS.—Vorhersagende W'en, Weissagende W'en. The premonitory pains of labor.—W'ader. A varix due to pregnancy. [L, 135 (a, 14).]—W'enartig. Resembling labor-pains.—W'enerregend. See OXYTOCIC.—W'enlosigkeit. A morbid cessation of the pains of labor after the escape of the liquor amnii; uterine inertia. It differs from W'enpause (2d def.) in not being due to the natural distention of the uterus by the unruptured ovum, but to some pathological cause, like exhaustion (Erschöpfung).—W'enpause. 1. The ordinary interval between labor-pains. 2. A cessation of the pains for a considerable length of time. [A, 61.] See also W'enlosigkeit.—W'enschmerz. The pain of a uterine contraction.—W'enthätigkeit. The character of the labor-pains as regards efficiency.—W'enversetzung. See Metastatic LABOR.—W'enverstärkung. An increase in the force of the labor-pains.—W'frau, W'mutter. See MIDWIFE.—Wilde W'en. See False PAINS.

WEHENSCHWÄCHE (Ger.), n. Va'e^{2}n-shwach^2-e^2. Weakness of the labor-pains.—Primäre W. That form in which the weakness of the pains is observed from the first. [A. 20.]—Secundäre W. That form in which the inefficiency comes on after labor has progressed to some degree. [A, 20.]

WEHNE (Ger.), n. Van'e^2. See WEN.

WEIB (Ger.), n. Vib. A woman. [A. 521 (a, 21).]—W'erzeit. See Menstrual PERIOD.—W'lich. See FEMALE, GYNÆCEOUS, and PISTILLATE.

WEICHE (Ger.), n. Vich^2'e^2. 1. The side, the flank, the groin. [A, 450 (a, 17).] Cf. LAPARA. 2. See LINT.—Rippenw'. See Hypochondriac REGION.—W'nafter. An artificial anus in the inguinal region. [L, 30 (a, 14).]—W'nband. See Gimbernat's LIGAMENT.—W'nbruch. See Inguinal HERNIA.

WEICHHAARIG (Ger.), adj. Vich^2'ha^{3}r-i^{2}g. See PUBESCENT.

XALAPA, XALAPPA, n's. Ger., Xalapa. See JALAPA.—X.-Winde (Ger.). See IPOMŒA jalapa (1st def.).

XANG, n. A name for several species of Pluchea cultivated in Cochin-China for their medicinal properties. The leaves are vulnerary and sudorific and are used in tonic and emollient baths. The juice is saltish, and is used in aphthæ, being both swallowed and applied to the mucous membrane after the latter has been cleaned with the oil of a certain fish. [a, 35.]

XANTHAMIDE, n. Za²nth'a²m-i²d. Fr., xanthogénamide. Ger., Xanthogenamid. A substance, $CS\left\{\begin{matrix}NH_2\\O.C_2H_5\end{matrix}\right.$, forming pyramidal crystals. [B.]

XANTHEIN, n. Za²nth'e²-i²n. From ξανθός, yellow. Fr., xanthéine. Of Filhol, a yellow substance obtained by treating dahlia flowers with alcohol. [B, 270 (a, 38).] Cf. ANTHOXANTHEIN.

XANTHELASMA (Lat.), n. n. Za²nth(za³nth)-e²l-a²z(a³s)'ma³. Gen., -as'matos (-atis). From ξανθός, yellow, and ἔλασμα, a lamina. Fr., xanthélasma. See XANTHOMA.—X. multiplex. See XANTHOMA multiplex.—X. palpebrarum. X. of the skin of the eyelids. [F.]—X. vitiligoides. See XANTHOMA.

XANTHELASMA (Fr.), n. Gsa³n²-ta-la³s-ma³. See XANTHOMA planum.—X. en tumeurs. A very rare pathological variety of xanthoma in which there are developed first nodosities and afterward tumors varying in size from that of an almond to that of a hen's egg, and generally lobulated. [L, 88 (a, 14).]—X. généralisé. See XANTHOMA multiplex.—X. tuberculeux. Xanthoma combined with general tuberculosis. [L, 87 (a, 14).]—X. tubéreux. See XANTHOMA tuberosum.

XANTHELASMOIDEA (Lat.), n. f. Za²nth(za³nth)-e²l-a²z-(a³s)-mo(mo²)-i²d(ed)'e²-a³. From ξανθός, yellow, ἔλασμα, a lamina, and εἶδος, resemblance. Of Fox, see URTICARIA pigmentosa.

XANTHENE, n. Za²nth'en. Fr., xanthène. Ger., Xanthan. A yellow substance (probably a mixture of different substances) obtained by heating persulphocyanic acid. [a, 14.]

XANTHIC, adj. Za²nth'i²k. From ξανθός, yellow. Fr., xanthique. 1. Yellow. 2. Derived from xanthin. [B.]—X. oxide [Marcet]. See XANTHIN.

XANTHIC ACID, n. Za²nth'i²k. Fr., acide xanthique. Ger., Xanthogensäure. A monobasic acid, $CS\left\{\begin{matrix}O.C_2H_5\\SH\end{matrix}\right. = C_3S_2OH_6$, a colorless, oily liquid, having a penetrating, sulphurous odor and a sharp, astringent taste. [B.]

XANTHIN, n. Za²nth'i²n. From ξανθός, yellow. Fr., xanthine. Ger., X., Krappgelb. 1. A substance, $C_5H_4N_4O_2$, occurring in minute quantities in the urine (especially after the use of sulphur baths), in the serum of the blood, in muscular tissue, in the liver, spleen, thymus gland, pancreas, and brain, and pathologically as a constituent of xanthic calculi. It occurs as a white or pale-yellow amorphous powder, or, if deposited from a slowly evaporating solution, as small scales. It acts as a base, forming crystalline compounds with acids and alkalies. [B, 3, 12, 13, 49.] 2. See PHOSPHINE (3d def.). 3. See ANTHOXANTHEIN.—X'stein (Ger.). See Xanthic CALCULUS.

XANTHINURIA (Lat.), n. f. Za²nth(za³nth)-i²n-u²r(ur)'i²-a³. From ξανθός, yellow, and οὖρον, urine. See XANTHIURIA.

XANTHIUM (Lat.), n. n. Za²nth(za³nth)'i²-u³m(u⁴m). Gr., ξάνθιον (from ξανθός, yellow). Fr., lampourde. Ger., Spitzklette. Cockle- (or clot-) bur, clot-weed ; a genus of coarse herbs variously placed in the Ambrosieæ and in the Helianthoideæ. The Xanthieæ are a division of the Compositæ. [a, 35.]—X. catharticum. Fr., lampourde cathartique. Ger., Purgirspitzklette. A Peruvian purgative species. [a, 35.]—X. indicum, X. italicum, X. macrocarpum, X. orientale. A widely dispersed species used like X. strumarium. The fruit is demulcent and the involucre is applied to the ear in cephalalgia. [a, 35.]—X. spinosum. Fr., glouteron. Bathurst bur, spiny clot-bur ; perhaps a native of Chile. It is tonic and febrifuge, and was formerly prescribed for rabies. [a, 35.]—X. strumarium, X. vulgare. Fr., lampourde commune, glaiteron, petit glouteron, herbe aux écrouelles. Ger., gemeine Spitzklette, Knopfklette. Small burdock, ditch- (or louse-) bur, the ξάνθιον of the ancients ; a widely dispersed species containing a yellow dye. The root has been used as a diaphoretic, and in China its extract is applied to ulcers. The herb and fruit, formerly official as herba et semen xanthii (seu bardanæ [seu lappæ] minoris), have been used as a laxative, diuretic, vesicant, styptic, etc. [a, 35.]

XANTHIURIA (Lat.), n. f. Za²nth(za³nth)-i²-u²r(ur)'i²-a³. From ξανθός, yellow, and οὖρον, urine. A condition of urine in which xanthic oxide is deposited. [a, 34.]

XANTHOCHROIA (Lat.), n. f. Za²nth(za³nth)-o(o³)-kro-(ch²ro²)-i(e)'a³. From ξανθός, yellow, and χροιά, the skin. See XANTHODERMA.

XANTHOCHYMUS (Lat.), n. m. Za²nth(za³nth)-o(o³)-kim-(ch²u⁶m)'u³s(u⁴s). From ξανθός, yellow, and χυμός, juice. Fr., xanthochyme. Ger., Ghorkabaum. A genus of guttiferous trees differing but little from Garcinia. [a, 35.]—X. dulcis. An edible-fruited tree of the Moluccas and East Indies. [a, 35.]—X. ovalifolius. A Ceylon species. Its juice was formerly regarded as the source of gamboge. [a, 35.]—X. pictorius, X. tinctorius. An East Indian tree. The fruits, which are eaten ripe, yield, when nearly matured, an acrid yellow gamboge gum used as a water-color. [a, 35.]

XANTHOCREATININE, n. Za²nth-o-kre-a²t'i²n en. Fr., xanthocréatinine. Ger., Xanthokreatinin. A poisonous alkaloid, $C_5H_{10}N_4O$, obtained as yellow crystals from fresh beef by extracting with water and a little oxalic acid, exhausting with alcohol, precipitating with ether, and partially evaporating. It produces lassitude, sleepiness, vomiting, and purgation. [B, 270 (a, 38) ; D. Ferguson, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Aug. 4, 1888.]

XANTHOCYANOPIA (Lat.), n. f. Za²nth(za³nth)-o(o³)-si-(ku⁶)-a²n(a³n)-op(o²p)'i²-a³. From ξανθός, yellow, κυάνεος, blue, and ὄψις, appearance. Of Mauthner, red-green blindness, blue and yellow being the colors that are perceived. [a, 34.]

XANTHOCYSTINE, n. Za²nth-o-si²st'en. From ξανθός, yellow, and κύστις, the bladder. A nitrogenous substance of doubtful composition, intermediate between cystine and xanthine, found in the whitish tubercles developed in the digestive mucous membranes, liver, pericardium, and hepatic tissue of a corpse that had been buried for two months. [B, 93 (a, 14).]

XANTHODERMA (Lat.), n. n. Za²nth(za³nth)-o(o³)-du⁵rm-(de²rm)'a³. Gen., -derm'atos (-atis). From ξανθός, yellow, and δέρμα, the skin. Fr., xanthodermie. Yellowness of the skin. [G.]

XANTHOGEN, n. Za²nth'o-je²n. From ξανθός, yellow, and γεννᾶν, to engender. Fr., xanthogène. Ger., X. 1. The radicle, $CS.O.C_2H_5$, of xanthic acid. [B.] 2. See XANTHEIN.—X. amide. See XANTHAMIDE.

XANTHOGLOBULIN, n. Za²nth-o-glo²b'u²l-i²n. From ξανθός, yellow, and globulus, a globule. Fr., xanthoglobuline. A substance found by Scherer in the liver and pancreas ; now known to be identical with hypoxanthine. [B, 3.]

XANTHOKYANOPY, n. Za²nth-o-si-a²n'o²p-i². See XANTHOCYANOPIA.

XANTHOLINE, n. Za²nth'o-len. See SANTONICA.

XANTHOMA (Lat.), n. n. Za²nth(za³nth)-om'a³. From ξανθός, yellow. Fr., xanthome. Ger., Xanthom. A neoplastic disease of the skin, occurring most commonly, though not always, near the inner or outer canthus of the eye and usually symmetrically, in the form of soft elevations or flat patches of a light- or dark-yellow color, due to new formation of connective tissue together with a deposit of fat in the corium and subcutaneous areolar tissue. [G, 2.]—X. diabeticorum, X. diabeticum. An eruption of dull-red, discrete or confluent papules, firm to the touch, that have well-defined margins, are roundish or obtusely conical, and may have a solid yellow or yellowish white head, occurring on the forearms first, then on other parts of the body of persons affected with diabetes mellitus. [Crocker (a, 34).]—X. multiplex. X. in the form of multiple tumors disseminated over the body. [G.] Cf. XANTHOMATOSIS.—X. planum. A variety of x. that appears in the form of yellowish-white or lemon-yellow patches but slightly elevated above the surface, situated most commonly near the angles of the eyes or on the lids, usually appearing symmetrically on both eyes. It also occasionally occurs on other parts of the face or on certain of the mucous membranes. [G.]—X. tuberculatum, X. tuberculosum, X. tuberosum. X. characterized by milium-like yellowish-white nodules or tubercular elevations occurring either singly or in groups, and situated usually on the face (though rarely on the eyelids) and on various regions of the trunk and extremities, especially about the joints. They also occur as flattened elevations on the palms or soles. [G.]

XANTHOMATOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Za²nth(za³nth)-om-a²t(a³t)-os'i²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From xanthoma (q. v.). Fr., xanthomatose. A cutaneous disease in which xanthoma tubercles or patches are disseminated over the body so as to imply a special diathesis. [G.] Cf. XANTHOMA multiplex.

XANTHOPATHIA (Lat.), n. f. Za²nth(za³nth)-o(o³)-pa²th-(pa³th)-i(e)'a³. From ξανθός, yellow, and πάθος, disease. See XANTHOMA and XANTHOMATOSIS.

XANTHOPHANE, n. Za²nth'o-fan. From ξανθός, yellow, and φαίνειν, to show. A yellowish fat obtained from the cones of the retina. [K.]

XANTHOPHTHALMUM (Lat.), n. n. Za²nth(za³nth)-o²f-tha²l(tha³l)'mu³m(mu⁴m). From ξανθός, yellow, and ὀφθαλμός, the eye. Fr., xanthophthalme. The genus Chrysanthemum. [a, 35.]

XANTHOPHYLL, n. Za²nth'o-fi²l. From ξανθός, yellow, and φύλλον, a leaf. Fr., xanthophylle. 1. The yellow coloring matter of plants. [a, 35.] Cf. ETIOLIN.

XANTHOPICRINE, XANTHOPICRITE, n's. Za²nth-o-pi²k'ren, -rit. Lat., xanthopicritum (from ξανθός, yellow, and πικρός, pungent). Ger., Xanthopicrit. 1. See BERBERIN. 2. The aromatic principle in the bark of Xanthoxylum caribbæum. [B, 5, 93, 270 (a, 38).] 3. A bitter astringent crystalline substance in the root of Xanthoxylon ternatum. [a, 35.]

XANTHOPROTEIC ACIDS, n. pl. Za²nth-o-prot-e'i²k. Fr., acides xanthoprotéiques. Ger., Xanthoproteïnsäuren. The nitro-compounds produced by the action of strong nitric acid on a solution containing albumin or albuminoids. [B, 4, 270 (a, 38).]

XANTHOPSIA (Lat.), n. f. Za²nth(za³nth)-o²ps'i²-a³. From ξανθός, yellow, and ὄψις, appearance. Fr., xanthopsie. Ger., Gelbsehen, Xanthopie, Xanthopsie. A disturbance of the function of vision in which objects appear yellow.

XANTHOPSYDRACIA (Lat.), n. f. Za²nth(za³nth)-o²ps-i²d-(u⁶d)-ras(ra³k)'i²-a³. From ξανθός, yellow, and ψύδραξ, a blister.

Ger., gelbe Wasserkrätze. Yellowish eczema impetiginosum. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

XANTHOPUCCINE, n. Za^{2}nth-o-pu^{3}k'sen. An alkaloid obtained from the rhizome of Hydrastis canadensis. According to Lloyd, it is only impure berberine ; but Maisch considers it distinct. [B, 270 (a, 38) ; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxii (a, 14).]

XANTHOPURPURIN, n. Za^{2}nth-o-pu^{5}r'pu^{2}r-i^{2}n. From ξανθός, yellow, and purpura, purple. Fr., xanthopurpurine. Ger., X. A yellow coloring matter, $C_{14}H_8O_4$, obtained from Rubia tinctorum. It occurs as yellowish-red acicular crystals. [B, 5 (a, 38) ; B, 46, 93 (a, 14).]

XANTHORRHAMNIN, n. Za^{2}nth-or-ra^{2}m'ni^{2}n. Fr., xanthorrhamnine. A substance identical with the rhamnin of Stein and the a-rhamnegin of Schützenberger, but Liebermann and Hörmann give it the formula $C_{48}H_{66}O_{29}$. [B, 5, 270 (a, 38).]

XANTHORRHIZA (Lat.), n. f. Za^{2}nth(za^{3}nth)-o^{2}r-riz(rez)'a^3. From ξανθός, yellow, and ῥίζα, a root. Fr., xantorrhize. Ger., Gelbwurz. A genus of the Ranunculaceæ. [a, 35.]—X. apiifolia, X. simplicissima, X. tinctoria. Ger., sellerieblättrige Gelbwurz, Gelbwurzel. North American yellow-root(-shrub). The root, formerly in the secondary list of the U. S. Ph., may be used as a simple tonic. The bark of the stem has the same properties. The wood is used as a yellow dye. [a, 35.]

XANTHORRHŒA (Lat.), n. f. Za^{2}nth(za^{3}nth)-o^{2}r-re'(ro^2'e^2)-a^2. From ξανθός, yellow, and ῥοία, a flowing. Fr., xanthorrhée. Ger., Gelbharzbaum. A genus of liliaceous plants. [a, 35.]—X. arborea, X. australis, X. bracteata, X. hastilis, X. media, X. minor, X. pumilio, X. quadrangularis. Species indigenous to Australia. They yield acaroid resin or similar products. [a, 35.] Cf. Red acaroid RESIN.

XANTHOSE (Fr.), n. Gza^{3}n^2-toz. 1. See XANTHOSIS. 2. A yellow pigment found in cancers, usually forming a fatty or opalescent infiltration without any trace of a preceding extravasation of blood. [Lebert, "Path. Anat.," i, p. 275 (a, 18).]

XANTHOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Za^{2}nth(za^{2}nth)-os'i^{2}s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From ξανθός, yellow. Fr., xanthose. The formation or a deposit of yellow pigment in the skin or mucous membrane. [a, 34.]—X. of the nasal mucosa. Of Zuckerkandl, an affection in which abundant and repeated hæmorrhages from the mucous membrane of the nose, followed by a degenerative transformation of the blood, result in a persistent infiltration of the mucous membrane with an amorphous matter, giving it a dirty-yellow color. This lesion occurs in patches in all parts of the nose, especially on the sæptum. ["Ann. des mal. de l'oreille," xix, Feb., 1893, p. 153 (a, 50).]

XANTHOSOMA (Lat.), n. n. Za^{2}nth(za^{3}nth)-o(o^3)-som'a^3. Gen., -som'atos (-atis). From ξανθός, yellow, and σῶμα, a body. Fr., xanthosome. A genus of tropical American Araceæ. [a, 35.]—X. edule. Ger., Gelbzehwurz. A Guiana species, perhaps identical with X. sagittifolium. The root-stock is eaten. [B ; a, 35.]—X. sagittifolium, X. utile, X. xanthorrhizon. Fr., chou caraïbe. Arrow-leaved spoon-flower of tropical America ; used for snake-bites. The young shoots (Caraibe cabbage) and the starchy root-stock are eaten. [B ; a, 35.]

XANTHOXYLENE, n. Za^{2}nth-o^{2}x'i^{2}l-en. Fr., xanthoxylène. A colorless, volatile oil, $C_{10}H_{16}$, of very pleasant smell, obtained from the fruit of Xanthoxylum alatum. [a, 14, 38.]

XANTHOXYLIN, n. Za^{2}nth-o^{2}x'i^{2}l-i^{2}n. Fr., xanthoxyline. Ger., X. 1. A slightly aromatic crystalline substance, $C_{20}H_{24}O_8$, obtained from the fruit of Xanthoxylum alatum. 2. A preparation made in North America from Xanthoxylum fraxineum or Xanthoxylum carolinianum. [B, 5, 270 (a, 38).]

XANTHOXYLON (Lat.), XANTHOXYLUM (Lat.), n's n. Za^{2}nth(za^{2}nth)-o^{2}x'i^{2}l(u^{6}l)-o^{2}n, -u^{3}m(u^{4}m). From ξανθός, yellow, and ξύλον, wood. Fr., xanthoxyle (1st def.). Ger., Gelbholz (1st def.), Zahnwehholz (1st def.). 1. The typical genus of a tribe or suborder (the Xanthoxylaceæ or Xanthoxyleæ) of the Rutaceæ, by some authors made an order. Most of the plants of the division are aromatic and pungent. [a, 35.] 2. Of the U. S. Ph., the bark of X. fraxineum and X. carolinianum. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Extractum xanthoxyli fluidum [U. S Ph.]. A preparation made by moistening 100 grammes of x. in No. 40 powder with 25 of alcohol, exhausting in a percolator with more alcohol, reserving 90 c. c. of percolate, evaporating the residue to a soft extract, mixing the two, and bringing up to 100 c. c. with alcohol. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—X. alatum. Ger., geflügeltes Gelbholz. Japan pepper ; a species found in Japan, China, and southern Asia, having a peculiar aromatic pungency. The fruits are used as a condiment and stimulant. [a, 35.]—X. americanum. See X. fraxineum.—X. aromaticum. A species found in the Bahamas. The bark of the root, stem, and branches is used as an antiperiodic, and in blennorrhœa, syphilis, and odontalgia. [a, 35.]—X. Avicennæ. A stimulant Chinese species used as an alexipharmac. [a, 35.]—X. budrunga. A tree of Assam and India. The fruits, which have the odor of lemon-peel and are used medicinally, contain in their outer coat a fragrant balsam and in their warm, spicy seeds an aromatic oil. The aromatic root is sudorific, emmenagogue, and febrifuge. [a, 35.]—X. capense. Wild cardamom ; an aromatic South African species. [a, 35.]—X. caribbæum. Fr., xanthoxyle à gros aiguillons, bois épineux blanc, frêne épineux. Ger., caraibisches Zahnwehholz. 1. Satin-wood tree of tropical America. The wood (bois piquant) is said to contain a poisonous alkaloid. [a, 35.] 2. See X. clava.—X. carolinianum. 1. Of Gärtner, see X. clava. 2. A species found in the Southern States. The bark has properties like those of X. fraxineum. [a, 35.]—X. cauliflorum. Fr., xanthoxyle (ou clavalier) à feuilles de frêne. A North American species. The inner bark is sialagogue and sudorific. The peppery seeds are used in odontalgia. [a, 35.]—X. clava (Herculis), X. clavatum. Fr., massue d'Hercule (1st def.), bois épineux jaune (ou blanc) (2d def.). Ger., Zahnwehholz (1st def.), caraibisches Gelbholz (1st def.). 1. Hercules's-club, southern prickly ash, West Indian (or prickly) yellow-wood. The aromatic and astringent bark contains berberine and is used like that of X. aromaticum. [a, 35.] 2. See X. fraxineum.—X. elegans. A South American species, locally called jaborandi. [a, 35, 39.] Cf. JABORANDI of Riedel.—X. emarginatum. Ger., ausgerandetes Gelbholz. An aromatic tree the wood of which is known in Jamaica as lignum rorum. The leaves and the bark of the branches are used in stimulant baths and fomentations. [a, 35.]—X. floridanum. See X. clava (1st def.).—X. fraxineum. Fr., xanthoxyle (ou frêne) épineux. Ger., Zahnwehholz. Tooth-ache tree, prickly ash, angelica tree ; a North American species. The capsules and leaves smell like oil of lemon. The bark, which with that of X. carolinianum constitutes the x. of the U. S. Ph., occurs in light, brittle, nearly inodorous, dark-gray quills covered with whitish patches and small black dots. It has at first a sweetish, somewhat aromatic taste, but becomes bitter and acrid if chewed. It is diuretic, diaphoretic, and stimulant. The powder is also used topically as an irritant. The bark is chewed for odontalgia, and has been recommended in paralysis of the tongue. [a, 35.]—X. fraxinifolium. See X. cauliflorum and X. fraxineum.—X. hermaphroditum. Ger., zwitterblüthiges Gelbholz. A Guiana and West Indian tree yielding a yellow balsamic resin used for plasters. The pungent, aromatic capsules are used like pepper. [a, 35.]—X. hiemale. A Brazilian shrub. The bark is used in otalgia. [a, 35.]—X. naranjillo. A species used as a sudorific and diuretic in the Argentine Republic. ["Am. Jour. of Pharm.," Apr., 1890, p. 177 (a, 50).]—X. nitidum. A China shrub. The aromatic leaves are used as a spice, and the aromatic root and bark as a sudorific, emmenagogue, and febrifuge. [a, 35.]—X. peckoltianum. A Brazilian species. The juice of the fresh leaves is an active emmenagogue, and is used as an abortifacient. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxiv (a, 14).]—X. pentanome. Sp., palo mulato de México [Mex. Ph.]. A species found in Mexico ; used as a tonic, stimulant, and antisyphilitic. [J. M. Maisch, "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," Feb., 1886, p. 72.]—X. piperitum. Fr., xanthoxyle poivré, poivrier du Japon. Ger., pfefferartiges Gelbholz, Pfefferlimone. Chinese (or Japanese) pepper ; an aromatic and pungent shrub. The fruits and the bark are used as a condiment. The leaves, which are also eaten, are applied as a stimulant. The root has been known to European commerce as pepple mool. [a, 35.]—X. rhetsa. Ger., sichelblättriges Gelbholz. A prickly tree found in the East Indian Islands. The aromatic bark, the unripe capsules (which taste like fresh orange-peel), and the pungent seeds are used as spices and medicinally as stimulant tonics. The root is purgative. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxv (a, 14) ; a, 35.]—X. senegalense. A tree found on the west coast of Africa. The astringent bark is used externally in rheumatism. Its leaves being sometimes found with artar-root, some regard it as the source of that drug. [a, 35.]—X. ternatum. Ger., dreiblättriges Gelbholz, Zahnwehholz. A West Indian shrub. The root is used in odontalgia. The fruits are mildly pungent. [a, 35.]—X. triphyllum. A resin-yielding tree of the Western Ghauts. The capsules have the aromatic properties of those of X. rhetsa. In Amboyna a cosmetic is prepared from the bark. [Rumphius (a, 35).]

XANTHURIA (Lat.), n. f. Za^{2}nth(za^{3}nth)-u^{2}r(ur)'i^2-a^3. From ξανθός, yellow, and οὖρον, urine. An excess of xanthic oxide in the urine. [K.]

X-BEIN (Ger.), n. I^{2}x'bin. See GENU valgum.

XENEMBOLE (Lat.), XENENTHESIS (Lat.), n's f. Ze^{2}n-e^{2}mb'o^{2}l-e(a), -e^{2}nth'e^{2}s-i^{2}s. Gen., -em'boles, -thes'eos (-en'thesis). From ξένος, foreign, and ἐμβολή, a hurling, or ἔνθεσις, a putting in. Fr., xénembole. The introduction of foreign bodies (into the system). [L, 50 (a, 14).]

XENODOCHIUM (Lat.), XENODOCIUM (Lat.), n's n. Zen(ze^{2}n)-o(o^3)-do^{2}k(do^{2}ch^2)-i(e)'u^{3}m(u^{4}m), -do^{2}k-i(e)'u^{3}m(u^{4}m). Gr., ξενοδοχεῖον (from ξένος, a stranger, and δέχεσθαι, to receive). Fr., xénodoque. Ger., Wirthshaus (1st def.). 1. Originally, a public house or hotel. 2. A hospital. [L, 41, 50, 57 (a, 14).]

XENOGAMY, n. Ze^{2}n-o^{2}g'a^{2}m-i^2. From ξένος, a stranger, and γαμεῖν, to marry. Fertilization by pollen from a flower on another plant of the same species ; a form of cross-fertilization. [a, 25.]

XÉNOL (Fr.), n. Ksa-nol. See Xylenol.

XENOMENIA (Lat.), n. f. Ze^{2}n-o(o^3)-men(man)'i^2-a^3. From ξένος, a stranger, and μήν, a mouth. Fr., xénoménie. Of Beauchamp, menoxenia (q. v.). [a, 34.]

XENONOMIA (Lat.), n. f. Ze^{2}n-o(o^3)-nom(no^{2}m)'i^2-a^3. From ξένος, a stranger, and νόμος, a law. See Heteronomy.

XENOPHTHALMIA (Lat.), n. f. Ze^{2}n-o^{2}f-tha^{2}l(tha^{3}l)'mi^2-a^3. From ξένος, a stranger, and ὀφθαλμός, the eye. Fr., xénophthalmie. Traumatic conjunctivitis. [a, 34.]

XENOPNEUMONYPOSTASIS (Lat.), n. f. Ze^{2}n-o^{2}p-nu^{2}m-o^{2}n-ip(u^{6}p)-o^{2}st'a^{2}s(a^{3}s)-i^{2}s. Gen., -as'eos (-ost'asis). From ξένος, foreign, πνεύμων, the lung, and ὑπόστασις, subsidence. Fr., xénopneumonypostasie. The settling of foreign bodies to the lower part of the lungs. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

XENOSITE, n. Ze^{2}n'o^{2}s-it. From ξένος, a stranger, and σῖτος, food. A parasite when in its intermediate host or lodged in an organ other than that in which it will eventually breed. [L; "Am. Nat.," v, p. 434 (a, 32).]

XENYL, n. Ze^{2}n'i^{2}l. Fr., xényle. The compound $C_{16}H_{18}$. [B, 46, 93 (a, 14).]

XENYLENEDIAMINE, n. Ze^{2}n''i^{2}l-en-di'a^{2}m-en. See Benzidine.

XERAMPELINUS (Lat.), adj. Ze^{2}r(zar) a^{2}mp(a^{3}mp)-e^{2}l'i^{2}n-u^{3}s(u^{4}s). From ξηρός, dry, and ἄμπελος, a vine. Fr., xérampéline. Of a dull reddish-brown color. [a, 35.]

XERANTHEMUM (Lat.), n. n. Ze^{2}r(zar)-a^{2}nth(a^{3}nth)'e^{2}m-u^{3}m(u^{4}m). From ξηρός, dry, and ἄνθεμον, a flower. Fr., immortelle, xéranthème. Ger., Strohblume. Immortelle; a genus of composite herbs. The Xeranthema are a section of the Compositæ including X., Serratula, Santolina, etc. The Xeranthemeæ are a section of the Carlineæ. [a, 35.]

XERANTIC, adj. Ze^{2}r-a^{2}nt'i^{2}k. Gr., ξηραντικός. Lat., xeranticus. Of a drying nature. [A, 311 (a, 21).]

XERAPHION (Lat.), XERAPHIUM (Lat.), n's n. Ze^{2}r(zar)-a^{2}f'i^2-o^{2}n, -u^{3}m(u^{4}m). Gr., ξηράφιον (from ξηρός, dry). 1. A medicament to be swallowed dry. 2. A remedy for checking a discharge. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

XERASIA (Lat.), n. f. Ze^{2}r(zar)-az(a^{3}s)'i^2-a^3. Gr., ξηρασία (from ξηρός, dry). Fr., xérasie. 1. Of the older writers, a disease of the hair in which it became dry, ceased to grow, and came to resemble down covered with dust. [G, 16.] 2. See Alopecia pityrodes. 3. See Ichthyosis simplex.

XEROCLYSTER (Lat.), n. m. Ze^{2}r(zar)-o(o^3)-kli^{2}st(klu^{6}st)'u^{6}r(ar). Gen., -clyster'os (-is). From ξηρός, dry, and κλυστήρ, a clyster. Fr., xéroclystère. A dry suppository. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

XEROCOLLYRIUM (Lat.), n. n. Zer(zar)-o(o^3)-ko^{2}l-li^{2}r(lu^{6}r)'-i^2-u^{3}m(u^{4}m). Gr., ξηροκολλούριον (from ξηρός, dry, and κολλούριον, a collyrium. An old term for a solid (dry) collyrium. [Albini, "Giorn. internaz. delle sci. med.," 1885, i, p. 1.]

XERODERMA (Lat.), n. n. Ze^{2}r(zar)-o(o^3)-du^{6}rm(de^{2}rm)'a^3. Gen., -derm'atos (-atis). See Xerodermia.—X. ichthyoides. See Ichthyosis.—X. of Kaposi. Lat., angeioma pigmentosum et atrophicum. Ger., Pergamenthaut. An idiopathic diffuse atrophy of the skin which occurs in two types, x. pigmentosum and chronic x., the latter affecting usually the legs, sometimes also the forearms. The skin becomes atrophic without pigmented spots or telangeiectases, and is thin, white, and wrinkled. [G, 47.]—X. pigmentosum. A congenital form of Kaposi's x. in which the skin over a greater or less extent is dry and parchment-like, the epidermis becoming thin and wrinkled, with mottled pigmentation and numerous disseminated, punctate, or larger telangeiectases. White atrophic spots afterward appear, and the epidermis sometimes becomes fissured and scaly, with the production later on of superficial ulcerations with warty outgrowths. [G, 47.]

XERODERMIA (Lat.), n. f. Zer(zar)-o(o^3)-du^{6}rm(de^{2}rm)'i^2-a^3. From ξηρός, dry, and δέρμα, the skin. Fr., xérodermie. Ger., Xerodermie. 1. A cutaneous affection characterized by dryness of the skin. [G.] 2. Of Wilson, see Ichthyosis simplex. 3. See Xeroderma of Kaposi.—X. acquisita. A rough, dry condition of the skin, not congenital and probably not true ichthyosis. It is often the sequel to other forms of disease. [G.]—X. congenita, X. ichthyoides. See Ichthyosis simplex.

XEROMA (Lat.), n. n. Ze^{2}r(zar)-om'a^3. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From ξηρός, dry. Fr., xérome. See Xerophthalmia.

XEROMYCTERIA (Lat.), n. f. Zer(zar)-o(o^3)-mi^{2}kt(mu^{6}kt)-er(ar)'i^2-a^3. From ξηρός, dry, and μυκτήρ, the nose. Fr., xéromyctérie. Morbid dryness of the nasal passages. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

XERONIC ACID, n. Ze^{2}r-o^{2}n'i^{2}k. Fr., acide xéronique. Ger., Xeronsäure. An acid, $C_8H_{12}O_4$, known only in the form of its anhydride, as a liquid which has a peculiar odor and a taste at first sweet and then bitter. [B. 3 (a, 38).]

XERONOSOS (Lat.), XERONOSUS (Lat.), n's f. Ze^{2}r(zar)-o^{2}n'o^{2}s-o^{2}s, -u^{3}s(u^{4}s). From ξηρός, dry, and νόσος, a disease. A morbid state characterized by abnormal dryness of the surface. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

XEROPHAGIA (Lat.), n. f. Zer(zar)-o(o^3)-faj(fa^{3}g)'i-a^3. From ξηρός, dry, and φαγεῖν, to eat. Fr., xérophagie. The use of dry diet. [a, 34.]

XEROPHILOUS, adj. Ze^{2}r-o^{2}f'i^{2}l-u^{3}s. Lat., xerophilus (from ξηρός, dry, and φιλεῖν, to love). Fr., xérophile. Adapted especially to dry climates (said of plants). [a, 35.]

XEROPHTHALMIA (Lat.), XEROPHTHALMUS (Lat.), n's f. and m. Zer(zar)-o^{2}f-tha^{2}l(tha^{3}l)'mi^2-a^3, -mu^{3}s(mu^{4}s). From ξηρός, dry, and ὀφθαλμός, the eye. Fr., xérophthalmie. Ger., Augenröthe, Augentrockenheit, Xerophthalmie. Xerosis of the conjunctiva, which is rough, thickened, dry, and cuticular, and assumes a dirty, grayish-white appearance; due to atrophy of the conjunctiva, the subconjunctival tissue, and even the tarsus, with destruction of the glandular apparatus. It follows long-continued and severe conjunctivitis. [F.]

XEROPLASTA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Ze^{2}r(zar)-o(o^3)-pla^{2}st(pla^{3}st)'a^3. From ξηρός, dry, and πλάσσειν, to mold. Of Schultz, morbid states characterized by suppressed or defective secretion, including atrophy, sterility, agalactia, anuria, marasmus, etc. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

XEROSIS (Lat.), n. f. Ze^{2}r(zar)-os'i^{2}s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From ξηρός, dry. Fr., xérosis. 1. A dry, fish-skin-like appearance of a portion of skin or mucous membrane. 2. See Xerophthalmia.—X. conjunctivæ. See Xerophthalmia.—X. conjunctivæ epithelialis. See X. conjunctivæ superficialis.—X. conjunctivæ parenchymatosa (seu profunda). A disease of the conjunctiva in which the mucous membrane, throughout a greater or less extent, is changed into a dense membrane which consists of cicatricial tissue. This may extend throughout the whole of the conjunctiva, ocular and palpebral. [F.]—X. conjunctivæ squamosa. An old term for the scaly total variety of x. of the conjunctiva. [F.]—X. conjunctivæ superficialis. A disease of the conjunctiva, at first limited to the epithelial layer, which undergoes an epidermoid transformation by the collecting or massing of dried, superficial epithelial scales. This may subsequently extend to the deeper layers. [F.]—X. glabra conjunctivæ. A smooth form of xerophthalmia. [F.]

XEROSTOMIA (Lat.), n. f. Ze^{2}r(zar)-o(o^3)-stom(sto^{2}m)'i^2-a^3. From ξηρός, dry, and στόμα, the mouth. Fr., xérostomie. Dryness of the mouth, as in aptyalia.

XEROTRIPSIS (Lat.), n. f. Ze^{2}r(zar)-o(o^3)-tri^{2}ps(treps)'i^{2}s. Gen., -trip'seos (-is). From ξηρός, dry, and τρῖψις, a rubbing. Fr., xérotribie. Of Galen, dry rubbing. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

XEROTROPISM, n. Ze^{2}r-o^{2}t'ro^{2}p-i^{2}z'm. From ξηρός, dry, and τροπή, a turning. Fr., xérotropisme. Movements produced in living plants by dryness. [a, 35.]

XILODIA (Lat.), n. f. Zi^{2}l(zel)-od'i^2-a^3. Fr., xilodie. A fruit resembling a glans, but supported by a fleshy receptacle. [a, 35.]

XIMENIA (Lat.), n. f. Hem-an'i^2-a^3. From F. Ximenes, a Spanish naturalist. Fr., ximénie. A genus of the Olacineæ. The Ximenieæ are a family of the Hesperideæ. [a, 35.]—X. americana. Fr., ximénie épineuse, prunier épineux. False sandalwood of tropical America, Asia, and Africa. The aromatic fruits are edible. The odoriferous wood is used in place of sandal-wood. The root, bark, and leaves are purgative. [a, 35.]—X. ferox. See Balanites ægyptiaca.—X. multiflora, X. russelliana. See X. americana.

XIPHISTERNUM (Lat.), n. n. Zi^{2}f-i^2-stu^{6}rn(ste^{2}rn)'u^{3}m(u^{4}m). From ξίφος, a sword, and στέρνον, the sternum. See Ensiform cartilage.

XIPHODES (Lat.), adj. Zi^{2}f-od'ez(as). Gr., ξιφώδης (from ξίφος, a sword, and εἶδος, resemblance). Sword-shaped. [a, 48.]

XIPHODIDYMUS (Lat.), XIPHODYMUS (Lat.), n's m. Zi^{2}f-o(o^3)-di^{2}d'i^{2}m(u^{6}m)-u^{3}s(u^{4}s), zi^{2}f-o^{2}d'i^{2}m(u^{6}m)-u^{3}s(u^{4}s). From ξίφος, a sword, and δίδυμος, double. Fr., xiphodyme. A double monster having the body single below, but double from the xiphoid cartilage upward. [L, 49 (a, 14).]

XIPHOID, adj. Zif'oid. From ξίφος, a sword, and εἶδος, resemblance. Lat., xiphodes. Fr., xiphoïde. Ger., xiphoideïsch. Sword-shaped, ensiform.

XIPHOIDIAN, adj. Zi^{2}f-oid'i^2-'n. Lat., xiphoidianus (from ξίφος, a sword, and εἶδος, resemblance). Fr., xiphoïdien. Pertaining to the ensiform cartilage.

XIPHOPAGUS (Lat.), n. m. Zi^{2}f-o^{2}p'a^{2}g(a^{3}g)-u^{3}s(u^{4}s). From ξίφος, a sword, and πηγνύναι, to make fast. Fr., xiphopage. A double monster with the individuals united from the umbilicus to the xiphoid cartilage. [Hirst and Piersol (a, 34).]

XIPHOPHYLLOUS, adj. Zi^{2}f-o-fi^{2}l'u^{3}s. From ξίφος, a sword, and φύλλον, a leaf. Fr., xiphophylle. Having ensiform leaves. [a, 35.]

XOCHICOPAL, n. In Mexico, the resin of Amyris lignaloes. [B.]

XYLALOES, n. Zi^{2}l-a^{2}l'oz. See Aloes wood (1st def.).

XYLAMIDE, n. Zi^{2}l'a^{2}m-i^{2}d(id). Fr., x. The compound $C_9H_{11}NO = C_6H_3(CH_3)_2CO.NH_2$. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

XYLEM, n. Zil'e^{2}m. From ξύλον, wood. Fr., xylème. Ger., X. Of Nägeli, that portion of a fibro-vascular bundle which contains tracheæ. [a, 35.] Cf. Phloem.

XYLENE, n. Zil'en. From ξύλον, wood. Fr., xylène. Ger., Xylen, Xylol. A substance, $C_8H_{10} = C_6H_4(CH_3)_2$, known in three isomeric liquid forms: Orthox', $C_6[CH_3.CH_3.H,H.H,H,]$; metax', $C_6[CH_3,H,CH_3,H,H,H,]$; and parax', $C_6[CH_3H,H,CH_3.H,H,]$. Metax' and parax' occur in certain coal tars and petroleums. [B, 4; B, 3, 270 (a, 38).]—X'sulphonic acid. An acid, $C_8H_{10}SO_3 = C_6H_3(CH_3)_2SO_3H$, known in four isomeric forms, of which orthox'sulphonic acid, parax'sulphonic acid, and a-metax'sulphonic acid all form tabular or prismatic crystals containing two molecules of water, while v-metax'sulphonic acid has not yet been obtained pure. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

XYLENOL, n. Zil'e^{2}n-o^{2}l. Fr., xylénol, xénol. Ger., X. A substance, $C_8H_{10}O$, known in six isomeric forms: A-orthox', $C_6[CH_3.CH_3.H,OH,H,H,]$, acicular or pyramidal crystals; v-orthox', $C_6[CH_3.CH_3,OH,H,H,H,]$, white acicular crystals; a-metax', $C_6[CH_3,H,CH_3,OH,H.H,]$, white acicular crystals; v-metax', $C_6[CH_3,OH.CH_3.H,H,H,$ tabular or acicular crystals; s-metax', $C_6[CH_3.H,CH_3,H,OH,H,]$, white acicular crystals; and parax'. $C_6[CH_3,OH,H,CH_3,H,H,]$, flat acicular crystals. [B, 4; B, 3 (a, 38).]

XYLIC ACID, n. Zil'i²k. An acid, $C_9H_{10}O_2 = C_6H_3(CH_3)_2$-CO.OH, isomeric with mesitylenic acid, and known in four forms: Ordinary x. a., $C_6[CH_3,H,CH_3,CO.OH,H,H,]$, transparent prismatic crystals; parax' a., $C_6[CH_3,CH_3,H,CO.OH,H,H,]$, groups of prismatic crystals; isox' a., $C_6[CH_3,CO.OH,H,CH_3,H,H,]$, star-shaped groups of large acicular crystals; and v-x' a., $C_6[CH_3,CO.OH,CH_3$,-H,H,H,], long acicular crystals. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

XYLIDIC ACID, n. Zil-i²d'i²k. Fr., acide xylidique. Ger., Xylidinsäure. An acid, $C_9H_8O_4 = C_6H_3(CH_3)(CO.OH)_2$, isomeric with uvitic acid, and known in two forms—a-x. a., $C_6[CO.OH,CH_3$,-H,CO.OH,H,H,], crystalline masses or semi-crystalline flocks, and β-x. a., $C_6[CH_3,CO.OH,H,CO.OH,H,H,]$, microscopic acicular crystals. The isox' a. of Senhofer is probably the same as the latter. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

XYLIDINE, n. Zil'i²d-en. Fr., x. Ger., Xylidin. A substance, $C_8H_{11}N = C_6H_3(CH_3)_2NH_2$, known in six isomeric forms, all of which are liquids except one (a-orthox'), which forms crystals. Commercial x. is a mixture of five of the forms. [B, 4; B, 3, 270 (a, 38).]—X. red. Fr., rouge de x. A red dye made by mixing aniline and x. It closely resembles rosaniline. [B, 93 (a, 14).]

XYLOBALSAMUM (Lat.), n. n. Zil(zu⁶l)-o(o³)-ba²l(ba³l)'sa²m-(sa³m)-u³m(u⁴m). From ξύλον, wood, and βάλσαμον, balsam. See under Balsamodendron gileadense.

XYLOCARACTA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Zil(zu⁶l)-o(o³)-ka²r(ka³r)-a²kt(a³kt)'a³. See Carob-beans.

XYLOCARP, n. Zil'o-ka³rp. From ξύλον, wood, and καρπός, fruit. A hard, woody fruit. [a, 35.]

XYLOCASSIA (Lat.), n. f. Zil(zu⁶l)-o(o³)-ka²s(ka³s)'si²-a³. Fr., xylocasse. See Cassia lignea.

XYLOCHINON (Ger.), n. Ksu⁶l-o-ken-on'. See Xyloquinone.

XYLOGENE, n. Zil'o-jen. From ξύλον, wood, and γεννᾶν, to engender. Fr., xylogène. A complex woody substance contained in the walls of vegetable cells, and causing their rigidity when lignified. [B, 93 (a, 14).]

XYLOIDIN, n. Zil-o'i²d-i²n. Fr., xyloïdine, fécule azotique. Ger., Xyloidin. A substance, $C_6H_9(NO_2)O_5$, probably dinitroxy-amylum, or $C_{12}H_{19}O_9.NO_2$, obtained by the action of nitric acid on starch. Ordinary or insoluble x. (Fr., amidou monoazoté insoluble [Béchamp]) is a white pulverulent substance, without taste or odor. It explodes on percussion like gun-cotton, but with less violence. Soluble x., isoxyloidin (Fr., amidou monoazoté soluble [Béchamp]), formed by the action of an excess of strong nitric acid on starch, has the same composition as insoluble x. and similar properties. [B, 2, 4, 92, 270.]

XYLOL (Ger.), n. Ksu⁶l'o²l. See Xylene.

XYLOMARATHRUM (Lat.), n. n. Zil(zu⁶l)-o(o³)-ma²r(ma³r)-a²th(a³th)'ru³m(ru⁴m). From ξύλον, wood, and μάραθρον, marathrum. See Sassafras-root.

XYLON (Lat.), n. n. Zil(zu⁶l)'o²n. Gr., ξύλον. 1. Wood. 2. The genus Gossypium. [a, 35.] 3. Of Berzelius, a substance, $C_{12}H_{22}O_{11}$, identical with wood cellulose and the shell tissue of fruit-stones. [B, 93 (a, 14).]

XYLOPIA (Lat.), n. f. Zil(zu⁶l)-op(o³p)'i²-a³. From ξύλον, wood, and πικρός, bitter. YDES (Fr.), n. Ed. A place in the department of Cantal, France, where there is a saline, alkaline, and chalybeate spring. [α, 14.]

YEAST, n. Yest. Gr., ζύμη. Lat., fermentum. Fr., levûre. Ger., Hefe. A semi-fluid, viscid, flocculent scum forming on the surface of a saccharine juice when it is in a state of vinous fermentation. Y. is composed chiefly of Saccharomyces. Ordinary y. is beer y. [α, 35.]—Beer y. Lat., fermentum [U. S. Ph., 1870], cerevisiæ fermentum [Br. Ph.]. Fr., levûre (de bière). Ger., Bierhefe. The ferment (see SACCHAROMYCES cerevisiæ) obtained in brewing beer. It is insoluble in water or alcohol, has a dirty-yellowish color, a bitter taste, and a sourish odor. Its ultimate composition, according to Schlossberger, is carbon 49·9 per cent., hydrogen 6·6 per cent., nitrogen 12·1 per cent., and oxygen 31·4 per cent. If separated from its nitrogenous principle, it becomes inert as a ferment. It has been used as an external stimulating poultice, and internally in typhoid and similar fevers, and against successive eruptions of boils. [α, 35.]—Bottom y. The y. that settles when fermentation is restrained by cold. [α, 35.]—German y. Ger., Presshefe, Pfundhefe. Y., such as that produced for baking purposes, containing a minimum amount of alcohol. The fluid in which the y. forms is drained away and the y. mixed with dry starch. It is free from the bitterness of hops. [α, 35.]—Top-y. The y. formed on the surface of fermenting liquids. [α, 35.]—Y. cakes. Cakes made by pressing and drying y. that has been put into sacks and washed with water. [α, 35.]—Y. plant. The genus Saccharomyces, especially the Saccharomyces cerevisiæ. [α, 35.]—Y. poultice. See Cataplasma FERMENTI.

YÈBLE (Fr.), n. E-e²-bl'. The Sambucus ebulus. [α, 35.]

YELK, n. Ye²lk. See VITELLUS.

YELLOW, adj. Ye²l'o. Gr., ξανθός. Lat., flavus, Fr., jaune. Ger., gelb. Of a color resembling that of gold; as a n., a y. color or pigment, also anything of a y. color; as a n., in the pl., y's, (1) jaundice, more particularly in horses, cattle, and sheep, and, (2) popularly, leucorrhœa in which the discharge is yellowish.—Cassel's y. A lead oxychloride obtained by fusing together ammonium chloride and an oxide or carbonate of lead. [B, 3.]—Chrome y. Lead chromate. [B.]—Cologne y. A light-yellow pigment, made up of a mixture of lead chromate and lead sulphate. [B, 3.]—Indian y. Fr., jaune indien. A y. pigment prepared in Thibet, but exported from India and China. Its mode of preparation is not known, but it is thought by some to be derived from the fruit of Garcinia mangostana, by others to be prepared by macerating certain plants in fermented urine, since much hippuric acid is found in it. [B, 46 (α, 39).]—King's y. See ORPIMENT.—Martius y. A dinitro-α-naphthalate of sodium, sometimes used as a dye for food-stuffs. [α, 34.]—Naples y. Fr., jaune brilliant. Ger., Neapelgelb. A y. pigment made up of a salt of antimony, with lead, dried alum, and ammonium chloride. [B, 5.]—Patent y., Turner's y. A lead oxychloride obtained by heating lead oxide and a solution of common salt. [B, 3.]—Uranium y. Ger., Urangelb. 1. Sodium uranate. 2. Ammonium uranate. [B.]—Victoria y. Aniline orange; a pigment consisting of a salt of a dinitrocresol, crystallizing from hot aqueous solution as yellowish acicular crystals. [B, 3 (α, 38).]—Visual y. See XANTHOPHANE.

YELLOW-ROOT, n. Ye²l'o-ru⁴t. The Hydrastis canadensis, Xanthorrhiza apiifolia, Coptis trifolia, and Jeffersonia Bartonis. [α, 35.]

YELLOW SPRINGS, n. Ye²l'o. A place in Greene County, Ohio, where there are alkaline and sulphurous springs. [Anderson (α, 14).]

YELLOWSTONE PARK, n. Ye²l'o-sto³n. A place in Wyoming Territory, set apart as a national park, where there are numerous hot and cold mineral springs. [α, 14.]

ZELTCHEN (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}lt'ch^{2}e^{2}n. See LOZENGE.

ZEMA (Lat.), n. n. Zem(ze^{2}m)'a^3. Gen., zematos (-atis). Gr., ζέμα (from ζεῖν, to boil). See DECOCTION (2d def.).

ZEMENT (Ger.), n. Tsam-e^{2}nt'. See CEMENT (2d def.).

ZEM-ZEM, n. Ze^{2}m'ze^{2}m. A place in Lake County, California, where there are saline and chalybeate springs. [Anderson (α, 14).]

ZENKERISM, n. Tse^{2}n^{2}k'e^{2}r-i^{2}z'm. A peculiar form of degeneration, allied to colloid, described by Zenker as occurring in the voluntary muscles in typhoid fever. [E, 25.]

ZEOLITE, n. Ze'o^{2}l-it. From ζεῖν, to boil, and λίθος, a stone. Fr., zéolithe. Ger., Zeolith. A hydrated silicate. [B, 3.]

ZEORA (Lat.), n. f. Ze^2-or'a^3. Fr., zéore. Of Fries, a subdivision of the genus Parmelia. [B, 38, 48 (α, 14).]

ZEORIN, n. Ze'o^{2}r-i^{2}n. Fr., zéorine. A neutral substance, $C_{13}H_{22}O$, obtained from Zeora sordida. [B, 270 (α, 38).]

ZEOSCOPE, n. Ze'o-skop. From ζεῖν, to boil, and σκοπεῖν, to examine. Fr., zéoscope. An apparatus provided with a dial-plate or a graduated stem, for determining from its boiling point the alcoholic strength of a liquid, zero marking the boiling point of pure water and 100 that of absolute alcohol. [L, 49 (α, 14).]

ZEPHYRANTHES (Lat.), ZEPHYRANTHUS (Lat.), n's m. Ze^{2}f-i^{2}r(u^{6}r)-a^{2}nth(a^{3}nth)'ez(as), -u^{3}s(u^{4}s). From ζέφυρος, the west wind, and ἄνθος, a flower. Zephyr-flower; a genus of the Amaryllideæ, sometimes referred to Amaryllis. [α, 35.]—Z. atamasco. Atamasco lily, stagger-grass; a bulbous plant found from Virginia to Florida. [α, 35.]

ZEPTERWURZEL (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}pt'e^{2}r-vurts-e^{2}l. Zedoary (root). [α, 35.]

ZERÄSTELUNG (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-ast'e^{2}l-un^2. See RAMIFICATION.

ZERBORSTEN (Ger.), adj. Tse^{2}r-borst'e^{2}n. See DIFFRACT.

ZERBRECHLICH (Ger.), adj. Tse^{2}r-bre^{2}ch^2'li^{2}ch^2. See FRAGILE.

ZERBRECHUNG (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-bre^{2}ch^2'un^2. A fracturing, a fracture.

ZERBRÖCKELT (Ger.), adj. Tse^{2}r-bru^{5}k'e^{2}lt. See FRUSTULOSE.

ZERBST (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}rbst. A place in Anhalt, Germany, where there is a gaseous and chalybeate spring. [L, 49 (a, 14).]

ZERFALL (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-fa^{3}l'. See DISINTEGRATION.

ZERFASERUNG (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-fa^{3}z'e^{2}r-un^2. See FIBRILLATION.

ZERFLIESSBAR (Ger.), adj. Tse^{2}r-fles'ba^{3}r. See DELIQUESCENT.

ZERFLIESSEN (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-fles'se^{2}n. See COLLIQUATION.

ZERFLIESSUNG (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-fles'sun^2. See DELIQUESCENCE.

ZERFRESSEN (Ger.), ZERFRESSUNG (Ger.), n's. Tse^{2}r-fre^{2}s'se^{2}n, -sun^2. Cauterization, corrosion, erosion, ulceration.—Z. des Magens. See Perforating ULCER of the stomach.

ZERRISSEN (Ger.), adj. Tse^{2}r-ri^{2}s'se^{2}n. See LACERATE.

ZERRUPFEN (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-rupf'e^{2}n. See TEASING.

ZERRÜTTUNG (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-ru^{6}t'tun^2. Derangement, disorder, confusion. [A, 450 (a, 17).]

ZERSCHLIZT (Ger.), adj. Tse^{2}r-shli^{2}tst'. See LACINIATE.

ZERSCHMELZUNG (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-shme^{2}lts'un^2. See COLLIQUATION.

ZERSCHMETTERT (Ger.), adj. Tse^{2}r-shme^{2}t'te^{2}rt. See COMMINUTED.

ZERSCHMETTERUNG (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-shme^{2}t'te^{2}r-un^2. Comminution. [A, 521 (a, 48).]—Z'sbruch. A comminuted fracture.

ZERSCHNEIDEN (Ger.), ZERSCHNEIDUNG (Ger.), n's. Tse^{2}r-shnid'e^{2}n, -un^2. A cutting apart or into pieces. See DISCISSION and DIACOPE.

ZERSCHNITTEN (Ger.), adj. Tse^{2}r-shni^{2}t't'e^{2}n. See DISSECTED.

ZERSETZUNG (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-ze^{2}ts'un^2. See DECOMPOSITION.—Fäulnissz'. Putrefaction.—Gährungsz'. Fermentative decomposition. [K, 16.]—Theilweise Z. See MERODIALYSIS.

ZERSPALTUNG (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-spa^{3}lt'un^2. Splitting, fissure.

ZERSPLITTERUNG (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-spli^{2}t'te^{2}r-un^2. A breaking into splinters. [A, 450 (a, 17).]

ZERSPRINGEND (Ger.), adj. Tse^{2}r-spri^{2}n^2'e^{2}nd. See DEHISCENT.

ZERSTÄUBER (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-stoib'e^{2}r. See ATOMIZER.

ZERSTÄUBT (Ger.), adj. Tse^{2}r-stoibt'. Pulverized, atomized.

ZERSTÖRUNG (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-stu^{5}r'un^2. Destruction, disorganization.

ZERSTOSSUNG (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-sto^{3}s'sun^2. A bruising; in pharmacy, see CONCASSATION and TRITURATION.

ZERSTREUT (Ger.), adj. Tse^{2}r-stroit'. 1. Scattered, sparse, disseminated. [a, 35.] 2. Absent-minded. [A, 521 (a, 48).]

ZERSTREUTHEIT (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-stroit'hit. Absent-mindedness. [A, 521.]

ZERSTREUUNG (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-stroi'un^2. See DISPERSION and DISSEMINATION.—Z'sbild. An image produced by a dispersing lens or mirror. [B.]—Z'sglas. A dispersing lens.—Z'skreise. See Circles of DISPERSION.—Z'sspiegel. A convex mirror. [B.]

ZERSTÜCKELUNG (Ger.), n. Tse^{2}r-stu^{6}k'e^{2}l-un^2. Dismemberment, comminution, fragmentation.—Z. des Kindes. See EMBRYOTOMY (2d def.).

ZINALINE, n. Zi²n'a²l-en. A yellow coloring matter, $C_{20}H_{13}N_2O_6$, produced by the action of nitrous acid on aniline. [B, 2.]

ZINC, n. Zi²n²k. Lat., zincum. Fr., z. Ger., Zink. A metallic element known to the ancients under the form of its alloy with copper, but not recognized as a distinct metal till the end of the seventeenth century. It is found in nature, sometimes uncombined but usually under the form of compounds constituting various minerals. Some of these (calamine, tutty, etc.) are employed in medicine. Z. is a hard, bluish-white metal, malleable and ductile at a temperature of 100° to 150° C., but brittle when heated above 200° C. It melts at 433° C., and when cooled after fusion has a crystalline texture. It acts as a bivalent radicle. Symbol, Zn; atomic weight, 64·9; sp. gr., 6·9. [B, 3.]—Aerated z. Z. carbonate. [B, 91.]—Basic z. chromate. One of several yellow compounds, $Zn_2(OH)_2CrO_4 + H_2O, 2Zn_2(OH)_2CrO_4 + H_2O$, and $Zn_4(OH)_6CrO_4$. [B, 3.]—Brown z. oxide. See TUTIA.—Butter of z. See Z. chloride.—Caustique au chlorure de z. (Fr.). Ph.]), zincum carbonicum [Swiss Ph.]. Fr., souscarbonate de z. hydraté [Fr. Cod.]. A basic z. carbonate prepared by precipitation from a solution of z. sulphate by the action of sodium carbonate. It varies in composition according to the degree of concentration of the solutions and the temperature at which precipitation occurs. As prepared by the U. S. process it has the constitution $(ZnCO_3)_2.3Zn(OH)_2$; by the British formula, $ZnCO_3.2ZnO + 3H_2O$; and by the process of the Fr. Cod., $(ZnCO_3)_3.5Zn(OH)_2 + H_2O$. It is a very fine white powder, devoid of taste and odor, and insoluble in alcohol and in water. [B.]—Sea-salt of z. Z. chloride. [B, 91.]—Solution of z. chloride. See Liquor ZINCI chloridi.—Solution of z. hypochlorite. An aqueous solution of an extemporaneously formed z. hypochlorite; prepared by mixing an aqueous solution of 24 oz. of z. sulphate with water in which 12 oz. of chlorinated lime have been thoroughly triturated, and making the product measure 11½ pints. [B, 5.]—Souscarbonate de z. hydraté (Fr.). See under Precipitated z. carbonate.—Sulfate de z. du commerce (Fr.). See ZINCUM sulphuricum crudum.—Sulfate de z. officinal [Fr. [B.] See Z. sulphate.—Test z. Metallic z. melted and allowed to run in a thin stream into water, thus forming small sticks or thin discs or fragments free from arsenic. [B, 5 (α, 38).]—Z. acetate. Lat., acetas zinci [Belg. Ph.] (seu zincicus [Dan. Ph., Netherl. Ph.]), zinci acetas [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.], zincum aceticum [Ger. Ph., Austr. Ph., Hung. Ph. (2d ed.), Russ. Ph., Swiss Ph.]. Fr., acétate de z. [Fr. Cod.]. Sp., acetato zíncico [Sp. Ph.]. A white crystalline substance, $Zn(C_2H_3O_2)_2 + H_2O$. [B, 3.]—Z. acrylate. The compound $(C_3H_3O_2)_2Zn$. [B, 2; B, 3 (α, 38).]—Z. aluminate. The compound Al_2ZnO_4. [B, 2.]—Z'amide. Ger., Zinkamid. A white amorphous substance, $Zn(NH_2)_2$. [B, 3.]—Z. amyl. See Z. diisoamyl.—Z. and creatinine chloride. A body, $(C_4H_7N_3O)_2ZnCl_2$, forming acicular crystals. [B, 4, 158 (α, 24).]—Z. and mercury cyanide. See MERCURY and Z. cyanide.—Z. and potassium cyanide. A substance, $K_2ZnC_4N_4 = Zn\langle{}^{(CN)_2K}_{(CN)_2K'}$ crystallizing into octaedra; formed by the evaporation of a solution of z. cyanide in a solution of an excess of potassic cyanide. [B.]—Z. antimonate. The compound $Zn(SbO_3)_2$. [B, 2.]—Z. antimonide. An alloy of z. and antimony. [B.]—Z. arsenate. A substance, $Zn_3(AsO_4)_2 + 8H_2O$, occurring native as a mineral. [B, 2.]—Z. bromide. Lat., zinci bromidum [U. S. Ph.]. Ger., Bromzink, Zinkbromür. A white, granular deliquescent powder, $ZnBr_2$, of saline, metallic taste. [B.]—Z. carbonate. Normal z. carbonate, $ZnCO_3$, occurs native in the impure form as calamine. It may also be prepared artificially. What is usually called z. carbonate is the precipitated z. carbonate (q. v.). [B.]—Z. chloride. Lat., chloretum zincicum [Dan. Ph., Finn. Ph., Netherl. Ph., Norw. Ph., Swed. Ph.], chloruretum zinci [Belg. Ph.], zinci chloridum [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.], zincum chloratum [Ger. Ph., Austr. Ph., Hung. Ph. (2d ed.), Russ. Ph., Swiss Ph.] (seu chloretum [Gr. Ph.]). Fr., chlorure de z. [Fr. Cod.]. Sp., cloruro zíncico [Sp. Ph.]. Butter of z.; a white, deliquescent crystalline substance, $ZnCl_2$, of caustic, metallic taste, acid reaction, and marked caustic properties. It is readily soluble in water and in alcohol. [B.]—Z. chromate. See Basic z. chromate.—Z. chromite. A dark-green crystalline body, $ZnCr_2O_4$. [B, 3.]—Z. colloid. See Z. COLLOID.—Z. cyanide. Fr., cyanure de z. [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., Cyanzink. Sp., cianuro zíncico [Sp. Ph.]. A white insoluble powder, $ZnC_2N_2 = Zn:(C\vdots N)_2$, formed by the action of hydrocyanic acid on z. acetate or of potassic cyanide on other salts of z. [B.]—Z. diamine. See Z'amide.—Z. diethyl. See Z'ethyl (2d def.)—Z. diethylate. Ger., Zinkäthylat. A white powder, $Zn.(OC_2H_5)_2$. [B, 3.]—Z. diethyloxyacetate. A substance, $(C_6H_{11}O_3)_2Zn$, occurring as acicular or laminar crystals and forming the most characteristic salt known of diethyloxyacetic acid. [B, 3 (α. 38).]—Z. diisoamyl. A liquid, $Zn(C_5H_{11})_2$. [B, 3.]—Z. diisobutyl. A liquid, $Zn(C_4H_9)_2$. [B, 3.]—Z. dust. Ger., Zinkstaub. Metallic z. obtained as a fine powder in the process of z. manufacture; used as a reducing agent. [B, 3.]—Z. ethide. See Z'ethyl (2d def.).—Z. ethoxide. See Z. diethylate.—Z'ethyl. Fr., z'éthyle. Ger., Zinkäthyl. 1. A univalent radicle, $Zn(C_2H_5)'$. 2. The compound $Zn(C_2H_5)_2$ (more properly called z'diethyl or z. ethide), a mobile liquid having a peculiar odor and taking fire spontaneously on exposure to the air. [B, 3.]—Z. ferricyanide. A yellow powder, $Zn_3Fe_2(C_6N_6)_2$. [B.]—Z. ferrocyanide. Lat., zincum ferrocyanatum [Ger. Ph. (1st ed.), Russ. Ph., Swiss Ph.], cyanatum zincicoferrosum [Neth. Ph.]. An amorphous white powder, $Zn_2Fe(C_6N_6) + 3H_2O$. [B.]—Z. fulminate. A body, $C.Zn(NO_2).CN = ZnC_2N_2O_2$, that detonates violently when struck or when heated to 192° C. [B, 4.]—Z. gallate. A white precipitate, $C_7H_2O_5Zn_2 + H_2O$, obtained by boiling z. acetate with gallic acid. [B, 46 (α, 14).]—Z. hydrocarbonate. See Precipitated z. carbonate.—Z. iodide. Lat., zinci iodidum [U. S. Ph.]. Ger., Jodzink, Zinkjodür. The compound ZnI_2, forming acicular or octaedral crystals. [B, 3.]—Z. lactate. Lat., lactas zinci [Belg. Ph.] (seu zincicus [Netherl. Ph., Swed. Ph.]), zincum lacticum [Ger. Ph., 1st ed., Russ. Ph.]. Fr., lactate de z. [Fr. Cod.]. The compound $Zn(C_3H_5O_3)_2 + 3H_2O$, forming small white crystals. [B, 3, 95 (α, 38); B, 4.]—Z'methyl. Fr., Z'méthyle. Ger., Zinkmethyl. 1. A univalent radicle, $Zn(CH_3)'$. 2. Z'dimethyl, $Zn(CH_3)_2$; a colorless, spontaneously inflammable liquid of very powerful and disagreeable odor the vapor of which produces a sense of constriction of the throat and dyspnœa and is said to be poisonous. [B, 3.]—Z. nitrate. The compound $Zn(NO_3)_2 + 6H_2O$, forming deliquescent prismatic crystals. [B. 3.]—Z. nitride. A green powder, Zn_3N_2. [B, 3.]—Z. nitroacetonitrile. See Z. fulminate.—Z. ointment. See Unguentum ZINCI oxidi.—Z. oleate. Lat., zincum oleinicum. 1. A preparation made by dissolving 1 part of z. oxide in 8 parts of oleic acid, forming a soft, talc-like white powder. It is used in hyperidrosis and various skin diseases. 2. Z. oleate (1st def.) diluted with any ointment base to form a soft, tallowy solid. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxvii, p. 430, xxxiv, p. 570 (α, 14).] Cf. Oleatum ZINCI.—Z. orthophosphate. Lat., zinci phosphas. Normal z. orthophosphate, $Zn_3(PO_4)_2 + 2H_2O$, usually termed z. phosphate, is a white powder, used as a nervine. [B, 5.]—Z. oxide. Lat., oxidum (seu oxydum [Dan. Ph., Netherl. Ph., Norw. Ph.]) zincicum [Finn. Ph., Swed. Ph.], oxydum zinci, oxydum zinci præcipitatum [Belg. Ph.], zinci oxidum [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.], zincum oxydatum [Ger. Ph., Austr. Ph., Hung. Ph., Gr. Ph., Russ. Ph., Swiss Ph.]. Fr., oxyde de z. par voie humide et par voie sèche [Fr. Cod.]. Sp., óxido zíncico [Sp. Ph.]. A soft, white or yellowish-white, amorphous powder, ZnO, devoid of taste and odor, and insoluble in water and in alcohol. It may be prepared either by calcining the precipitated z. carbonate at a low red heat, forming then the zinci oxidum of the U. S. Ph. and Br. Ph., the zincum oxydatum of the Ger. Ph., and the oxyde de z. par voie humide of the Fr. Cod., or by direct oxidation of the metal (by calcining), when it is called flowers of z., lana philosophica, pompholix, nix alba, or nihilum album, and is the oxyde de z. par voie sèche of the Fr. Cod. As it occurs in its purest form in commerce, it is the commercial z. oxide (Lat., oxidum zincicum crudum [Finn. Ph.] [seu venale (Swed. Ph.)], oxydum zinci [Belg. Ph.], oxydum zincicum venale [Dan. Ph.], or zincum oxydatum crudum [Ger. Ph.]). A commercial z. oxide produced in the smelting of lead ores is called cadmia or tutty. [B; B, 95 (α, 38).]—Z. oxychloride. A crystalline substance, $ZnCl_2.3ZnO + 4H_2O$, obtained by the action of a strong solution of z. chloride on z. oxide. [B, 16.]—Z. pentasulphide. A white amorphous substance, ZnS_5. [B, 3.]—Z. permanganate. The compound $ZnMn_2O_8$, occurring as dark-red tabular crystals. [B, 270 (α, 38).]—Z. phosphate. See Z. orthophosphate.—Z. phosphide. Lat., zinci phosphidum [U. S. Ph.]. Fr., phosphure de z. [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., Phosphorzink. The compound Zn_3P_2, forming either crystalline fragments or a dark-grayish powder, having a faint taste of phosphorus. [B.]—Z. pur [Fr. Cod.] (Fr.). Lat., zincum [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph., Gr. Ph., Russ. Ph.] (purissimum). Sp., z. [Sp. Ph.]. Metallic z. freed from impurities and suitable for pharmaceutical purposes. [B.]—Z. salicylate. Lat., zincum salicylicum [Russ. Ph.]. A dibasic substance, $Zn(C_7H_5O_3)_2 + 2H_2O$, forming colorless crystals of metallic taste. [B, 10; B, 95 (α, 38).]—Z. sarcolactate. Ger., fleischmilchsaures Zink. A crystalline body, $Zn(C_3H_5O_3)_2 + 2H_2O$, isomeric with z. lactate and occurring as lævorotary acicular crystals. [B, 3 (α, 38); B, 4.]—Z. spar. Ger., Zinkspath. See CALAMINE (1st def.).—Z. sulphate. Lat., sulfas (seu sulphas [Dan. Ph., Netherl. Ph., Norw. Ph., Swed. Ph.]) zincicus [Finn. Ph.], sulphas zinci [Belg. Ph.], zinci sulphas [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.], zincum sulfuricum [Ger. Ph., Austr. Ph., Hung. Ph., Russ. Ph., Swiss Ph.] (seu sulphuricum purum [Gr. Ph.]). Fr., sulfate de z. officinal [Fr. Cod.]. Sp., sulfato zíncico [Sp. Ph.]. White vitriol (or white copperas), $ZnSO_4 + 7H_2O$, forming small colorless prismatic or acicular crystals having a saline metallic taste and acid reaction, soluble in about half its weight of water. It is used as an emetic and topically as an astringent. [B.]—Z. sulphide. A substance, ZnS, occurring in nature as the crystalline z. blende and wurtzite, and also obtained artificially in the amorphous state. [B, 3.] See also Z. pentasulphide.—Z. sulphocarbolate. Lat., zinci sulphocarbolas [Br. Ph.], zincum sulfocarbolicum [Ger. Ph., Russ. Ph., Swiss Ph.]. Fr., sulfophénate de z. Ger., Zinksulfophenylat. Z. paraphenolsulphonate, $Zn(C_6H_5SO_4)_2 + 8H_2O$, forming efflorescent, rhombic prismatic crystals. It is odorless and has a metallic taste and an acid reaction. [Gighi, "Ann. di chim. appl. alla farm. ed alla med.," June, 1884, p. 321 (B).]—Z. thioarsenite. A lemon-yellow substance, $Zn_3As_2S_6$. [B, 2.]—Z. valerianate. Lat., valeras zinci [Belg. Ph.], valerianas zincicus [Finn. Ph., Neth. Ph., Norw. Ph., Swed. Ph.], zinci valerianas [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.], zincum valerianicum [Ger. Ph. (1st ed.), Gr. Ph., Hung. Ph. (2d ed.), Russ. Ph., Swiss Ph.]. Fr., valérianate de z. [Fr. Cod.]. Sp., valerianato zíncico [Sp. Ph.]. The compound $Zn(C_5H_9O_2)_2$, forming white scaly crystals which have a faint odor of valerianic acid and a sweetish, metallic taste. [B, 5, 95.]—Z. white. Ger., Zinkweiss. Commercial z. oxide.—Z. yellow. Fr., jaune de z. Ger., Zinkgelb. Basic z. chromate. [B.]

ZINCIBER (Lat.), n. n. Zi²ns(zi²n²k)'i²b-u⁵r(e²r). Gen., -ib'eris. See ZINGIBER.

ZINCIC, adj. Zi²ns'i²k. Lat., zincicus. Pertaining to or containing zinc. [B.]

ZINCONITE, n. Zi²nk'o²n-it. See CALAMINE (1st def.).

ZINCUM (Lat.), n. n. Zi²n²k'u³m(u⁴m). See ZINC; of the U. S., Br., Gr., and Russ. Ph's, see ZINC pur.—Acetas zinci. See ZINC acetate.—Æther zinci. Fr., éther zincé. A preparation made by treating 15 parts of zinc chloride with 61 of ether and 30 of absolute alcohol for some days and decanting. [B, 119 (a, 38).]—Aqua ophthalmica adstringens e vitriolo zinci. See Collyrium adstringens zinci.—Aqua sulphatis zinci aluminosa. See Liquor ALUMINIS compositus.—Aqua zinci cum camphora. Fr., eau zincée camphrée. A solution of 18 parts of zinc sulphate and 8 of camphor in 786 of boiling water; or of 28 parts of zinc sulphate and 8 of camphor in 786 of water. [L, 49, 87 (a, 14).]—Butyrum zinci. Zinc chloride. [B, 270.]—Calx zinci. Zinc oxide. [B, 270.]—Carbonas zinci impurus. See CALAMINE (1st def.).—Ceratum carbonatis zinci impuri. See Ceratum CALAMINÆ.—Ceratum zinci. See Unguentum zinci oxidi.—Ceratum zinci carbonatis [U. S. Ph., 1870]. A mixture of 1 part of precipitated zinc carbonate with 5 parts of ointment of lard. [B.]—Collyrium adstringens e zinco sulphurico. See AQUA ophthalmica aluminosa and Collyrium adstringens zinci.—Collyrium adstringens zinci. A solution of zinc sulphate in from 96 to 320 times as much water. Sometimes rose-water or infusion of elder was used, and, according to one old formulary, the yolk of a hard-boiled egg was removed, zinc sulphate put in its place, and the resulting liquid mixed with 166 grammes each of rose-water and water of plantain. [B, 119 (a, 38).]—Collyrium zinci. See Collyre au sulfate de ZINC.—Flores zinci. See Flowers of ZINC.—Injectio sulphatis zinci compositus. See Liquor ALUMINIS compositus.—Injectio zinci chlorati. Sp., inyección de cloruro de zinc [Sp. Ph.]. A solution of zinc chloride in twice as much water to which from 1 to 3 per cent. of hydrochloric acid has been added; used for embalming. It should have a sp. gr. of 1·33. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Lactas zinci. Zinc lactate. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Liquor sulphatis zinci aluminosa. See Liquor ALUMINIS compositus.—Liquor zinci chlorati (seu chloridi [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.]). Solution of zinc chloride; made by dissolving metallic zinc in hydrochloric acid. It contains, however, impurities in the form of iron salts. These are removed by conversion into iron chloride (by means of nitric acid [U. S. Ph.] or chlorine water [Br. Ph.]) and subsequent precipitation by the gradual addition of zinc carbonate. In the U. S. process, 240 parts of zinc are employed and the solution is brought to measure 1,000 parts; for the Br. prep. 1 lb. av. of zinc is used to form 2 imperial pints of the solution. The sp. gr. of the former is 1·555, of the latter 1·593; and each contains about 50 per cent. of zinc chloride. The official solution forms a colorless liquid having a sweetish, styptic taste and an acid reaction. [B.]—Liquor zinci et aluminæ sulfuricæ basicæ. See Soluté de sulfate D'ALUMINE et de zinc.—Liquor zinci sulfurici [Sp. Ph.]. Sp., solución de sulfato zíncico [Sp. Ph.]. A solution of 30 centigrammes of zinc sulphate in 180 grammes of distilled water. [B, 95.]—Oleatum zinci [Br. Ph.]. A preparation made by triturating 1 part of zinc oxide (obtained in the wet way) with 9 parts of oleic acid, allowing to stand for two hours, and dissolving over the water bath. [B, 95 (a, 38).] Cf. ZINC oleate.—Oxydum zinci [Belg. Ph.]. A term applied apparently to the commercial zinc oxide of the best grade and also to the more carefully prepared zinc oxide of the ph's. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Oxydum zinci præcipitatum. See ZINC oxide.—Pasta zinci chlorati [Gr. Ph., Russ. Ph.]. Fr., caustique au chlorure de zinc [Fr. Cod.]. Sp., cáustico de cloruro de zinc [Sp. Ph.]. A paste made of 32 parts of zinc chloride dissolved in 4 of water and mixed with 8 of zinc oxide and 24 of dried wheat flour [Fr. Cod.]; of equal parts of zinc chloride and wheat flour with a little water [Sp. Ph., Russ. Ph.]; or of zinc oxide with a strong solution of zinc chloride [Gr. Ph.]. The Fr. Cod. directs that the paste be cut into thin pieces and thoroughly dried; the Gr. Ph. directs that it be colored at pleasure when used to fill teeth. The Belg. Ph. recognizes four grades of paste, containing respectively twice, three times, four times, and five times as much wheat flour as zinc chloride. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Solutio zinci aluminosa. See Liquor ALUMINIS compositus.—Sulphas zinci. See ZINC sulphate.—Unguentum oxydi zinci compositum [Belg. Ph.]. An ointment of 50 parts of zinc oxide, 125 of white lead, 80 of olive oil, 275 each of yellow wax and beef marrow, and 195 of mutton suet. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Unguentum refrigerans zinci. An ointment of 1 part of anhydrous lanolin, 2 of benzoinated zinc ointment, and 3 of rose-water. ["Am. Jour. of Pharm.," July, 1890, p. 346 (a, 50).]—Unguentum zinci. See Unguentum zinci oxidi.—Unguentum zinci oleati [Br. Ph.]. A mixture of equal parts of zinc oleate and petroleum. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Unguentum zinci oxidi [U. S. Ph.]. Fr., pommade d'oxyde de zinc [Fr. Cod.], onguent gris (ou ophthalmique, ou de pompholyx). Sp., pomada de óxido zíncico [Sp. Ph.]. Ointment of oxide of zinc, zinc ointment; made by rubbing up 1 part of (crude [Ger. Ph., Finn. Ph., Dan. Ph.]) zinc oxide with 9 parts of (benzoated [Fr. Cod.]) lard (simple cerate [Belg. Ph.], simple ointment [Hung. Ph.]), with 15 [Sp. Ph.], 8 [Netherl. Ph.] of lard, 4 [U. S. Ph.], 5⅓ [Br. Ph.] of benzoated lard, or with 8 of washed lard and 1 part of yellow wax [Russ. Ph.]. The older ph's varied the proportion of lard slightly or used 7 parts of verdigris with 22 each of zinc oxide and a solution of camphor in alcohol and 60 each of lard and mutton suet, or 1 part of zinc oxide with 2 parts of olive-oil. [B; B, 95, 119 (a, 38).]—Valeras zinci. See ZINC valerianate.—Zinci acetas. See ZINC acetate.—Zinci bromidum. See ZINC bromide.—Zinci carbonas (præcipitatus). See Precipitated ZINC carbonate.—Zinci chloridum. See ZINC chloride.—Zinci iodidum. See ZINC iodide.—Zinci oxidum. See ZINC oxide.—Zinci phosphidum. See ZINC phosphide.—Zinci præparata. Preparations of zinc; zinc salts. ZINGAR, n. Of the alchemists, verdigris. [B, 52.]

ZINGIBER (Lat.), n. n. Zi²nj(zi²n²g)'i²b-u⁵r(e²r). Gen., -ib'eris. Gr., ζιγγίβερις. Fr., z., gingembre (gris et blanc, rhizome) [Fr. Cod.] (2d def.). Ger., Ingwer (2d def.). Sp., jengibre (rhizoma) [Sp. Ph.] (2d def.). 1. A genus of plants forming, with Costus, Elettaria, Alpinia, Amomum, etc., an order (the Gingiberaceæ) of monocotyledons or a tribe (the Gingibereæ) of the Scitamineæ. 2. Of the U. S. Ph. and Br. Ph. (rhizoma zingiberis [Ger. Ph., Belg. Ph., Dan. Ph., Finn. Ph., Norw. Ph., Russ. Ph., Swed Ph., Swiss Ph.], z. [rhizoma] [Austr. Ph., Hung. Ph., 2d ed., Netherl. Ph.], zingiberis radix [Gr. Ph.]), ginger, the rhizoma of Z. officinale. [a, 35.]—Ætheroleum zingiberis. See Oil of GINGER.—Cerevisia cum zingibere (seu zingiberis). See GINGER-beer.—Essentia zingiberis. See Tinctura zingiberis.—Extractum zingiberis æthereum. See Oleoresina zingiberis.—Extractum zingiberis fluidum [U. S. Ph.]. A preparation made by exhausting with alcohol 100 grammes of ginger in No. 40 powder, reserving 90 c. c. of percolate, evaporating the residue to a soft extract, mixing the two, and bringing up to 100 c. c. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Infusum zingiberis [U. S. Ph., 1870]. A preparation made by macerating ½ Troy oz. of ginger in a pint of boiling water for two hours and straining. [B, 5 (a, 38).]—Oleoresina zingiberis [U. S. Ph.]. A preparation made by exhausting with ether 100 grammes of ginger in No. 60 powder (or carrying the process far enough to obtain 150 parts of percolate), and evaporating the ether off. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Oleum zingiberis æthereum. See Oil of GINGER.—Radix zingiberis. See Z. (2d def.).—Radix zingiberis (albi) e Jamaica. See White GINGER.—Radix zingiberis silvestris. 1. Long zedoary. 2. The tuberous root-stock of Z. cassumunar. 3. The root-stock of Z. zerumbet [Roscoe]. [a, 35.]—Rhizoma zingiberis. See Z. (2d def.).—Rhizoma zingiberis pulveratum. Ginger dried at 40° C., powdered in an iron mortar, and sifted through a No. 120 silk sieve [Fr. Cod.], or powdered and sifted through a 1,600-mesh sieve [Russ. Ph.], or through a 1,000-mesh sieve till the residue forms a fibrous mass [Swed. Ph.]. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Syrupus zingiberis. A preparation made by triturating 2 parts of fluid extract of ginger with 25 of powdered sugar, maintaining at a heat of not more than 60° C. till the alcohol is evaporated, dissolving the residue in 35 parts of water, filtering, washing till 60 parts are obtained, adding 40 of sugar, and straining [U. S. Ph.]; or by mixing 6 fluid drachms of stronger tincture of ginger with 19 fluid oz. of syrup [Br. Ph.]; or by macerating 1 part of ginger in 7 parts of water and 1 part of 90-per-cent. alcohol [Russ. Ph.] (in enough boiling water [Swed. Ph.]), and dissolving 120 [Russ. Ph.] (126 [Swed. Ph.]) of sugar in 70 of filtered liquid. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Tabellæ zingiberis. See Trochisci zingiberis.—Tinctura zingiberis. Fr., teinture de gingembre [Fr. Cod.]. A tincture made of 1 part of ginger in No. 40 powder with alcohol enough to make 5 parts by percolation [U. S. Ph.] (with 5 parts of dilute alcohol [Ger. Ph., Hung. Ph., Swiss Ph.], 70-per-cent. alcohol [Russ. Ph.], or 80-per-cent. alcohol [Fr. Cod., Belg. Ph.]), or of 2½ oz. of ginger with enough alcohol to make 20 fl. oz. by percolation [Br. Ph.]. [B, 95, 119 (a, 38).]—Tinctura zingiberis anglica [Swiss Ph.] (seu fortior [Br. Ph.]). A tincture made of 10 oz. of ginger with alcohol enough to make 20 fl. oz. by percolation [Br. Ph.]; or of 10 parts of ginger with alcohol enough to make 20 parts [Swiss Ph.]. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Trochisci zingiberis [U. S. Ph.]. Syn.: tabellæ zingiberis [Belg. Ph.]. Lozenges made of 200 parts of tincture of ginger with 2,000 of sugar, 50 of tragacanth, and enough syrup of ginger [U. S. Ph.]; or with 12 of tragacanth, 1,788 of sugar, and enough water [Belg. Ph.]. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Z. album. 1. Formerly the corm of Arum maculatum. [a, 35.] 2. See White GINGER.—Z. amarum. Ger., bitterer Ingwer. A species found in Java and the Moluccas. The spicy, bitterish rhizome is used like that of Z. zerumbet. The young stems are used as a spice, and the young leaves are eaten. [a, 35.]—Z. cassumunar, Z. cassumuniar. Bengal root; a native of the East Indies, Java, and the Moluccas. The tubers of the root-stock, radix cassumunar (seu cassumuniar, seu casmonar, seu risagon, seu bengale [inodorum], seu zingiberis silvestris, seu zedoariæ luteæ), have a spicy, bitterish taste and a strong camphoraceous smell. They have properties somewhat like those of ginger, but are not now known in commerce. The plant is used by the natives in diarrhœa and colic. [α, 35.]—Z. citrinum. The Curcuma longa. [α, 35.]—Z. commune. See Black GINGER.—Z. dubium. Ger., zweifelhafter Ingwer. A Guinea plant used as an aromatic. It is not well known, and is doubtfully referred to this genus. [α, 35.]—Z. flavum. The Curcuma longa. [α, 35.]—Z. germanicum. Formerly the corm of Arum maculatum. [α, 35.]—Z. gramineum. A species found in the islands of the Indian Ocean. The root-stock, which is grayish externally and white internally, is smaller than true ginger and has shorter joints. It has the medicinal properties of ginger, but is not used as a spice, on account of its unpleasant bitterish taste. [α, 35.]—Zingiberis radix. See Z. (2d def.).—Z. luteum. The Curcuma longa. [α, 35.]—Z. marginatum. A species found in the East Indies, Java, and the Moluccas. The seeds and root-stock are used as a mild aromatic. [α, 35.]—Z. mioga. A Japanese species. The tuberous, spicy root-stock is used as a food and in medicine. [α, 35.]—Z. nigrum. See Black GINGER.—Z. officinale. Fr., gingembre, herbe au gingembre. Ger., gebräuchlicher (oder gemeiner, oder ächter, oder wahrer) Ingwer. A native probably of India, but not known in its wild state; a plant cultivated in the tropics for its fleshy rhizome, which constitutes ginger. Ginger contains starch, a yellow, volatile oil belonging to the terpenes, and a pungent resinous principle; it is used as a stimulant, carminative, rubefacient, etc. [α, 35.]—Z. purpureum. See Z. cassumunar.—Z. spurium. See Z. zerumbet.—Z. vulgare. See Black GINGER.—Z. zanthorrizon. See Z. cassumunar.—Z. zerumbet. Fr., amome sauvage, balisier. Broad-leaved ginger of Ceylon and the East Indies. The root-stock, radix zerumbet (seu zerumbeth, seu zerumbeti, seu zingiberis silvestris, seu bengale, seu bringalle inodorum), is aromatic and bitter, and is used in fomentations and cataplasms. It is not now used internally. [α, 35.]

ZIRBUS (Lat.), n. m. Zu^{5}rb(zi^{2}rb)'u^{3}s(u^{4}s). See OMENTUM.

ZIRCON, n. Zu^{5}rk'o^{2}n. Fr., Z. Ger., Zirkon. Native zirconium silicate. [B.]

ZIRCONATE, n. Zu^{5}rk'o^{2}n-at. A compound of zirconium oxide with the oxide of another element or radicle. [B, 3.]

ZIRCONIA, ZIRCONIC ACID, n's. Zu^{5}rk-on'i^2-a^3, -o^{2}n'i^{2}k. Fr., zircone, acide zirconique. See ZIRCONIUM oxide.

ZIRCONIUM (Lat.), n. n. Zu^{5}rk(zi^{2}rk)-on'i^2-u^{3}m(u^{4}m). Fr., z. Ger., Zirkon, Zirkonium. A metallic element discovered by Klaproth in 1789. It occurs in the mineral zircon, and other rare mineral compounds. It is obtained either in the form of an amorphous iron-gray powder, which acquires a metallic lustre on polishing, or as brittle, scale-like crystals. In composition it acts usually as a tetrad, forming compounds resembling in chemical structure those of tin. Symbol, Zr; atomic weight, 90. [B, 3.]—Z. oxide. The compound ZrO_2, obtainable both as an amorphous powder and as prismatic crystals. [B, 3.]

ZIRCONOFLUORIDE, n. Zu^{5}rk''o^{2}n-o-flu^2'o^{2}r-i^{2}d(id). A double fluoride of zirconium and another metal. [B, 3.]

ZIRKEL (Ger.), n. Tserk'se^{2}l. See CIRCLE and CIRCULUS.—Röhrenz'. The circulatory system. [K, 13.]

ZIRKON (Ger.), n. Tserk-on'. See ZIRCON.—Z'erde. See ZIRCONIUM oxide.

ZIRKONIUM (Ger.), n. Tserk-on'e-um. See ZIRCONIUM.

ZIRMET (Ger.), n. Tserm'e^{2}t. The genus Tordylium. [α, 35.]

ZISCHELN (Ger.), n. Tsi^{2}sh'e^{2}ln. See BLÆSITAS.

ZISCHEND (Ger.), adj. Tsi^{2}sh'e^{2}nd. See SIBILANT.

ZISTENSAFT (Ger.), n. Tsi^{2}st'e^{2}n-za^{3}ft. Succus hypocistidis. [α, 35.] See under CYTINUS hypocistis.

ZITTER (Ger.), n. Tsi^{2}t'te^{2}r. See TETTER.

ZITTERGRAS (Ger.), n. Tsi^{2}t'e^{2}r-gra^{3}s. The genus Briza.

ZITTERLÄHMUNG (Ger.), n. Tsi^{2}t'te^{2}r-lam-un^2. See PARALYSIS agitans.

ZITTERMAL (Ger.), n. Tsi^{2}t'te^{2}r-ma^{3}l. Tetter; herpes; serpigo. [G.]

ZITTERN (Ger.), n. Tsi^{2}t'te^{2}rn. See SHIVER and TREMOR.—Bleiz'. See MOLYBDOTROMOS.—Gliederz'. Tremor of the limbs. ZIZANIA (Lat.), n. f. Zi^{2}z(zez)-an(a^{3}n)'i^2-a^3. From ζιζάνιον, darnel. Fr., zizane, zizanie. Ger., Haferreis. A genus of aquatic grasses. [α, 35.]—Z. aquatica. Fr., zizane (ou zizanie) aquatique. Indian (or Canadian) rice, water-oat of North America. The grain is said to be more nutritious than ordinary rice. [α, 35.]

ZIZYPHIC ACID, n. Zi^{2}z-i^{2}f'i^{2}ck. Fr., acide zizyphique. Of Latour, a crystallizable acid contained in the aqueous extract of the wood of Zizyphus sativa. [B, 92, 93 (α, 14).]

ZIZYPHUS (Lat.), n. f. Zi^{2}z(zez)'i^{2}f(u^{6}f)-u^{3}s(u^{4}s). Fr., jujubier. Ger., Judendorn. A genus of shrubs or trees typical of a tribe (Zizypheæ) of the Rhamneæ; in the pl., zizyphi, the fruits of Z. vulgaris. [α, 35.]—Baccae (seu Fructus) zizyphi. See JUJUBES.—Z. Baclei. A Senegal species. The astringent root is used for gonorrhœa and other discharges. The fruits are considered poisonous. [α, 35.]—Z. exserta. A species found in the Philippines; used in syphilis and skin diseases. [α, 35.]—Z. glabrata. An Indian species. The leaves are used as an alterative, and the bark yields a sort of kino. [α, 35.]—Z. joazeiro. A Brazilian tree with a bitter, astringent, emetic, and febrifuge bark. [α, 35.]—Z. jujuba, Z. laccifera. Fr., jujubier cotonneux, masson. Ger., stumpfblättriger Judendorn, ächter Jujubenbaum. Jujube-tree of China, Cochin-China, the East Indies, etc. The fruits are used like those of Z. vulgaris, but are not so sweet. The leaves are used in gonorrhœa. The bitter, astringent bark, which yields a variety of kino, is used in aphthæ, diarrhœa, etc., and as a tonic. The juice of the root-bark is used as a purgative and in gout and rheumatism. Lac is obtained from this tree. [α, 35.]—Z. lotus. Fr., lotier des lotophages. Ger., Lotosbaum. A species found along the African shore of the Mediterranean, the λωτός of Theophrastus. The fruits (see under JUJUBE) are used medicinally, and are supposed to have been the fruits eaten by the lotophagi. [α, 35.]—Z. mitis, Z. mucronata. A Senegambian species with edible fruits. [α, 35.]—Z. napeca. Fr., jujubier napéca. Ger., glatter Judendorn. An East Indian species. The seeds produce mild vertigo and diarrhœa. The root is used in flatulent colic and as a vulnerary, the bark of the branches in fevers and various painful affections, and the leaves for washing dead bodies. [α, 35.]—Z. œnoplia. Ger., schiefblättriger Judendorn. A species found in Ceylon, the East Indies, Java, etc. The bark is used as a febrifuge and as a digestive tonic. The seeds have the properties of those of Z. napeca. [α, 35.]—Z. ortacantha, Z. orthacantha. Fr., jujubier sedoum. An edible-fruited species found in Senegal, perhaps a variety of Z. jujuba. The leaves are used in gonorrhœa. [α, 35.]—Z. sinensis. Ger., chinesischer Judendorn. A species probably indigenous to China, cultivated in southern Europe for its fruits, which are used like jujubes. [α, 35.]—Z. soporifera. A shrub of northern China. The seeds, which are used in Chinese medicine, are calmative and hypnotic. [α, 35.]—Z. sororia. An East Indian species closely related to Z. jujuba. The leaves are used as an alterative. [α, 35.]—Z. spina Christi. Ger., Christdorn, palästin'scher Judendorn. Nubk-tree of Palestine, Christ's-thorn. The unripe fruits, which are astringent, are used in atonic conditions of the stomach and intestines, and the ripe fruits to make a refrigerant drink for use in fevers and inflammatory complaints. [α, 35.]—Z. vulgaris. Fr., jujubier cultivé, chichourlier, croc de chien, épine à cerise, guindourlier. Ger., gemeiner Judendorn, Brustbeerenbaum, Jujube. A native of the Orient, especially of Syria, cultivated in the Mediterranean regions of Europe for its fruits (see JUJUBE). [α, 35.]—Z. xylopyra, Z. xylopyrus. An East Indian and Ceylon species with edible kernels. [α, 35.]

ZOAMINE (Fr.), n. Zo-a^3-men. An animal alkaloid. [Boucheron, "Union méd.," Dec. 12, 1885, p. 979.] See PTOMAINE.

ZOAMYLIN, n. Zo-a^{2}m'i^{2}l-i^{2}n. See AMYLOID (2d and 4th def's).

ZOANTHROPY, n. Zo-a^{2}nth'rop-i^2. Lat., zoanthropia (from ζῷον, an animal, and ἄνθρωπος, a man). Ger., Thierwahn. A variety of insanity in which the patient imagines himself changed into some animal. [α, 34.]

ZOETROPE, n. Zo'e^2-trop. From ζωή, life, and τροπή, a turning. A toy, known also as the "wheel of life" and called by Stricker a stroboscope, in which a number of pictures, closely alike, but yet varying progressively in one or more particular features, are brought into view in rapid succession by rotating a drum-like wheel in which they are laid, the effect being that the object portrayed seems to perform intrinsic movements.

ZOIATRIA (Lat.), ZOIATRICA (Lat.), n's f. Zo-i^2-a^{2}t(a^{3}t)-ri(re)'a^3, -a^{2}t(a^{3}t)'ri^{2}k-a^3. From ζῷον, an animal, and ἰατρεία, or ἰατρική, medical treatment. Fr., zoïatrique. Ger., Thierheilkunde. Veterinary medicine.

ZOIATRUS (Lat.), n. m. Zo-i^2-a^{2}t(a^{3}t)'ru^{3}s(ru^{4}s.) From ζῷον, an animal, and ἰατρός, a physician. Fr., zoïatre. Ger., Thierarzt. A veterinarian.

ZOICITÉ (Fr.), n. Zo-e-se-ta. See NEURICITY.

ZOIDIN, n. Zo'i^{2}d-i^{2}n. Fr., zoidine. See BAREGIN.

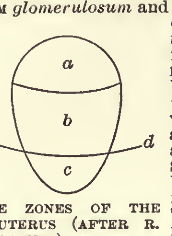
ZOISM, n. Zo'i^{2}zm. Lat., zoismus (from ζωή, life). Fr., zoïsme. The aggregate of vital functions and processes. [A, 385 (α, 48).]

ZOMIDIN, n. Zo^{2}m'i^{2}d-i^{2}n. Fr., zomidine. An aromatic brown substance obtained from beef extract. [A, 385 (α, 48).]

ZOMODMON (Lat.), n. n. Zom-o^{2}d'mo^{2}n. A reddish-brown aromatic coloring matter obtained from flesh, bile, and other animal substances. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

ZOMOS (Lat.), n. m. Zom'o^{2}s. Gr., ζωμός. Hot broth.



ZONA (Lat.), n. f. Zon'a^3. See ZONE and ZOSTER.—Ophthalmic z. See ZOSTER ophthalmicus.—Z. arcuata (of the cochlea). The middle section of the membrana basilaris. [F, 3.]—Z. castitatis [Stephanus]. See HYMEN (2d def.).—Z. choriacea. The thickened margin of the membrana basilaris where it rests on the lamina spiralis ossea. [L, 31.]—Z. denticulata (cochleæ). 1. The z. choriacea and the z. interna of the basilar membrane. 2. Of Deiters, the upper surface of the z. choriacea. [L.]—Z. externa. That portion of the membrana basilaris that is external to the outer rods of Corti. [L.]—Z. fasciculata. Of Arnold, the main portion of the cortex of the suprarenal capsule. It lies beneath the z. glomerulosa, and is composed of elongated and column-like anastomosing groups of cells. [C; J, 30.]—Z. ganglionaris. A large ganglion layer in Rosenthal's canal, lying on the periphery of the modiolus, between the fibrous bundles of the latter and the spiral lamina. [F, 3.]—Z. gangréneux (Fr.). A form of zoster in which grayish eschars develop about the vesicles, followed by deep ulceration; occurring usually in the aged or in persons of depraved constitution. [G, 51.]—Z. glomerulosa. Of Arnold, the layer of the suprarenal capsule next the fibrous capsule, forming the proper substance of the body of the organ and consisting of oval or rounded masses of cells that are really the ends of cells of the z. fasciculata. [J, 30.]—Z. granulosa. 1. See Z. radiata (1st def.). 2. Of von Baer, the discus proligerus.—Z. herpetica. See HERPES periscelis.—Z. ignea. See ZOSTER.—Z. incerta. Of Forel, a layer of fine longitudinal nerve-fibres, with a few scattered ganglion-cells, immediately adjoining the reticular formation. [I, 17 (K).]—Z. interna, Z. lævis. The portion of the membrana basilaris that is internal to the outer rods of Corti. [L, 31.]—Z. mediana. See Z. choriacea.—Z. membranacea. See MEMBRANA basilaris.—Z. mollis. See LAMINA spiralis membranacea.—Z. nervea. See Z. interna and Z. choriacea.—Z. orbicularis. A thickening of the capsular ligament of the hip joint corresponding to the margin of the acetabulum. [L.]—Z. ossea. See LAMINA spiralis ossea.—Z. pectinata (of the cochlea). The external, finely-striated section of the lamina spiralis membranacea. [F, 32.]—Z. pellucida. Fr., zone transparente, membrane ovulaire (ou vitelline). Ger., Dotterhaut, Dotterhülle, Eihaut, Keimhülle. Of von Baer, the vitelline membrane, so called on account of its appearing as a broad transparent band lying between the opaque yolk substance within and the granular cells of the discus proligerus which adhere to it externally. According to Pflüger, however, it is an adventitious layer, external to the true vitelline membrane. It is thought by some to be a product of the membrana granulosa, but others regard it as a product or transformation of the surface of the vitellus. When moderately magnified it appears homogeneous, but under a high power it exhibits a striated appearance as if it were porous. [A, 8; J, 1, 21, 23, 30, 35.]—Z. perforata of the cochlea. The inner division of the lamina spiralis membranacea, which is perforated in numerous places for the passage of the fibres of the cochlear nerve. [F, 32.]—Z. radiata. 1. The subepithelial coat of the ovarian ovum, made up of a layer of columnar cells, belonging to the discus proligerus. 2. See Z. pellucida.—Z. repens. See ZOSTER.—Z. reticularis. The deepest layer of the cortex of the suprarenal capsule. Here the columns of cells disappear, only round groups remaining in between the sæptal connective tissue. [C; J.]—Z. serpiginosa. See ZOSTER.—Z. striata. See Z. pellucida.—Z. tecta. See HABENULA tecta.—Z. tendinosa. See ANNULUS fibrosus atrioventricularis.—Z. traumatica paradoxa. Fr., z. traumatique paradoxal. A name given by Besnier to a case of zoster following traumatism, but appearing upon the side opposite to that upon which the injury was received. ["Ann. de dermat."; "Arch. f. Derm. u. Syph.," xxii, 1890, 4, 5, p. 751 (G).]—Z. Valsalvæ. See LAMINA spiralis membranacea.—Z. vasculosa. Of Waldeyer, the central vascular stroma of the ovary.—Z. volatica. See ZOSTER.

ZONARIA (Lat.), n. f. Zon-ar(a^{3}r)'i^2-a^3. From zonarius, belonging to a belt. Ger., Gürteltang. A genus of Algæ. The Zonariaceæ of Nägeli are an order of Algæ, consisting of Fuceæ, etc. The Zonarideæ of Gray are the Dictyotideæ. The Zonarieæ are a tribe of Algæ, consisting of Z. and another genus. [α, 35.]—Z. fasciola, Z. pavonia, Z. squamaria. Species found in the Mediterranean Sea and warm parts of the Atlantic, sometimes forming a part of helminthochorton. [α, 35.]

ZONATE, adj. Zon'at. Lat., zonatus. Ger., gegürtelt. Zoned, marked with concentric bands or zones. [α, 35.]

ZONE, n. Zon. Gr., ζώνη (from ζωννύναι, to gird). Lat., zona. Fr., z. Ger., Z., Gürtel, Gürtelstreifen. A belt or girdle, a circular band differing from the surface carrying it. [α, 35.]—Boundary z. Fr., z. limitante. Ger., Grenzschicht. The part of the medulla of the kidney next the cortex. In it the groups of blood-vessels and uriniferous tubules alternate. [J, 30, 35.]—Cervical z. of the uterus [Barnes]. Fr., z. cervicale (ou inférieure). Syn.: orificial z. [Barnes]. See figure under Z's of the uterus.—Ciliary z. Lat., ligamentum suspensorium lentis, zonula zinnii. Fr., ligament suspenseur du cristallin. Ger., Zonula der Linse, Strahlenbändchen, Ciliarlamelle. A thin, transparent membrane which begins with a serrated margin on the ciliary processes, and extends inward nearly to the equator of the lens, where it is intimately connected with the anterior capsule. It consists of a portion lying above the ciliary processes in folds, and a smooth portion covering the processes and extending to the capsule. Microscopically it consists of slight, sharply defined fibres connected by a delicate intercellular substance. [F.]—Epileptic z. A region of the face, stimulation of which gives rise to epileptic convulsions in animals which have sustained a severe lesion of the spinal cord upon the same side. [Landois (K).]—Epileptogenous z. A z. comprising certain motor tracts in the cerebral cortex artificial irritation of which gives rise to epileptoid convulsions; of Brown-Séquard, a tract including those portions of the skin of the body that produce epileptoid convulsions on being irritated, as observed in guinea-pigs after section of the spinal cord. ["Neurol. Ctrlbl.," iii, 1883, p. 34 (K); α, 34.]—Fibrous z. of the heart. See ANNULUS fibrosus atrioventricularis.—Fundal z. of the uterus. Fr., z. du fond. See figure under Z's of the uterus.—Gefässz' (Ger.). See Vascular AREA.—Granular boundary z. of dentin. See Granular LAYER of dentin.—Hysterogenic z's. Hypersensitive areas in various portions of the body pressure on which produces symptoms of hysteria. [α, 34.]—Intermediate z. Of Guillard, the active z. of tissue immediately surrounding the central region of parenchyma in the stem of monocotyledonous plants. [α, 35.]—Internal z. of the lenticular nucleus. A z. adjacent to the internal capsule, with which it is connected by transverse white fibres. [I, 1 (K).]—Keimz' (Ger.). See under SPERMATOMERE (1st def.).—Körnerz' (Ger.). The stratum granulosum of the cerebellum. [J.]—Kreuzungsz' (Ger.). An area comprising certain portions of the cerebral hemispheres in which there is marked decussation of the nerve-fibres. [I, 17 (K).]—Meridional z. of the uterus [Barnes]. Fr., z. du méridien (ou du milieu). See figure under Z's of the uterus.—Neutral z. In the Characeæ, a line, produced by the absence of chlorophyll-bodies, situated on the outer non-moving portion of the protoplasm of a cell. [α, 35.]—Orificial z. [Barnes]. See Cervical z. of the uterus.—Papillary z. See Boundary z.—Placental z. Fr., z. placentaire. That z. of the uterus in which the placenta is attached.—Posterior radicular z. See Cuneate FUNICULUS.—Spinalz' (Ger.). The z., or tract, of nerve-fibres in the spinal cord. [I, 27 (K).]—Striated z. See ZONA pellucida.—Thickening z. Fr., z. génératrice. The z. of thin-walled cells (cambium) between the wood and bark, constituting the active formative tissue of a dicotyledonous stem. [α, 35.]—Transparent z. See Lateral DISC.—Vordere gemischte Seitenstrangz' (Ger.). The anterior mixed z. or tract in the lateral column of the spinal cord. [I, 27 (K).]—Wachsthumsz' (Ger.). See under SPERMATOMERE (2d def.).—Z's blanches (Fr.). Of Vicq d'Azyr, certain arc-like folds of the membrana chalazifera that extend from the insertion of one chalaza to that of the other. [A, 4.]—Z. dangereuse (Fr.). In surgery, a region about the clavicle extending from 14 to 18 centimetres over the neck, the arm, and the chest, operations in which are dangerous because of the risk of opening the veins and admitting air into them. [A, 301 (α, 34).]—Z. des papilles (Fr.). See STRATUM glomerulosum and cf. Papillary z.—Z. du méridien (Fr.), Z. du milieu (Fr.). See figure under Z's of the uterus.—Z. génératrice (Fr.). See Thickening z.—Z. inférieure (Fr.). See figure under Z's of the uterus.—Z. maniable [Bert] (Fr.). An atmosphere, charged with a measured quantity of anæsthetic vapor, in which it is perfectly safe to leave a patient for an unlimited period without attention. [Holmes (α, 25).]—Z. of Haller. See Ciliary z.—Z's of the basilar membrane. See ZONA externa and ZONA interna.—Z's of the lenticular nucleus. Three laminæ consisting of masses of gray matter separated by white bundles (medullary laminæ). [I, 23 (K).]—Z's of the uterus. Three z's into which R. Barnes divides the inner surface of the gravid uterus, with reference to the implantation of the placenta, designated the fundal z., the meridional z., and the cervical z. [A, 40.]—Z. of Zinn. See Ciliary z.—Z. transparent (Fr.). See ZONA pellucida.

THE ZONES OF THE UTERUS (AFTER R. BARNES).

a, The fundal zone; b, the equatorial zone; c, the cervical zone; d, the limit of spontaneous placental detachment.

ZONED, adj. Zond. Fr., zoné. See ZONATE.

ZONITE, n. Zon'it. From zona, a zone. Of Packard, see SOMITE (2d def.).

ZONOPLACENTAIRES (Fr.), n. pl. Zo-no-pla^3-sa^{3}n^2-ta^{2}r. See MESALLANTOIDS.

ZONULA (Lat.), n. f. Zo^{2}n(zon)'u^{2}l(u^{4}l)-a^3. Dim. of zona, a belt. See ZONULE.—Z. cartilaginea. See LAMINA spiralis.—Z. ciliaris. See Ciliary ZONE.—Z. ossea laminæ spiralis. See LAMINA spiralis ossea.—Z. Zinnii. See Ciliary ZONE.

ZONULAR, adj. Zo^{2}n'u^{2}l-a^{3}r. Fr., zonulaire. Having the form of a zone or zonule.

ZONULE, n. Zo^{2}n'u^{2}l. Lat., zonula. A small zone. [α, 48.]—Z. of Zinn. See Ciliary ZONE.

ZOO-AMYLIN, n. Zo-o-a^{2}m'i^{2}l-i^{2}n. From ζῷον, an animal, and ἄμυλον, starch. See AMYLOID (2d and 4th def's).

ZOOBIOLOGY, n. Zo-o-bi-o^{2}l'o-ji^2. From ζῷον, an animal, βίος, life, and λόγος, understanding. Animal biology. [α, 48.]

ZOOBLASTE (Fr.), n. Zo-o-bla^{3}st. See Animal CELL.

ZOOCAMBIUM (Lat.), n. n. Zo-o(o^3)-ka^{2}mb(ka^{3}mb)'i^2-u^{3}m(u^{4}m). From ζῷον, an animal, and cambium (q. v.). See BLASTEMA (4th def.).

ZOOCARPUM (Lat.), n. n. Zo-o(o^3)-ka^{3}rp'u^{3}m(u^{4}m). From ζῷον, an animal, and καρπός, fruit. Fr., zoocarpe. See ZOOSPORE (1st def.).

ZOOCHEMIA (Lat.), n. f. Zo-o(o^3)-ke^{2}m(ch^{2}am)-i(e)'a^3. From ζῷον, an animal, and χημεία, chemistry. Fr., zoochimie. Ger., Zoochemie. See BIOCHEMISTRY.

ZOOCHIRURGIA (Lat.), n. f. Zo-o(o^3)-ki^{2}r(ch^{2}er)-u^{6}r(ur)'ji^2-(gi^2)-a^3. From ζῷον, an animal, χείρ, the hand, and ἔργον, work. See Veterinary SURGERY.

ZOODERMIES [Piorry] (Fr.), n. pl. Zo-o-de^{2}r-me. Cutaneous diseases caused by animal parasites. [A, 250 (α, 21).]

ZOODYNAMIA (Lat.), n. f. Zo-o(o^3)-di^{2}n(du^{6}n)-a^{2}m(a^{3}m)'i^2-a^3. From ζῷον, an animal, and δύναμις, power. Fr., zoodynamie. Ger., Zoodynamie. Vital force as developed in animals. [L, 50 (α, 48).]

ZOOGALACTINA (Lat.), n. f. Zo-o(o^3)-ga^{2}l(ga^{3}l)-a^{2}kt(a^{3}kt)-in(en)'a^3. From ζῷον, an animal, and γάλα, milk. See PALMELLA.—Z. imetropha. See BACILLUS prodigiosus.

ZOOGAMETE, n. Zo-o-ga^{2}m'et. See Plano-GAMETE.

ZOOGENE, n. Zo'o-jen. Lat., zoogenum. Fr., zoogène. See BAREGIN.

ZOOGENY, n. Zo-o^{2}j'e^{2}n-i^2. Lat., zoogenia, zoogenesis (from ζῷον, an animal, and γεννᾶν, to engender). Fr., zoogénie. Ger., Thierzeugung. Animal reproduction. [L, 50 (α, 48).]

ZOOGLŒA (Lat.), n. f. Zo-o(o^3)-gle'(glo^2'e^2)-a^3. From ζῷον, an animal, and γλοιός, a glutinous substance. Fr., zooglée. Ger., Gallertstock (1st def.). 1. A mass or colony of schizomycetous Fungi enveloped in a gelatinous matrix secreted by them in some stage (the z. stage) of development during which the cells increase rapidly by fission. 2. The genus Palmella. [α, 35.]

ZOOGONIDIUM (Lat.), n. n. Zo-o(o^3)-go^{2}n-i^{2}d'i^2-u^{3}m(u^{4}m). From ζῷον, an animal, and gonidium (q. v.). A motile gonidium (conidium). [α, 35.]

ZORNIA (Lat.), n. f. Zo²rn′i²-a³. A genus of leguminous herbs. [a, 35.]—Z. angustifolia, Z. diphylla. An East Indian febrifuge species. [a, 35.]

ZOSTER (Lat.), n. m. Zo²st(zost)′u⁵r(ar). Gen., -er′os (-er′is). Gr., ζωστήρ (from ζωννύναι, to gird). Fr., z., zone, sangle, ceinturon, ceinture, feu persique (ou sacré). Ger., Rose, Gürtel, Gürtelflechte, Feuergürtel. Shingles, cruels; an acute vesicular eruption, usually painful, characterized by the development of groups of herpetic (see HERPES [2d def.]) vesicles corresponding in situation to the cutaneous distribution of a nerve. The term arises from the fact that in a common form of the disease the eruption apparently tends to encircle the body like a girdle, though practically it hardly ever occupies more than one lateral half. [G, 16.]—Z. aigu (Fr.). See Z.—Z. atypicus gangrænosus et hystericus. See Z. gangrænosus hystericus.—Z. auricularis. A rare form of z. developed only in the structures of the ear, which attacks the parts covered by true skin and also extends to the drumhead and cavity of the middle ear. [F.]—Z. brachialis. Z. of the arm and forearm, corresponding to the cutaneous distribution of the internal, middle, and external cutaneous, the median, and the ulnar nerves. [G.]—Z. capillitii et frontalis. An awkward expression (to which z. capillitii et frontis would be preferable) for z. of the scalp and the upper portion of the face, occasionally involving the conjunctiva, cornea, and iris, corresponding to the distribution of the first branch of the fifth nerve. [G.]—Z. cerebralis. Z. of cerebral origin; characterized by its extensive distribution, sometimes occupying the whole or the greater part of one side of the body. [G.]—Z. cervico-subclavicularis. Z. which begins on the neck, near the edge of the hair, and descends along the side of the neck to the shoulder, thence spreading forward over the skin between the clavicle and the nipple and over a part of the neck above the clavicle. [L, 57 (a, 50).]—Z. chronique (Fr.). See Z. redivivus.—Z. collaris. See Z. occipito-collaris.—Z. dorso-abdominalis. Z. of the back and abdomen, corresponding to the cutaneous distribution of the eighth, ninth, tenth, eleventh, and twelfth dorsal nerves. [G.]—Z. dorso-pectoralis. Z. of the back and pectoral region, corresponding to the cutaneous distribution of the third, fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh dorsal nerves.—Z. facialis, Z. faciei. Facial z., which may appear upon the face, the temporal region, the external ear, and the mucous membrane of the nose, mouth, and throat; corresponding to the superficial distribution of the trigeminus nerve. [G.]—Z. femoralis. See Z. lumbo-femoralis.—Z. gangrænosus. Z. in which certain of the vesicles or vesicular groups become gangrenous. Usually the gangrene begins after the vesicle has formed, and can be seen in its progress, through the unbroken epidermis. At other times it occurs primarily, affecting either a single vesicle or an entire group. In the latter case the border of the gangrenous patch is seen to preserve this irregular and indented outline of a vesicular group. [G.]—Z. gangrænosus hystericus. Of Kaposi, a form observed in patients with hysterical symptoms among which it is supposed to belong. It differs from ordinary z. in the distribution of the efflorescences, which do not follow the course of a particular nerve; also in the fact that in most of the cases described the eruption was symmetrical and in the occurrence of gangrene in certain vesicular groups of the eruption. ["Arch. für Derm. u. Syph.," Sept., 1889, p. 561 (G).]—Z. hystericus. An eruption resembling z. due to hysteria (cf. Z. gangrænosus hystericus). [G.]—Z. lumbo-femoralis. Z. corresponding to the cutaneous distribution of the second, third, and fourth lumbar, the external anterior cutaneous, the genito-crural, and the crural nerves. It may appear upon the nates, the front and back of the thigh, and sometimes the calf of the leg.—Z. lumbo-inguinalis. Z. of the back and groin, corresponding to the cutaneous distribution of the twelfth intercostal and the first lumbar nerves, together with their anastomoses. [G.]—Z. nuchæ, Z. occipito-collaris. Z. extending from the region of the second and third vertebræ around the neck to the median line of the throat and to the chin, corresponding to the cutaneous distribution of the fourth cervical nerve. [G.]—Z. ophthalmicus. A disease of nervous origin, usually ushered in by more or less severe pain and tenderness in the brow or head, followed by redness and swelling of the skin and the appearance of numerous small vesicles, usually arranged in oval groups. The eruption only extends in the course of the ophthalmic division of the fifth nerve, and is therefore confined to the forehead, the anterior part of the scalp, the eyelids, and the side of the nose. It may affect only certain branches of the ophthalmic nerve. The individual vesicles become confluent, and their contents dry up into scabs which afterward drop off, leaving deep and characteristic scars. The eyeball does not suffer, unless the oculo-nasal branch is involved, when small corneal ulcers may occur or iritis may develop. The temperature of the affected parts is decidedly increased, but the sensibility is diminished. It is said to occur but once in the life of a patient. [F.]—Z. pectoralis. Z. affecting the skin of the chest.—Z. perinæalis. Z. of the perinæum, affecting the skin of the perinæum, the posterior surface of the scrotum, and the penis or vulva, corresponding to the cutaneous distribution of the pudic, the posterior cutaneous, and the ischiadic nerves. [G.]—Z. redivivus [Alibert]. The form of z. that is followed by a chronic neuralgia. [G, 7.]—Z. sacro-genitalis, Z. sacro-ischiadicus. See Z. perinœalis.

ZOSTERA (Lat.), n. f. Zo²st(zost)-er(ar)′a³. From ζωστήρ, a girdle. Fr., zostère. 1. Sea-wrack; a genus of maritime herbs of the Zosteraceæ, which are an order of monocotyledons now made a tribe (the Zostereæ) of the Naiadaceæ. [a, 35.] 2. Of Alibert, see ZOSTER.—Z. marina, Z. maritima. Fr., algue marine (ou des verriers, ou des vitriers). Ger., gemeiner Wasserriemen, Wier, Wirr, Meergras, Seegras. Glass-wrack of Atlantic shores, grass-weed (or -wrack), glaziers' sea-weed, turtle-grass, bell-ware. The leaves are sometimes found on shores in the form of balls (see HALCYONIUM rotundum). They contain potash and a little iodine, and have been used as an antiscorbutic. [a, 35.]—Z. mediterranea. A Mediterranean species having the properties of Z. marina and sometimes forming similar balls. It is used for various economic purposes. [a, 35.]

ZOSTERIC, adj. Zo²st-e²r′i²k. Lat., zostericus. Pertaining to zoster.

AZOMURIA (Lat.), n. f. A^{2}z(a^{3}z)-o-mu^2(mu)'ri^2-a^3. For deriv., see AZOTE and MURIATIC. The hypothetical radicle or base contained in nitrohydrochloric acid. [Kerr (B, 91).]

BACILLÆMIA (Lat.), n. f. Ba^{2}s(ba^{3}k)-i^{2}l-lem'(la^3'e^{2}m)-i^2-a^3. From bacillus (q. v.), and αἷμα, blood. The presence of bacilli, including their products, in the blood. [α, 34.]

BACILLUS.—B. albuminis. The B. putrificus coli. [α, 35.]—B. bizzozerianus. The Leptothrix epidermidis. [α, 35.]—B. cæruleus. A species observed by A. J. Smith in flowing water (Schuylkill River); rods 2 μ to 2·5 μ long and 0·5 μ thick, often connected in long filaments. It quickly liquefies gelatin, and on potatoes forms colonies which are at first of a bluish, and finally of a deep dark-blue color. [α, 35.]—B. Chauvæi. The b. of symptomatic charbon. [α, 35.]—B. coli communis. The Bacterium coli commune. [α, 35.]—B. coli cholerogenus. Of Gilbert and Girode, a virulent variety of B. typhi abdominalis. [α, 34.]—B. der gelben Milch. See BACTERIUM synxanthum.—B. epidermidis. The Leptothrix epidermidis. [α, 35.]—B. Escherichii. Of Saccardo, the Bacterium coli commune. [α, 35.]—B. mesentericus rubiginosus. The Leptothrix epidermidis. [α, 35.]—B. of acne contagiosa. An aerobic, non-liquefying b. found by Drieckerhoff and Grawitz in the pus and scales of horses affected with the disease. [α, 34.]—B. of Affanassiew. An aerobic, non-liquefying, motile spore-forming b., from 0·6 μ to 2·2 μ long, occurring solitary, in pairs, or in short chains in the mucus coughed up in pertussis. [α, 34.]—B. of Babes and Oprescu. An aerobic and facultative anaerobic, non-liquefying, actively motile b., from 0·4 μ to 0·5 μ thick, united in pairs and sometimes growing like the figure 8, obtained from a case of hæmorrhagic septicæmia. [α, 34.]—B. putidus. The B. fluorescens putidus. [α, 35.]—B. septicus putridus. A small, mobile, oval b., having a diameter of from 0·6 μ to 1 μ, and developing easily in all culture media; it rapidly liquefies gelatin, slowly coagulates milk, and produces an odor of trimethylamine, especially marked on potato-cultures. It produces septicæmia with no apparent lesions in man and in animals. [α, 34.]—B. tussis convulsivæ. See B. of Affanassiew.

BACK-KNEE, n. Ba^{2}k'ne. A deformity resulting from a sharp backward bend of the knee near the upper end of the tibia. It is due to a deficiency in growth at the fore part of the epiphyseal line. [α, 34.]

BACTERIUM.—B. allii. Of A. B. Griffins, a b. found in putrefying onions, 5 μ to 7 μ in length, 2·5 μ broad, and producing a peculiar green pigment; when cultivated in peptonized agar-agar, it develops, at the expense of the proteids of the latter, a ptomaine, $C_{10}H_{17}N$, a white, crystalline, deliquescent, monacid base, perhaps identical in composition with hydrocoridine. [B.]—B. Boutronxii. A species sometimes confounded with B. oblongum. It is found in alcoholic infusions. It converts glucose into gluconic acid, and the latter eventually into oxygluconic acid. [α, 35.]—B. glischrogenum. See GLISCHROBACTERIUM.—B. oblongum. Syn.: Micrococcus oblongus. A species found in vinegar. It has the characters of B. aceti, but with a diameter from twice to three times as large. By oxidation it transforms glucose into gluconic acid. [α, 35.]—B. phosphorescens. A species occurring, in the form of thin rods rounded at their apices, in the seas of northern Europe, rendering the water phosphorescent. It grows best on gelatin without liquefying it, but does not develop on potatoes. [α, 35.]—Peach-colored b. Of Lankester, the Beggiatoa roseo-persicina. [α, 35.]

BALEEN.—B.-plates. For PLATE substitute WHALEBONE.

BASAD, adv. Bas'a^{2}d. Toward the basal aspect. [L.]

BASOPHOBIA (Lat.), n. f. Ba^{2}s(ba^{3}s)-o(o^3)-fob(fo^{2}b)'i^2-a^3. From βαίνειν, to walk, and φόβος, fear. Morbid distrust of one's power of walking. THERMIFUGIN, n. Thu5rm-i2f'u2j-i2n. From θερμόν, heat, and fugere, to flee. A commercial name for the antipyretic sodium salt of methyltrihydroxyquinolinecarbonic acid. [B, 270 (α, 14).]

THILANIN, n. Thi2l'a2n-i2n. A yellowish, unctuous substance consisting of lanolin with 3 per cent. of sulphur. [α, 34.]

THIONIC, adj. Thi-o2n'i2k. From θεῖον, sulphur. Having one or more atoms of sulphur for 2 of hydrogen and 6 of oxygen; there are monothionic, dithionic, trithionic, tetrathionic, and pentathionic acids. [B, 93, 270 (α, 14).]

THIORESORCIN, n. Thi''o-re2z-o2rs'i2n. A yellowish-white, inodorous, non-poisonous powder formed by a combination of resorcin and sulphur; used as a local antiseptic. [α, 34.]

TOLYPYRINE, n. To2l-ip'i2r-en. A colorless, crystalline substance of bitter taste, slightly soluble in water; used as an antipyretic. [α, 34.]

TOLYSAL, n. To2l'i2-s'l. Tolypyrine salicylate. [α, 34.]

TONNERET (Fr.), n. Ton-ne2r-a. A gaseous and ferruginous spring near Absie, department of the Deux-Sèvres, France. (α, 14).]

TRAJET.—T's intramusculaires. Venous canals in the tissue of the heart uniting the smaller cardiac veins near their openings into the cavity of the heart. [L. 31.]

TUNICA.—T. vasculosa. A vascular network. [α, 34.]

URIN.—U'verhaltung. For See Retention of urine substitute Retention of urine.

VAGINA.—V. recti. See SHEATH of the rectus abdominis (in Supplement).—V. vasorum cruralium. See Crural SHEATH (in Supplement).

VAGO-GLOSSOPHARYNGEAL, adj. Vag''o-glo2s'''so-fa2r-i2n'je2-'l. Pertaining or relating to the vagus and glossopharyngeal nerves, whose root-fibres arise from a common nucleus. [α, 34.]

VASO-HYPOTONIC, adj. Vas''o-hip-o-to2n'i2k. Pertaining to or causing subnormal vascular tension. [α, 34.]

LIST OF THE

CHIEF INITIAL AND TERMINAL PARTS OF COMPOUND WORDS.

A-. 1. α privative (αν- before a vowel), an inseparable particle, used only as a prefix, with a negative force, like English un-, Latin in-. It is prefixed to noun, adjective, and verb stems, with which it generally forms adjectives. 2. α intensive, increasing the force. 3. α euphonic, in a few words, used merely for phonetic purposes. [α, 21.]

Ab-. 1. Default, failure, as in the word abortion. 2. Extending or drawing away from some point, as in abductor.

Ad- (occurring also as Ac-, Af-, Ag-, Al-, An-, Ap-, Ar-, As-, and At-). Toward, as in adduction.

After-. Subsequent, behind (also, in German, similar, pretended, pseudo-).

Allotrio-. From ἀλλότριος. Belonging to another, foreign.

Amphi-. Gr., ἀμφί. About, on both sides, on all sides, as in amphiarthrosis.

An-. 1. See A-. 2. See Ana-.

Ana-. Gr., ἀνά. 1. Upward, as in anaspadias (sometimes abbreviated, as in anode). 2. Communication, as in anastomosis.

-ane. A termination common to the paraffins or series of saturated hydrocarbons. [B.]

Ante-. 1. Before, forward, as in anteversion. 2. Previously, as in antenatal.

Anti-. Gr., ἀντί. Against.

-ate. Ger., -at. Fr., -ate. 1. A suffix indicative of a salt derived from that one of two related acids which contains the more oxygen, and whose distinctive title according to modern nomenclature ends in -ic. [B.] 2. Indicative of a material resulting from a particular process, as in exudate and distillate.

Auto-. From αὐτός, self. 1. Of itself, natural, not made artificially, not proceeding from without. 2. Reflexive.

Azo-. A prefix used in designating certain chemical compounds (especially those of the aromatic series) in which nitrogen replaces hydrogen; more particularly employed to denote a member of a special class of compounds (azo-compounds), of which 2 nitrogen atoms form a nucleus. [B.]

Cac-, Caco-. From κακός, evil. Indicative of unfavorableness, severity, or malignancy.

Cata-. Gr., κατά. 1. Downward. 2. In accordance with. 3. Against.

-cele. Gr., κήλη. Indicative originally of hernia, made subsequently to apply to other swellings occurring in the parts usually occupied by hernia, and finally applied to some tumors and to certain swellings (such as hæmatocele) that are not true tumors.

Con- (occurring also as Co-, Col-, Com-, and Cor-). Lat., cum. Together.

Dia-. Gr., διά. 1. Through. 2. Made of (as in diachylon).

Dis- (occurring also as Di- and Dif-). A prefix having (1) a separative or disjunctive force, asunder, apart, in different directions; (2) a privative or negative force, like the English un-, reversing or negativing the primitive. [α, 21.]

Dys-. Gr., δυσ-. "Equivalent to our un- or mis-, always with the notion of hard, bad, unlucky, etc." [A, 311.]

Ecto-. From ἐκτός, outside. A prepositional particle indicative of exterior situation or direction. [α, 48.]

End-, Endo-. From ἔνδον, within. A prepositional particle indicating that which is situated or takes place within anything. [α, 21.]

-ene. A termination characteristic of the bivalent series of hydrocarbons or alkylidenes. [B.] Cf. -idene.

Ento-. From ἐντός, within. A prepositional particle indicating interior situation.

-enyl. Designative of the trivalent hydrocarbons (compounded of -ene, the termination appropriated to the bivalent series, and -yl).

Eu-. Gr., εὖ. 1. Indicative of a favorable or agreeable character, as in euthanasia; the opposite of Caco-. 2. Before the name of a subgenus or other subdivision, indicative of the section containing the typical or genuine species. [α, 24.]

Ex- (occurring also as E- and Ef-). Gr., ἐξ. Out of, from. [α, 21.]

Extra-. Without, outside. [α, 48.]

Gamo-. From γάμος, marriage. Union, junction. [α, 24.]

-genesis. From γεννᾶν, to engender. Denoting origin, source, productive, cause, generation. [α, 21.]

-graphy. From γράφειν, to write. A termination signifying writing, description, discourse, science. [α, 21.] Cf. -logy.

Haplo-. From ἁπλόος, single. Simple or single.

Hemi-. Gr., ἡμι-. Lat., semi-. Fr., demi-. Ger., halb-. Half or halved, as in hemicarpous. [α, 24.]

Hetero-. From ἕτερος, the other. Anomalous, diverse, variable. [α, 24.]

Homœo-. From ὅμοιος. Similar, like, equal. [α, 24.]

Hyp-. See Hypo-.

Hyper-. Gr., ὑπέρ. Above, beyond, excessive.

Hypo-. Gr., ὑπό. 1. Under. 2. When followed by the name of an acid or a salt, indicative of its containing a smaller proportion of oxygen than the one denoted by the name without the prefix. 3. Diminution in quantity or degree. [B.]

-iasis. Gr., -ιασις. Indicative of a process or of its result (as in psoriasis, lithiasis, etc.). Cf. -osis.

-ic. Lat., -icus. Fr., -ique. A suffix appended to the name of a chemical which combines in more than one proportion with another body, to indicate the compound that contains the greater proportion of the other body; in the names of acids, indicative of the one containing the greater amount of oxygen. [α, 48.]

-ide. Fr., -yde, -ide. Ger., -yd, -id. Affixed to the name of an element, indicative of the fact that the element is united directly with another element or radicle. [B.]

-idene. Designating the bivalent series of hydrocarbons of the general formula $C_nH_{2n+1}CH=$ (aldehyde radicles), while the termination -ene designates the isomeric hydrocarbons of the general formula $-CH_2-(C_{n-1}H_{2n-1})-CH_2-$. Thus, ethylidene is $CH_3.CH$, while ethylene is CH_2-CH_2. [B.]

-ides, -ideus. From εἶδος, resemblance. See -oid.

-imide. Indicative of a monamide in which one bivalent acid radicle takes the place of two atoms of hydrogen in a molecule of ammonia. [B.]

In- (occurring also as Il-, Im-, and Ir-). 1. In, within. 2. In contact with. 3. An inseparable particle that negatives the word with which it is joined. [α, 21.]

-in. Indicative of compounds containing the radicle $(C_3H_5)'''$ of glyceryl: e. g., monobromhydrin, a body having the composition of glyceryl dihydrate bromide $= C_3H_5.(OH)_2Br$, ethylin, a body having the composition $C_3H_5(OH)_2.C_2H_5$. [B.]

-ine. A termination used in forming (1) adjectives, such as saccharine; (2) the names of the elements bromine, chlorine, fluorine, and iodine; (3) all bodies whose chemical formula may be regarded as that of a basic derivative of ammonia and all the alkaloids, or as a basic derivative analogous to an amine in its method of formation. [B.]

Infra-. Below, under. [α, 21.]

Inter-. Between.

Intra-. 1. Within, as in intracranial. 2. Into. 3. During, as in intra-partum.

-inus. Similarity or augmentation. [α, 24.]

-inyl. Appropriated to the quinquivalent hydrocarbons. [B.]

-ise. See -ize.

-ismus. A condition or process.

Iso-. From ἴσος. Equal.

-ite. Indicative of a salt derived from that one of two related acids which contains the less oxygen and whose name according to modern nomenclature ends in -ous. [B.]

-ites. Gr., -ιτης, a masculine adjective termination. In ascites and tympanites the masculine noun ὕδρωψ, dropsy, is understood.

-itis. Gr., -ῖτις, a feminine adjective termination now conventionally appended to the name of a part to signify inflammation of that part, although it really has no such meaning. In such expressions the feminine noun νόσος, disease, is understood, and νόσος πλευρῖτις simply meant the pleura (or side) disease.

-ize. Gr., -ίζειν. Fr., -iser. Also written -ise. A suffix derived from the Greek which, when added to a noun or an adjective, forms verbs meaning to do or to be the thing expressed by the noun or adjective. [α, 21.]

Leuco-. From λευκός, white. White. [α, 35.]

-logy. From λόγος, understanding. A termination meaning the science of whatever is indicated by the preceding part of the word. [α, 21.]

Macro-. Gr., μακρός. Indicative of extent or magnitude.

Mal-. From malus, bad. See Caco-.

Mega-, Megalo-. From μέγας, large. Indicative of magnitude.

Meio-. Gr., μείων (irreg. comparative of μικρός, small). Indicative of diminution. [α, 35.]

Mela-, Melan-. From μέλας, black. Indicative of blackness.

Meta-. Gr., μετά. Among, with, after, beyond. [α, 48.]

-meter. From μέτρον, a measure. Denoting an instrument for measuring. [α, 21.]

Micro-. Gr., μικρός. Indicative of minuteness.

Mis-. Abnormal, disordered, as in mismenstruation.

Mono-. From μόνος, alone, single. Indicative of singleness or of primacy.

Ob- (occurring also as Oc-, Of-, Og-, and Op-). A prefix meaning to, toward, about, before, in front of, over, on account of, inversely, etc., but often merely intensive. [α, 21.]

-odes. See -oid.

-odynia. From ὀδύνη, pain. Indicative of a painful affection. [α, 21.]

-oid. Gr., -ώδης, -οειδής (from εἶδος, resemblance). Lat., -oides, -odes, -oideus. Indicative of resemblance. [α, 21.]

-ol. 1. A suffix appropriated to alcohol and bodies of analogous composition (carbinol, phenol, glycol, etc.). 2. Indicative of an oily body.

-oma. Gr., -ωμα. Indicative of the material result of a process denoted by a cognate word ending in -osis; of late years applied almost exclusively to tumors.

-one. A suffix appropriated to the ketones (e. g., acetone). [B.]

-onyl. Designative of the septivalent hydrocarbons. Cf. -yl.

Opistho-. From ὄπισθεν, behind. Indicative of posterior direction. [α, 21.]

Ortho-. From ὀρθός, straight. Straight, upright; in chemistry, normal.

-osis. Gr., -ωσις. Properly implying a morbid process, but generally applied indiscriminately to that and to its results.

-ous. Lat., -osus. Fr., -eux. A suffix appended to the name of an element which combines in more than one proportion with another body, to indicate the compound that contains the smaller proportion of the other body. In the names of acids it designates the one which has the smaller amount of oxygen.

Oxy-. From ὀξύς, sharp. A prefix meaning sharp, acute; in chemistry, containing oxygen. [B; α, 21.]

Para-. Gr., παρά-. 1. Alongside of, beside (e. g., parametritis, inflammation by the side of the uterus). 2. To, to the side of. 3. To one side of, by, past (e. g., paraphimosis). 4. Amiss, wrong (e. g., paramenia, abnormal menstruation). 5. Signifying alteration or change (e. g., paralbumin).

-pathy. From πάθος, a condition. Indicative of a condition, especially a morbid condition.

Per-. Indicative of intensity; used with the name of an element which combines with another radicle in several proportions, it indicates the compound which contains the higher proportion of the other radicle. When followed by the name of an acid or salt, it designates an acid or salt which contains more oxygen than the one in the name of which it occurs. [B.]

Peri-. Gr., περί-. In Greek derivatives, around, enveloping. [α, 35.]

Pluri-. From plus, comp. of multus, much. See Poly-.

Poly-. Gr., πολυ-. Indicative of multiplicity.

Pre-. Lat., præ. Indicative of situation before, in front of, or of occurrence in advance of. [α, 21.]

Proto-. From πρῶτος, first. Indicative of originality; before the name of a salt, it indicates that the latter is the first in a series of similar compounds, and usually designates the compound which contains one atom of the element to which it is prefixed. [B.]

Pseudo-. From ψευδής, false. False, spurious.

Pyro-. From πῦρ, fire. Indicative of preparation by means of heat.

Retro-. Indicative of backward situation or tendency.

-rrhagia. From ῥηγνύσθαι, to burst forth. Indicative of an escape, especially of blood.

-rrhœa. Gr., ῥοία, a flow. Indicative of a morbid flux.

-scopy. From σκοπεῖν, to examine. Indicative of examination.

Semi-. Half or apparently half (e. g., semi-amplexicaul, half-clasping, etc.). [α, 35.]

Sesqui-. A prefix indicating that the element or radicle to whose name it is prefixed is contained in a compound in the proportion of three parts to two of the other constituent of the compound. [B.]

Sub- (occurring also as Suc-, Suf-, Sug-, Sum-, Sup-, Sur-, and Sus-). See Hypo-.

Super-, Supra-. See Hyper-.

Syn- (occurring also as Syl-, Sym-, and Sys-). Gr., συν-. Indicative of association.

Thi-, thio-. From θεῖον, brimstone. Indicative of the presence of sulphur.

-une. Designative of the octivalent hydrocarbons. [B.]

Uni-. From unus, one. Indicative of singleness.

-unyl. Designative of the nonivalent hydrocarbons.

-uret. Denoting a combination of simple inflammable bodies with each other or with metals.

-yl. From ὕλη, matter. Indicative of a substance supposed to be the source of another or the primitive form of which other substances are modifications; hence applied to designate many compound radicles in chemistry (e. g., carboxyl). The termination -yl alone generally designates a univalent radicle, while among the hydrocarbons, the affixes -enyl, -inyl, -onyl, and -unyl are employed to denote respectively trivalent, quinquivalent, septivalent, and nonivalent radicles. [B.]

-ylene. A termination applied to certain quadrivalent hydrocarbons derived from corresponding trivalent hydrocarbons with names ending in -yl (e. g., allylene). [B.]

ā, usually āā or (more correctly) ăa. For ana (Gr. ἀνά), contracted āa. Of each (used of ingredients in prescriptions).
Abdom. Abdomen. The abdomen.
Abs. febr. Absente febre. In the absence of fever.
Ad., Add. Adde, seu Addatur. Add, let there be added.
Ad def. an., Ad deliq. Ad defectionem animi, Ad deliquium. To fainting (used in directions for venesection).
Adhib. Adhibendus. To be administered.
Ad lib. Ad libitum. At pleasure.
Admov. Admove, seu Admoveatur, seu Admoveantur. Apply, let there (or let it, or let them) be applied.
Ad pond. om. Ad pondus omnium. To the weight of the whole (used in indicating the proportion of a particular ingredient).
Adst. febre. Adstante febre. Fever being present.
Æg. Æger. seu Ægra. The sick person, the patient.
Ag. Symbol for silver (argentum).
Ah. Simple hypermetropic astigmatism.
Ahm. Mixed astigmatism with predominant hypermetropia.
Altern. dieb. Alternis diebus. On alternate days, every second day.
Altern. hor. Alternis horis. Once every two hours.
Alv. adst. Alvo adstricta. The bowels being constipated.
Am. Simple myopic astigmatism.
Amh. Mixed astigmatism with predominant myopia.

Coch., Cochl. Cochleare. A spoon, a spoonful.
Cochl. ampl. Cochleare amplum. A tablespoonful.
Cochleat. Cochleatim. By spoonfuls.
Cochl. infant. Cochleare infantis. A teaspoonful.
Cochl. mag. Cochleare magnum. A tablespoonful.
Cochl. med., Cochl. mod. Cochleare medium, Cochleare modicum. A dessertspoonful.
Cochl. parv. Cochleare parvum. A teaspoonful.
Coct. Coctio. A boiling.
Col. Cola. Strain.
Col., Colatur. Colaturæ. To the liquor strained.
Collut. Collutorium. A mouth-wash.
Collyr. Collyrium. An eye-wash.
Color. Coloretur, seu Colorentur. Let it (or them) be colored.
Comp. Compositus. Compound.
Concis. Concisus. Cut.
Conf. Confectio. A confection.
Cong. Congius. A gallon.
Cons. Conserva. A conserve.
Cons. Conserva, seu Conservetur. Keep, let it be kept.
Contus. Contusus. Bruised.
Coq. Coque, seu coquatur, seu coquantur. Boil, let it (or them) be boiled.
Coq. ad. med. consump. Coque ad medietatis consumptionem. Boil down to one half.
Coq. in s. a. Coque in sufficiente aqua. Boil in a sufficient quantity of water.
Coq. s. a. Coque secundum artem. Boil properly.
Cort. Cortex. Bark.
Cox. Coxa. The hip.
Cras., Crast. Crastinus. For to-morrow.
Cuj. Cujus. Of which.
Cujusl. Cujuslibet. Of any.
C. v., C. vesp. Cras vespere. To-morrow evening.
Cyath. Cyathus. A glassful, a cupful.
Cyath. theæ. Cyathus theæ. A teacupful.
Cyath. vin. Cyathus vinarius. A wineglassful.

D. Dosis. A dose.
D. Dioptre.
D. D. M. Doctor of dental medicine.
D. D. S. Doctor of dental surgery.
Dearg. pil. Deargententur pilulæ. Let the pills be silvered.
Deaur. pil. Deaurentur pilulæ. Let the pills be gilded.
Deb. spiss. Debita spissitudine. Of the proper consistence.
Dec. Decanta. Pour off.
Dec., Decoct. Decoctum. A decoction.
Decub. Decubitu. On lying down (i. e., at bedtime).
De d. in d. De die in diem. From day to day.
Deglut. Deglutiatur. Let it be swallowed.
Dej. alv. Dejectiones alvinæ. Stools.
Dep. Depuratus. Purified.
Dest. Destilla. Distill.
Det. Detur. Let there (or let it) be given.
Det. in dup., Det. in 2plo. Detur in duplo. Let twice as much be given.
D. et s. Detur et signetur. Let it be given and labeled.
Dieb. alt. Diebus alternis. Every second day.
Dieb. tert. Diebus tertiis. Every third day.
Dig. Digeratur. Let it be digested.
Dil. 1. Diluatur. Let it be diluted. 2. Dilutus. Diluted.
Diluc. Diluculo. At daybreak.
Dim. Dimidium. A half.
D. in p. æq. Divide in partes æquales. Divide into equal parts.
Dir. prop. Directione propria. With a proper direction.
Div. Divide, seu dividatur. Divide, let it be divided.
D. M. D. Doctor of dental medicine.
Donec alv. sol. ft. Donec alvus soluta fuerit. Till the bowels are opened.
D. p. Directione propria. With a proper direction.
Dr. Doctor. Doctor.
Dr., Drach. Drachm. A drachm.
Dur. dolor. Durante dolore. While the pain continues.

Ead. Eadem (plur. of idem). The same substances.
Eburn. Eburneus. Of ivory.

Ejusd. Ejusdem. Of the same.
Elect. Electuarium. An electuary.
Emp. Emplastrum. A plaster.
Emp. vesic. Emplastrum vesicatorium. A blister.
En., Enem. Enema. An enema.
Exhib. Exhibeatur, seu Exhibeantur. Let it (or them) be administered.
Ext. Extende. Spread.
Extr. Extractum. An extract.
Ext. sup. alut. moll. Extende super alutam mollem. Spread on soft leather.

F. Fac, seu fiat, seu fiant. Make, let there be made.
F., Fahr. Fahrenheit scale of temperature.
Fasc. Fasciculus. A bundle.
F. C. S. Fellow of the Chemical Society.
Feb. dur. Febre durante. While the fever continues.
Febr. Febris. Fever.
Fem. intern. Femoribus internis. Toward the inner side of the thighs.
F. F. P. S. Fellow of the Faculty of Physicians and Surgeons (of Glasgow).
F. h. Fiat haustus. Let a draught be made.
Fict. Fictilis. Of earthenware.
Filt. Filtrum. A filter.
Fist. arm. Fistula armata. A clyster apparatus fitted up for use.
F. K. Q. C. P. Fellow of the King and Queen's College of Physicians (in Ireland).
Fl. Fluidus. Fluid.
F. l. a. Fiat lege artis. Let it be made (or done) properly.
Flor. Flores. Flowers.
F. L. S. Fellow of the Linnean Society.
F. m. Fiat mistura. Let a mixture be made.
Fol. Folia. Leaves.
Form. Formula. A formula or prescription.
F. p. Fiat potio. Let a potion be made.
F. pil., F. pil. xij. Fiat pilula, Fiant pilulæ duodecim. Let a pill (or 12 pills) be made.
F. R. C. P. Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians.
F. R. C. S. Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons.
F. R. M. S. Fellow of the Royal Microscopical Society.
Frust. Frustillatim. In small pieces.
F. s. a. Fiat secundum artem. Let it be made (or done) skillfully.
Ft. Foot.
Ft. Fiat, seu fiant. Let there be made.
Ft. emp. Fiat emplastrum. Let a plaster be made.
Ft. mas. div. in pil. xij. Fiat massa dividenda in pilulas duodecim. Make a pill-mass, and divide it into 12 pills.
Ft. pulv. Fiat pulvis. Let a powder be made.
F. venæs., F. vs. Fiat venæsectio. Let the patient be bled.
F. Z. S. Fellow of the Zoological Society.

Garg. Gargarisma. A gargle.
Gel. quav. Gelatina quavis. In any kind of jelly.
G. g. g. Gummi guttæ gambæ. Gamboge.
Gr. Granum. A grain.
Gm. Gramme.
Grad. Gradatim. By degrees.
Grat. Gratus. Pleasant.
Gt., Gtt. Gutta. A drop.
Gum. Gummi. Gum.
Gutt. Gutta, seu guttæ. A drop, or drops.
Guttat. Guttatim. By drops.
Gutt. quibusd. Guttis quibusdam. With a few drops.

Har. Harum. Of these.
Har. pil. sum. ij. Harum pilularum sumantur duæ. Let two of these pills be taken.
Haust. Haustus. A draught.
Haust. purg. Haustus purgans. A purgative draught.
H. d., H. decub. Hora decubitus. At bedtime.
H. D. L. W. In otology, hearing distance, left ear, for a watch.
H. D. R. W. In otology, hearing distance, right ear, for a watch.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

THE metric system of measurement (see under METRIC system) has been legalized in Great Britain since 1864, and in the United States since 1866, but has not been adopted in either country to the extent that its superiority over the current system indicates as eminently desirable.

The customary weights and measures now (1894) authorized for use in the United States are based on the metric system, being all derived theoretically from the "national prototype standards" of the metre and the kilogramme, made of platinum-iridium, deposited in the office of Standard Weights and Measures at Washington. The United States yard is defined as equal to $\frac{36000}{39370}$ metre (the length of the yard being 36 and that of the metre 39·370 inches); the commercial pound, or pound avoirdupois, as $\frac{7000000000}{15432356339}$ kilogramme (the pound being 7,000 and the kilogramme 15432·35639 grains); and the gallon as 3785·434 grammes of distilled water at its maximum density, weighed in vacuo.

The United States inch and grain are practically identical with the British inch and grain, although the United States standards of length and weight, based on the inch and the grain, theoretically depend, through the metric system, on the dimensions of the earth, while the British standards depend on the length of the day. A pendulum vibrating once in a second in vacuo, at sea-level, in the latitude of London is 39·13929 inches in length, and the British standard yard is defined as 36 of such inches. A cubic inch of distilled water at the temperature of 62° Fahr. weighs 252·458 grains, and the British standard pound troy is defined as 5,760 of such grains. There is, however, considerable difference between the values of the units of measurement of volume, the United States gallon corresponding to that of the old British wine measure, with a capacity of 231 cubic inches, while the British standard gallon, or imperial gallon, is defined as the space occupied by 10 pounds avoirdupois (70,000 grains) of distilled water at 62° Fahr., with a capacity of 277·274 inches.

It is to be remembered that, in the convenient decimal notation of the metric system, the decametre (or dekametre), hectometre, and kilometre (having Greek prefixes) are respectively 10, 100, and 1,000 metres, and the decimetre, centimetre, and millimetre (having Latin prefixes) are $\frac{1}{10}$, $\frac{1}{100}$, and $\frac{1}{1000}$ metre, and that the same prefixes used with grămme and litre indicate the same multiples and fractions of those units.

1 kilometre = 1093·6 yards (a little under $\frac{5}{8}$ mile [1 mile = 1,760 yards]); 1 metre = 1·0936 yard (a little over $3\frac{1}{4}$ feet); 1 centimetre = ·3937 inch (a little under $\frac{2}{5}$ inch); 1 millimetre = a little under $\frac{1}{25}$ inch.

WEIGHTS.

The tables of weight in customary pharmaceutical use are modifications of the avoirdupois and troy weights. The apothecary buys his medicines by avoirdupois, but in the United States (as formerly in Great Britain) they are prescribed, compounded, and dispensed by apothecaries' weight, which is substantially troy weight. The latter has, in addition to the pound, the ounce, and the grain, a pennyweight (dwt.) of 24 grains, and avoirdupois has a dram (dr.), the sixteenth part of an ounce (about $27\frac{1}{3}$ grains), while the grain, imported into avoirdupois in the British Pharmacopœia, really belongs to troy weight. Particular care must be taken to avoid confounding the troy ounce of 480 grains with the avoirdupois ounce of $437\frac{1}{2}$ grains. When apothecaries' weight is employed in prescriptions, Roman numerals are used, written after the denomination sign, the letter i when alone or final being ordinarily written j: thus, ℥ j (= 1 ounce), ʒ viij (= 8 drachms), ℈ iiss (= $2\frac{1}{2}$ scruples). For metric and British (avoirdupois) weights Arabic numerals are used, written after the denomination.

	1 oz. =	$437\frac{1}{2}$ =	28·35 "
		1 gr. =	6·48 centigrammes.

1 kilogramme = 2·20462 pounds (a little over $2\frac{1}{5}$ lb.). The pound is a little over $\frac{4}{9}$ or $\frac{9}{20}$ kilogramme.

Compared with imperial measure (British), 1 lb. of distilled water corresponds to $\frac{1}{10}$ gallon, 1 oz. to 1 fl. oz., and 1 gr. to 1·09714 minim.

Compared with apothecaries' fluid measure (United States), 1 pound troy of distilled water corresponds to 12·6207 f ℥, 1 ounce troy to 1·0517 f ℥, 1 drachm to 1·0517 f ʒ, and 1 grain to 1·0517 ♏. As a cubic centimetre of pure water weighs a gramme, the cubic centimetres contained in the pound, ounce, etc., of water correspond to the grammes as given above.

MEASURES OF CAPACITY.

The relation of the units is identical in the United States and British measures of capacity, except that the pint is 16 fluidounces in the former and 20 in the latter. This makes the corresponding lower denominations much more nearly equal than the higher, for, whereas the British gallon and pint are greater than those of the United States by about one fifth, the United States fluidounce, fluidrachm, and minim are greater than the British by about one twenty-fourth.
